PEACE FOR IRELAND FAILS!

LONE ROBBER LOOTS STORE AS 300 SHOP

Policeman Is Shot; Holdup in Loop.

Despite the activity of police raiding squads, who visited the warrens of crooks and seized many suspects, outlaury swept from South Chicago to the loop last night, with the following incidents foremost:

At the height of the Saturday night rush, while S. Lederer & Co.'s six story department store at NInety-first street and Commercial avenue, South Chicago, was jammed with 300 shoppers, a youth, scarcely 18 years old, elbowed his way to the cashier's balcony. He held up two women employés and took between $2,200 and $2,500.

The robbery was committed with such speed and precision that the thief, who had mingled with the crowd and slipped out of a door, had been whirled away in a black automobile before those on the main floor of the store knew what had happened.

Threatens to Kill Them.

The boy sauntered into the store shortly before 9 o'clock. On the steps leading to the cashier's cage on a balcony between the first and second floors he paused to tie a handkerchief mask over the lower part of his face and to draw his revolver. Mrs. Esther O'Connor, 3020 East Ninety-second street, head cashier, and her assistant, Miss Edna Kaiser, 8934 Exchange avenue, whirled on their stools to look into the muzzle.

"Throw up your hands and don't make no noise!" the bandit commanded. "Don't you girls scream or I'll shoot you dead! Get into the corner! I mean business!"

The women complied and the robber stepped to the main cash drawer and yanked it open.

With his pockets bulging he backed to the head of the stairway, turned quickly, jerked off the mask, stuffed the pistol into his pocket, and walked out.

HOLD UP LOOP STORE

At 10 o'clock last night, the hour at which Chief of Detectives Hughes was dispatching his squads to various parts of the city on the regular Saturday roundup of crooks, two men walked into the store of the Globe Trunk company at 341 South Wabash avenue, and held up Max Fellner of 823 East Forty-fifth street, the proprietor, and Max Gronner, 673 North Dearborn street, a clerk.

They were ordered into a closet by one of the men while the other hurriedly gathered up some trunk and valise straps and bound the two men.

The thieves then picked out two expensive traveling bags, filled them full of beaded handbags, leather purses, and other Christmas novelties, valued at $700. They also took between $500 and $600 from the cash register.

CHINAMAN KILLED

A battle was fought with knives and revolvers between three Chinese and two Negro holdup men shortly after 10 o'clock last night in Kung Yick's laundry at 3149 Indiana avenue. As a result one Chinaman is dead, another dying, and at least one of the robbers is believed to have been slashed on the head.

The third Chinaman, who would not give his name, told the story to the police. The bandits entered, he said, and ordered the three orientals to hold up their hands. Instead they grabbed up Malay knives, kept for such an emergency on the table, and fought.

The dead Chinaman has not been identified. Yick was shot in the abdomen.

POLICEMAN SHOT

Patrolman Timothy O'Connor of the Englewood station was shot and seriously wounded at 11:30 o'clock last night in a battle with six or seven holdup men, who had stuck up Marshall Field & Co.'s barn at 7005 Wentworth avenue. The men escaped in an automobile with about $5,000 in cash, representing the collections of delivery drivers during the day.

O'Connor was assigned to guard the barn during the Christmas rush and was standing at the rear of the barn when the robbers rushed into the office. He ran out as they leaped into the car with their loot and opened fire on them. A fusillade of bullets came from the bandit car and he fell wounded.

GIRL HERE WANTS CONVICT FREED AS YULE GIFT

"I Never Saw Him, but Know He's Honest."

Tradition wears a snowy beard, romance is always young.—Mary Garvin.

Gov. Henry J. Allen of Kansas sat in his office in Topeka yesterday and pondered whether he should let law and tradition rule or yield to the optimism of youth and romance. Before him was a letter.

"I have never seen this man," it read, "but I want you to send him to me for a Christmas present. I am willing to stake my life he will make good if you let him out. I have corresponded with him for eight months."

The man to whom the letter referred is Robert Sloan, serving a sentence in the Kansas state prison for highway robbery.

Girl Tells Her Story.

Gov. Allen refused to disclose the name of the girl who wrote the letter. He did, however, say that it came from 8144 Kimbark avenue, Chicago. A reporter journeyed to that address last night. He was informed the girl is Miss Ellen White, living at a south side club for girls.

"No, I have never seen Robert Sloan—but I've seen his picture," said Miss White, who is 21 and pretty. "My name appeared in a Denver paper. He wrote to a friend of mine—then to me. His letters convinced me he needed a friend. I am positive he is honest, and if given a chance will make good."

"Are you in love with him?"

"As a sister would be."

"And is he in love with you?"

"As a brother should be."

"You're an Angel.'

Following is a letter Miss White received from Sloan yesterday:

"Dearest Girl: Received your letter and was so pleased. Little girl, you were fooling when you said you were not an angel. You little dear, I do call you endearing names, but you just wait. When your big boy does get out he will take care of you. Well, I will close with a world of love to my sister from her big brother."

"My mother gets as many letters as I do and she wants him home with us just as much as I do," said Miss White.

Gov. Allen made no announcement regarding his decision.

CHANGES SCHOOLS TO AID COURTIN'; THEY'RE ENGAGED

When Harvey D. Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Jones of Hyde Park, left his home to attend the University of Illinois at Champaign, it seemed a mighty long time to him between hurried visits to Oak Park.

MISS MARGARET MAE SMALE.
[Copyright: Matzene.]

There was a reason for the visits—Miss Harriet Mae Smale daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Smale of 124 South Taylor avenue. Miss Smale attended Oak Park High school, and it was during an interhigh school meet that she first had met Mr. Jones.

Mr. Jones finally decided his trip was too long and began studying at the University of Chicago. Even then the distance was considerable, so to make a long story and a long journey shorter——

Mr. and Mrs. Smale yesterday announced the engagement of their daughter to Mr. Jones. No date has been set for the wedding.

Alexander J. Poindexter's Christmas Romance

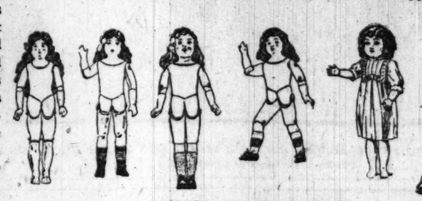
(ILLUSTRATED.)

BY JOHN T. McCUTCHEON.

CHAPTER I.

ALEXANDER J. POINDEXTER.

Alexander J. Poindexter had never married. The only girl he ever loved had moved to another town. As the Christmas season approached and he saw the happy faces of children on the streets and in the great shops, he regretted that he was all alone. There was no one to do his Christmas shopping for him. He must do it himself.



THE HAPPY FACES OF CHILDREN.

"Dog gone it," he ejaculated, with a slight American accent.

Such is our hero, of whom you shall hear more ere our story ends.

SHE MOVED TO ANOTHER TOWN.

CHAPTER II.

Alexander J. Poindexter was considered in all respects, save that indicated in a previous chapter, to be a man favored by fortune.

Handsome as a Greek god he was, also rich as Croesus and with the disposition of an angel. He had no past to speak of. His ancestors were earls on both sides and other prominent people. He was about the right age.

Low gold finish, $40 value.

HE GLANCED AT HIS WRIST WATCH.

As to fear, he did not know the meaning of the word. He thought it meant something round like a ball. Often he intended to look it up, but usually was prevented by important dinner engagements.

HIS HANDSOME TOWN CAR.

In the war he slew 1,000 single-handed. Had he used both, the casualty lists would have been run serially.

VAST AND BUSY THRONGS.

Bursting with red corpuscles, he was a fine type of red-blooded manhood, and as he stood before his mirror he was a scene of elegance and beauty.

ALTHOUGH SHE HAD CHANGED.

A moment later he leaped into the beautiful ——, by many considered the best automobile made, and was whisked down to the great emporiums of trade.

One by one he visited all the shops that advertise in this paper and had looked at thousands of dollars' worth of merchandise and what not.

Solid gold and hand wrought platinum rings, set with genuine steel blue diamonds, $100 value, $50

A BEAUTIFUL SOLITAIRE RING.

He then went into a fashionable hardware store and bought a beautiful solitaire ring.

"Ere eventide this shall adorn the hand of some fair maiden!" he exclaimed.

CHAPTER III.

Alexander J. Poindexter swept the vast and busy throngs with an imperious eye.

At that moment a beautiful girl appeared. Her face was vaguely familiar. Although she had changed, he recognized her.

Raising his silk hat, he bowed low.

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

"Isn't this Miss Guinevere W. Montague?" he said in a low, musical voice. Her eyes lighted up with a look of instant recognition.

"Alexander J. Poindexter!" she exclaimed, for it was she. "I thought you had gone east or something."

STANDING BEFORE HIS MIRROR.

Her eyes dropped in maidenly confusion before his ardent glance.

"After all these years, haven't you something else to say to me?" he asked.

"Have you done your Christmas shopping?" she asked after a long pause.

"Only this," he exclaimed, showing her the solitaire, and instantly they were wrapped in close embrace. There is little more to tell.

FOUR VIEWS OF ALEXANDER.

They were married, and after the ceremony he handed her a long list.

"Now that you are my wife, I wish you'd go down and tend to this Christmas shopping."

"Yes," she whispered, and he breathed a sigh of relief.

"Gosh!" said he. "Thank goodness that's off my mind."

THE END.

THIRTEEN DROWN WHEN U. S. LAUNCH SINKS IN RIVER

Augusta, Ky., Dec. 18.—Thirteen persons were drowned in the Ohio river when the United States steam launch Margaret sprang a leak and sank three miles below Augusta tonight.

Among the drowned were the wife and two children of Maj. H. B. Pittman, in charge of the government dam at Chilo, O.

The launch was in sight of Augusta when the engineer discovered a leak. He started the pumps to working, but within five minutes the boat went under.

Five Die in Kanawha.

Charleston, W. Va., Dec. 18.—The number of dead as a result of the Kanawha river ferry boat accident today was set at five by county officials tonight. After checking the boat's occupants it was announced that when the ferry capsized the craft was carrying sixteen passengers. Eleven have been accounted for.

Negro Holds Up Evanston Woman, 2 Wilmette Girls

Mrs. Jane Tindall, a resident at one of the Northwestern university co-ed dormitories at 1943 Orrington avenue, Evanston, was held up by a Negro last night at Foster street and Orrington avenue and robbed of her handbag containing $26 and a $50 Liberty bond. The robber is believed to have been the same Negro who attempted to hold up Misses Helen and Edna Essentrott, sisters, of 1404 Elwood avenue, Wilmette, earlier in the day in West Railroad avenue, Evanston.

Greek Ends Life at U. S. Legation to Die on U.S. Soil

ATHENS, Dec. 18.—Alex Markakis, a naturalized American, committed suicide today at the front door of the American legation. A note found nearby said: "I want to die on American soil." Markakis served with the American expeditionary forces in France. He was wounded and gassed seven times.

Mystery Woman Stricken by Memory Loss in Loop

A woman of apparent wealth, whose wedding ring bore the inscription, "Jonas to Georgiana," and whose fur coat had the initials, G. K. F., within it, was the victim of an attack of aphasia—a lapse of memory—in the loop last night, in the opinion of Dr. Karl Meyer, head of the county hospital, where she was taken.

"I am suffering from some form of aphasia," she told Policeman W. J. King at Randolph and State streets, asking his aid. "I don't know where I am or where I am going."

She said she believed she had been struck on the head in some manner. A large bump and bruises were found behind her left ear. She was richly dressed.

FITZMORRIS IS PICKED TO FIX JANITORS' PAY

Both Sides Agree on Chief; No Strike.

Chief of Police Fitzmorris will arbitrate all differences between the janitors and the flat owners. There will be no strike.

President William Quesse of the Chicago Flat Janitors' union and James J. Carroll, head of the renting division of the Chicago Real Estate board, agreed on Chief Fitzmorris yesterday. The three will constitute the board, which will decide all the differences which for a time threatened to cause a walkout on Jan. 1 of union janitors in Chicago.

President Quesse will present the janitors' claims and Mr. Carroll the views of the owners.

Chief Fitzmorris was selected by them after more than a dozen prominent Chicagoans had been considered and rejected by one side or the other.

Suggests Chief Fitzmorris.

"I believe Chief Fitzmorris would be a fair, judicious arbiter," suggested Mr. Carroll.

"So do I," said Mr. Quesse.

The chief was reached by telephone. He suggested that he is a pretty busy man these days, but——

Then he accepted and both sides agreed to accept as final his decision on all mooted points.

The agreement, which means that the steam pipes will stay hot, that the hallways will be swept, and the ashes carried out, was reached following a break between the union and owners' representatives Friday night, when Mr. Quesse withdrew.

Quesse in Conciliatory Mood.

He threatened to call a strike against one firm of real estate agents managing more than 1,000 flat buildings, but when he met Mr. Carroll yesterday he was in a conciliatory mood.

"The break was not serious," said Mr. Carroll. "President Quesse wanted some information immediately which we could not accurately supply without reference to records. He became a bit impatient and withdrew. We did not consider it a final withdrawal, nor do I believe he did. At any rate, we've agreed upon Chief Fitzmorris. I have full faith in him and look for a fair adjustment of all differences."

Mr. Quesse expressed similar views.

Start Work Tomorrow.

First meetings will be held tomorrow. Mr. Carroll and Mr. Quesse were chosen as the representatives of the two parties to the controversy at a meeting of a committee of five janitors and five employers at the real estate board rooms last Friday. It was then agreed that they would select a third member to sit with them as a board of arbitration with full authority to decide upon what terms the janitors are to work for the year commencing Jan. 1, 1921.

See page 4 for story of bombing of flat building after payment of $770 is alleged to have been refused; also picture of the arbitrators.

MAKE BANDITS LET ME BE, VILLA TO GEN. OBREGON

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Gen. Francisco Villa, once the "terror of the north" of Mexico and rebel leader for years, but who made his peace with the De La Huerta government last summer and retired to a large estate at Canutillo, in Durango, which was given him by the government, has complained to President Obregon that bandits robbed him of 200 head of horses. In his complaint Villa asks for more adequate protection from marauding bands, and at the same time protests his loyalty to the Mexican government.

Advices received here today say Villa reported the bandits drove off the horses, and, thinking that their crime was undiscovered, returned for more livestock, "but they died on the way."

Villa made his protest with the naïve conclusion quoted above by telegraph, and the Mexican officials gave it out for publication as an indication of the pacification of the country.

BROKE 3 WEEKS, JOBLESS, FINDS $14, GIVES IT UP

Diogenes might have ended his quest for an honest man yesterday had he been in the Waukegan police station when a shabbily dressed man entered and slapped a pocketbook down on the sergeant's desk.

"I found it," the man said.

"What's in it?" queried the desk sergeant.

The man said he had not opened it. It was found to contain $14 and a gold ring and it had been lost by Miss Jessie Ingalls.

"I am suffering from some form of aphasia," she told Policeman W. J. King at Randolph and State streets, asking his aid. "I don't know where I am or where I am going."

She said she believed she had been struck on the head in some manner. A large bump and bruises were found behind her left ear. She was richly dressed.

J. W. Weimers of Lake Bluff was the finder. For three weeks he had walked the streets of north shore cities hunting for a job, dead broke.

"If you hear of a job let me know," he said as he left the station.

$100,000 to Help Kin of Slain Police

Fifty Chicago business men have placed a fund of $100,000 at the disposal of the city to provide for the widows and children of policemen killed in line of duty.

The fund is to be administered under direct supervision of Charles G. Dawes, president of the Central Trust company, one of the contributors. Mayor Thompson and another contributor will compose the executive committee in general control of the fund.

One of the few orders which the mayor gave Chief Fitzmorris when the latter took office was to devise a plan for the aid of the dependents of policemen. The burnished stars of fifty-seven patrolmen and detectives, shot to death by crooks, now hang in the chief's outer office, mute evidence of the need of such a fund.

Keep Names Secret.

"The fifty business men eagerly donated $2,000 each for the fund," Chief Fitzmorris said. "They insisted that I keep their names secret.

"D. F. Kelly, general manager of Mandel Brothers, suggested that the $100,000 fund be underwritten by the Industrial club to make it a permanent proposition, but the suggestion was rejected, as the mayor believes the legislature should provide permanent insurance for policemen.

"It will be a great thing for members of the department to know when they go into danger that their dependents will be taken care of. It will add materially to the morale of the department."

Conlon's Widow to Benefit.

The first case to be considered by Gen. Dawes, Mayor Thompson, and the other member of the executive committee yet to be selected by Gen. Dawes will be that of Patrolman Charles R. Conlon of 1525 Ardmore avenue, who was killed while fighting robbers during the attempted holdup of the Ashland Block pharmacy on Thursday night. His widow, Mrs. Anna Conlon, his two daughters, Mary and Elizabeth, and his son John will be the beneficiaries of the first award.

The amount of the award will be fixed by the executive committee and will vary with the needs of the dependents. It will be in addition to the life pension of $75 a month, with $10 additional for each child under the age of 18, paid to the widow by the city.

After the award has been fixed Gen. Dawes will notify each of the forty-nine other contributors of the amount of their assessment which, when paid, will be deducted from the $2,000 pledged by each.

Rosenwald Steady Giver.

Heretofore Julius Rosenwald has been the principal contributor to funds for the relief of dependents of policemen. Contributions of $1,000 from this philanthropist, together with funds raised by THE TRIBUNE and other newspapers, in several cases have kept the wolf from the door of the widows and orphans of policemen.

The $100,000 fund renders the proposed tag day to create a fund for this purpose unnecessary and the plan to conduct such a tag day in January has been dropped, Chief Fitzmorris announced.

"Hearings before the Hull committee of the legislature on the matter of pensions for policemen showed that each policeman has an average of at least three dependents," the chief said.

"Invariably the widow is left with many bills to meet, and in most cases she has a partly paid for home on her hands. This fund will solve those difficulties, though legislation providing for some permanent form of insurance must be the ultimate solution."

It is probable the identity of the fund contributors will not remain secret long, as Chief Fitzmorris plans to see that every policeman is sent a letter apprising him of the names of his fifty benefactors.

FRIEND BEATS MITCHELL JR. TO MARITAL ALTAR

The prospect of a long engagement didn't appeal to David D. Davis Jr., 933 Buena avenue, and Miss Ethel E. Price, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. G. A. Price, 1476 Belle Plaine avenue, so they went down to the county building, obtained a license and got married. By the time their parents heard of it they were on their way to Cleveland.

"It certainly was a surprise to us," Mrs. Price said last night. "The children have been friends for a long time, but we had no idea they were to be married so soon. I suppose they just made up their minds and did it."

Young Davis, who is a friend of John J. Mitchell Jr., whose engagement to Miss Lolita Armour was announced yesterday, was a sailor during the war.

Troubled Conscience Makes a New Record

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 18. — A troubled conscience today brought a typewritten annonymous note to the receiver of taxes with $2,250 in cash.

"For back personal taxes improperly made out, due the city and state," the note read.

This is the equivalent of taxes at 4 mills on an excess of $500,000 of personal property.

No conscience has ever before been so troubled as to pay that amount owed the city without the prospects of detection.

MESSAGE BARS WAY TO TRUCE, PREMIER SAYS

Lords Pass Home Rule Bill.

All chances for a truce in Ireland seem to have disappeared. Prime Minister Lloyd George has broken off the unofficial negotiations for an armistice following a demand that he deal with Eamonn de Valera.

At the same time Gen. Macready has issued orders for the placing in effect of martial law in south Ireland.

Dispatches from Ireland tell of outbreaks there.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Dec. 15.—Prospects of peace or a truce between England and Ireland before Christmas fell very low today on receipt of a telegram from Father O'Flanagan to Prime Minister Lloyd Geodge, which said:

"While sending its messages of peace and good will to the Irish people the British government intensifies its fiendish attacks upon their lives, liberties, and property.

"How hollow your fair words sound between accounts of the Cork fire and the murder of Canon Magner. If you really wish peace, allow the constitution adopted by the Irish people at the last election to perform its legitimate functions and acts of violence will cease.

"Then arrange the terms of a treaty by direct negotiations with Eamon de Valera, president of the Irish nation. This is the only possible road to reconciliation."

Lloyd George Replies.

Mr. Lloyd George replied:

"I had hoped that with moderation and common sense on both sides it would be possible to reach some understanding which would end strife in Ireland.

"You now imply that in your judgment the only road to peace lies in recognition of the Irish republic and negotiations for a treaty with some one you designate as Ireland's official head and president.

"I have never failed to make it clear that there is no possibility of any settlement so long as the Sinn Fein demands an Irish republic and, though I am willing to explore every avenue toward an honorable, constitutional settlement, there is no road toward peace so long as the Sinn Fein tries to compel a settlement by assassination and violence.

Expresses Britain's Regret.

"The only way to peace will appear when leaders of the Sinn Fein recognize these fundamental facts. Their present policy only leads Ireland nearer ruin. I regret that you would close the doors of a council of good will that was invoked in the beginning of this correspondence."

HOSTILITIES INCREASE

DUBLIN, Dec. 18.—Intensified warfare marked the close of an eventful week in Ireland. There were extensive raids and wholesale arrests by the police and military, and increased activity of the Irish republican army in attacking the crown forces.

"Martial law circular No. 1," issued over the signature of Gen. Sir Nevil Macready today says that all the forces of the crown may rest assured that so long as, in trying to restore order they do not exceed what is reasonably necessary for the purpose, they will have full approval and support. But all are warned against the commission of offenses against the person or property of any resident, the breaking into any house in search of plunder, or the molesting of a sentry protecting a person or property.

"Any person subject to military or martial law committing any of these offenses will be liable to court-martial and sentence of death."

PASS HOME RULE BILL.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—Only royal assent, which probably will be affixed today, stands between Ireland and home rule. The house of lords climbed down from its more drastic amendments last night, yielding to the crack of the government's whip.

The government announced today that the house of lords' amendments to the home rule bill for Ireland were acceptable to the ministry and the house of commons.

The final obstacle to complete agreement on the measure was removed by this acceptance of the upper chamber's proposal concerning the Irish council.

This council will not be elected by proportional representation, and the

FAKE BANKER TO BE BROUGHT BACK IN ROBBERY CASE

Just when Edward Therek, alias Fairchild, was congratulating himself on escaping further punishment for past sins, he was notified he would have to stand trial for the robbery of the Central Manufacturing bank here in May, 1916. Detective Sergeant Patrick Loftis left last night for San Francisco to get Therek.

Therek obtained a position in the Chicago bank by writing his own references. A few nights after obtaining the position he slugged a watchman and escaped with $1,500.

He attempted to repeat the experiment in San Francisco and was arrested there Aug. 19, 1916. Then it was learned he was wanted for a $32,000 bank robbery in Boston and a jewelry store robbery in Philadelphia. He was taken back to Boston, tried, convicted, and sent to Fort Leavenworth. He was released a month ago and taken back to San Francisco for trial there, but it was discovered that all the witnesses had died.

lord lieutenant will retain the privilege of naming the president of the council.

Means Final Offer.

In the event that either north or south Ireland refuses to set up a parliament, the executive will not renew his offer to Ireland unless within two years from such refusal both houses of parliament have decide to ask for it.

This amendment to the lords' proposal extends the time limit to June 1, 1924, and was passed in commons by a vote of 175 to 14.

Mr. Lloyd George, speaking concerning the time limit amendment, said that to accept the lords' proposal for two years was placing the whole chance of the experiment being brought into operation upon the possibility of the government being able to succeed at the first go.

Not Sure of Reception.

While he was not altogether confident that when the government made the offer to the southern area of Ireland in the next few months it would be accepted, the prime minister asserted he thought it was a good thing to try.

It would be a means of beginning to rally the population against the forces of disorder, he said. Even if the government got only 25 or 30 per cent to commit themselves to constitutional methods, Mr. Lloyd George went on, it would be of advantage.

The prime minister declared Sir Hamar Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland, had achieved remarkable success in the direction of restoring order in Ireland, and there was a greater desire to try the experiment of constitutionalism in Ireland again.

The secret service is inclined to doubt reports that "President" De Valera will leave America for England.

Policeman Is Murdered.

DUBLIN, Dec. 18.—Armed men in County Cavan last night attacked a military lorry filled with constables. Constable Shannon was instantly killed and a companion injured. Masked raiders also shot another constable in his front yard. Four arrests were made by crown forces.

Sinn Feiners killed a police inspector on the streets here tonight. Meanwhile the Official Summary, or weekly paper of the crown forces, says this week has been a "truce; indeed, propaganda," and it proceeds to describe the situation as Ireland "under the heel of a murder gang which the police must kill or be killed by."

This is how Ireland enters Christmas week, without any news from Cork in regard to the progress of Gen. Strickland's inquiry. But by many Cork refugees here the opinion is freely expressed that if witnesses are protected Gen. Strickland will get ample evidence, and if he decidees upon the evidence there will be no doubt as to who burned Cork.

Find Bomb in Dublin.

DUBLIN, Dec. 18.—A large bomb was picked up in Merrion square yesterday.

Revolvers, ammunition, gun powder, and eighty-eight sticks of gelignite were captured in a combined police and military raid on a rebel ammunition store at Templemore today.

Cork Inquiry On.

CORK, Dec. 18.—The military inquiry into the Cork fires and looting opened at the military barracks today. It was strictly private, witnesses being admitted only one by one.

Maurice Healy had been instructed by the chamber of commerce and the Employers' federation to represent them at the inquiry, but was informed last night that no lawyers would be admitted. In consequence these two bodies have declined to give assistance to the court.

Battle in Wexford.

WEXFORD, Ireland, Dec. 18.—The barracks at Foulkesmill, County Wexford, was attacked early this morning with bombs and rifle fire by seventy men who arrived in three motor cars. A twenty-five minute battle resulted. The police occupying the barracks finally repulsed the raiders, who lost one motor car and a quantity of arms. The police, according to the authorities, sustained no casualties.

Clash in County Clare.

DUBLIN, Dec. 18.—A lorry with military and police was ambushed this morning a mile from Ennistimon, County Clare. Fierce fighting ensued, lasting several hours. Four soldiers and two policemen were wounded.

"President" in Seclusion.

New York, Dec. 18.—Eamonn de Valera, "president of the Irish republic," will come out of retirement Christmas day in New York City, according to his secretary, Harry Boland, who recently denied reports that De Valera had left for Great Britain.

Mr. Boland asserted that the Sinn Fein leader, who he previously announced had been resting in seclusion for several days after a slight illness, would leave for Spokane, Wash., the day after Christmas to resume his speaking tour.

BICKEL BARES 50 ROBBERIES BY HEAVEY'S GANG

"Outside Man" at Holdup in Loop Confesses.

William Bickel, 22 years old, arrested Friday in connection with the atempted holdup of the Ashland Block Pharmacy Thursday night, in which Thomas Heavey, bandit, and Charles R. Conlon, a policeman, were killed, last night made a full confession to Lieut. William Shoemaker.

Bickel declared the Heavey gang consisted of twelve men. They are responsible, he said, for more than half a hundred burglaries, stickups, and other crimes in the last year. Bickel admitted being the "outside man" at the Ashland block holdup. After the shooting he went home and went to sleep, he said.

Heavey, he declared, was leader of the band and planned the robberies. They took part in two holdups Thursday night before attempting to rob the drug store, according to his story.

Names Other Members of Gang.

Bickel named the other members of the gang, according to the police, and a search for them was immediately started.

The two other men implicated in the Ashland robbery, he said, were Thomas J. Fitzpatrick, 1328 Magnolia street, New Orleans, La., and John Godi, 636 Donplin street, New Orleans. Both are believed still to be in Chicago, although the Louisiana authorities have been notified. Chief of Detectives Hughes was confident of their arrest shortly.

Bickel was taken under armed guard for a tour of the city at midnight. He offered to point out numerous places where crimes committed by the gang have occurred.

Over twenty suspects are being held at the detective bureau as a result of the gang's activities.

Crime Laid to Lack of Jobs.

Criminals made an early start in their week-end activities with the shooting of three men, the slugging of a policeman, and a long list of robberies and holdups early yesterday.

EDWARD CLOHESSY.

The police believe the lash of colder weather and the increasing numbers of unemployed are responsible in a measure for the renewed activities of highwaymen.

Patrolman Edward Clohessy was slugged and seriously injured by three Negroes whom he stopped in East Forty-first street. The Negroes ran and Clohessy fired as they fled. He was unconscious when a riot call brought the police.

William Hobson, a druggist of Le Claire, Iowa, told the police he had been shot in a south side cabaret.

Shot in Battle With Police.

Vincent Riley, 1545 North La Salle street, was shot and probably fatally wounded when a gang of which he was a member engaged in a revolver fight with two policemen who surprised them attempting to slug David Wolfson, driver of a Yellow cab, at Larrabee street and North avenue.

Two of Riley's companions, William Grimm, 3546 North Whipple street, and Joseph Gringer, 1305 Larrabee street, were arrested.

The third shooting occurred at the Chicago & Alton railroad yards. Twenty-sixth street and Western avenue, when William Mensen, 2128 South Albany avenue, a night watchman, was wounded in the head by three car thieves. The bandits escaped with $2,000 worth of talking machines.

Max Bernstein, a jeweler at 5 South Wabash avenue, received a telegram from his son, Alvin, yesterday, that train thieves had stolen $20,000 worth of jewels from him while he was asleep en route to Columbus, O., Friday night. Police believe the thieves followed Bernstein to the train.

Poland Seeks to Buy Big Supply of Cotton in U. S.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—Poland is seeking to buy between 300,000 and 400,000 bales of American cotton, according to information given today by Prince Casmir Lubormiski, the Polish minister, to Senator Hitchcock, Democrat, of Nebraska.

Jewelers to Hire Special Guards.

New York, Dec. 18.—New York's epidemic of criminal activities was marked today by daring holdups but no murders.

Robbers looted a Brooklyn store of $3,000 in dry goods, bandits got $12,000 cash and gems from two jewelry messengers.

Want Enright Removed.

Demands that Police Commissioner Enright "must go" were made in newspaper headlines and editorials.

The police department reported "that beginning tonight 300 more patrolmen are added to the daily force by granting each policeman fewer hours off duty."

The jewelers asked Police Commissioner Enright for more detectives on Madison and Fifth avenues from Thirty-second street to Central park. They also announced that each jewelry shop would employ an ex-service man as an armed guard.

The Military Order of the World War, made up of former officers, called a meeting for Monday, and commercial organizations also will discuss the prevalence of crime.

Judges Ask for Facts.

Judges of the city asked the mayor in a letter to furnish them with a list of dangerous criminals and those on second bail so they might corral them for speedy trials. District Attorney Swann issued a statement asking judges to fix high bail in criminal cases, suggesting $10,000 as a minimum.

The police heard that Lucille Emma Brooks, arrested after the killing of Police Lieutenant Horton in a pistol fight with taxicab bandits, was the wife of a millionaire oil man of Chicago, said to be ill in a western sanitarium.

"No, no. Christmas day is my birthday; don't send me out to the bridewell that long, honey," said Lulu Anderson after her plea had led Judge Bernard P. Barasa to reduce a sentence of six months in the house of correction for intoxication. So the judge told her if she is all right by Dec. 22 he will discharge her.

SLAYER OF PRIEST "MAD FROM DRINK!" CROWN FORCES HEAR

CORK, Dec. 18.—It was brought out by an auxiliary policeman at the military court which is holding an inquiry into the shooting of Canon Magner and Timothy Crowley at Dunmanway that Cadet Harte, who fired the shots, had been drinking steadily and that he was "absolutely mad" at the time.

The auxiliary policeman, who was in the car of which Harte was in charge, said Harte had stopped the car, got out, and accosted Crowley. After searching the man's pockets, the witness said, Harte assaulted him and then shot and killed him.

Harte next went to the priest. Meanwhile two other cadets stepped out of the car but were waved away by Harte, who is declared to have snatched the priest's hat from his head and made him kneel. Then he fired twice, killing the clergyman, after which he went through Canon Magner's pockets and scattered the contents on the road. Harte finally was prevailed upon by the district inspector to reënter the car.

Other auxiliaries who were in the party led by Cadet Harte corroborated this testimony. The result of the inquiry is to be announced later.

LURING CHEAP ALIEN LABOR TO U. S., CHARGE

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Charges were made public here today that several corporations that hire great numbers of poorly paid workmen have entered into an agreement with the Overseas Dispatch, 191 Greenwich street, to pay $2,500 in return for which the Overseas Dispatch promises to deliver at the plants immigrants from central, eastern, and southern Europe.

A Mr. Engel of the Overseas Despatch is quoted as admitting that and naming two corporations as being among those in the scheme.

"The pamphlets or leaflets to be distributed at the different ports of embarkation," he is quoted as saying, "do not, as far as is known, give the names of the contracting firms. They mention the advantages of settling in that community or village which usually has the contracting firm as its sole employing industry."

CEMENT THEFTS CAUSE INQUIRY; 6 JOBS IN PERIL

City Employes Facing Dismissal.

Six employés of the board of local improvements are facing dismissal as a result of a month's investigation of the disappearance of hundreds of bags of cement belonging to the city.

Michael J. Faherty, president of the board, refused to discuss his investigation except to admit that he has evidence involving cement testers, sidewalk and paving inspectors, warehousemen, and contractors in the loss of the cement.

Inspectors Stand Pat.

Forty inspectors were called on the carpet Thursday and asked to explain the shortage of cement delivered to certain jobs recently, but, according to a member of the board, "the inspectors hung together and told similar stories."

Petty jealousies among contractors gave Mr. Faherty his first line on the loss of cement which is now worth $4.40 a barrel. One contractor put his charges in the form of an affidavit and this caused others to tell what they knew.

The cement theives are said to follow city trucks delivering cement with a second truck, on which from a dozen to twenty bags of the cement on the first truck is loaded and carted away.

Foremen Give Receipts.

As the cement is receipted for by the foremen in charge of the job, it is difficult to place the responsibility for the loss of the cement.

"I am handicapped by the lack of a method of determining whether cement specifications have been lived up to after pavements or sidewalks are laid," Mr. Faherty said. "Experts tell me that they cannot determine definitely whether the amount of cement called for in the specifications has actually been used."

Canadian Official Tells of Enormous Wheat Crop

The 1920 wheat crop of Canada, if placed in sacks and the sacks laid end to end, would form a line twice around the earth at the equator, De Witt Foster, former member of the dominion parliament, declared in an address before the University club of Evanston last night. Mr. Foster is superintendent of resources of the Canadian National railways. He said the new peaks of production of 1920 likely will be surpassed next year. He gave the total yield of wheat for 1920 at 289,498,000 bushels, compared with 193,260,400 in 1919.

Gas Tastes Bad; Would-Be Suicide Yells "Murder"

An excited voice on the telephone told Warren avenue police that a man at 3701 West North avenue was yelling "murder, robbers, police." Policemen John Lavin and Hugh McNeil found Wesley Greenwood, 68 years old, at the address, shouting lustily.

"What's wrong?" Lavin asked.

"I tried to commit suicide by placing a tube from the gas heater in my mouth. The gas tasted terrible and made me sick," said Greenwood.

Rumely and 2 Found Guilty on 2 of 5 Counts; Face the 'Pen

New York, Dec. 18.—Dr. Edward A. Rumely, former publisher of the New York Evening Mail, and S. Walter Kaufman and Norvin Lindheim, his co-defendants, were acquitted by a jury here today on three counts of an indictment charging conspiracy to withhold from the government knowledge of the alleged German ownership of the paper and found guilty on two counts.

The jury made a strong recommendation of mercy for the defendants, whose bail was continued. The court adjourned until Monday, when the men will be senteneced. They will appeal.

Not "German Owned."

The finding of not guilty was on counts alleging that the German government owned actual shares of the newspaper's stock, while the verdict of guilty was on that part of the indictment which alleged the defendants had borrowed money from German sources with which to conduct the paper.

The maximum penalty for violation of section 37 of the United States criminal code, with which the defendants were charged, is two years' imprisonment, a fine of $10,000, or both.

Isaac Straus Indicted.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—An indictment charging Isaac Straus of New York with violation of the trading with the enemy act was returned today by a grand jury in the District of Columbia Supreme court. RUSH TARIFF AND WAR FINANCE ACT TO AID FARMERS

House Makes Two Moves for Relief in Day.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—The house today made a twofold effort to relieve the financial difficulties of the American farmers. It adopted the senate resolutions reviving the war finance corporation and its committee on ways and means whipped into shape an emergency tariff bill applying to agricultural products, that fixed rates of duties higher than those of the Payne-Aldrich law.

The measure reviving the war finance corporation, somewhat amended in the form that it passed the senate, was approved by a vote of 212 to 61.

The house struck out section 2 of the senate resolution, stating the opinion of congress that federal reserve banks should allow liberal credits to farmers. The vote was 132 in favor to 20 against on the motion to strike out.

McFadden Opposes Measure.

The final vote came after five hours of debate. Chairman McFadden of the banking committee, leading the opposition. He characterized it as class legislation which would lead to inflation, and charged that its proponents had deluded the farmers into believing it would help them.

Representative Mann, Republican, Illinois, supporting the bill, said he did not see how it could do harm, and probably would do some good. Representative Mondell, Wyoming, majority leader, said the bottom had fallen out of business because private institutions had not been able to extend the required relief.

Representative Madden, Republican, Illinois, said the measure would add another billion dollar burden to the backs of the people.

"Already Europe owes us $12,000,000,000," he said. "This would add another billion to that debt. It moreover sustains high prices and does not aid the working people whose wages are being reduced all over the country."

The bill now goes to conference for adjustment with the senate measure.

Democrats Aid New Tariff Bill.

The ways and means committee emergency tariff bill will be introduced by Representative Fordney of Michigan, the chairman, on Monday, and Mr. Fordney said it would be taken up on the floor of the house on Wednesday. Its passage is assured. Action by the senate is in prospect within a few days.

Representative Garner of Texas, one of the leading Democratic members of the ways and means committee, said a considerable number of Democrats would support the bill as a means of bringing relief to the farmers.

"The conditions of the country are such that people are grasping at straws," Mr. Garner said.

At today's meeting of the ways and means committee a poll of members showed none of the Republicans and only two or three of the Democrats preferring an embargo on imports to the imposition of high duties.

Proposed New Tariff.

The schedule of rates as approved by the committee follows:

Wheat, 30 cents per bushel; flour, 20 per cent ad valorem; corn, 15 cents per bushel; beans, 2 cents per pound; peanuts, 2 cents per pound; cottonseed oil, soy bean oil, cocoanut oil, and peanut oil, 20 cents per gallon; potatoes, 25 cents per bushel; onions, 40 cents per bushel; long staple cotton, 7 cents per pound; rice, cleaned, 2 cents per pound; rice, uncleaned, 1½ cents per pound; cattle, 20 per cent ad valorem; sheep, over 1 year, $2 per head; sheep, under 1 year old, $1 per head; mutton, 2½ cents per pound; wool, in the grease, 15 cents per pound; scoured wool, 20 cents per pound.

Compensatory rates on woolen manufactures and cotton manufactures will be agreed upon Monday. The duty on cotton manufactures will apply to cotton made from the long staple cotton.

Four Negative Committee Votes.

The plan to include some method of equalizing foreign exchange was abandoned.

The ways and means committee voted on each item in the schedule separately. In most cases the vote stood about 15 to 4. Those voting usually in the negative were Representatives Henry T. Rainey of Illinois, Hull of Tennessee, Martin of Louisiana, Crisp of Georgia, and Dickinson of Missouri, Democrats.

Representative Garner voted in the negative on some items.

BATTLING FOR A CHANCE TO SEE SANTA CLAUS

Just a small part of the vast crowd of children and their parents who stormed the Toyland Circus and Christmas Festival of the Red, White, and Blue club at the Coliseum yesterday afternoon. The crowd was so big the doors had to be closed and extra policemen and firemen were asked to aid in controlling the situation. Photograph made outside the Coliseum.

Too Many Kids

The Toyland Circus and Christmas festival at the Coliseum entertained so many children yesterday that it was necessary to close the doors during the afternoon and again in the evening. More than 18,000 kiddies had squeezed into the huge building to watch the camels, elephants, and other animals go through a "reglar sirkus" in the sawdust ring.

They listened while the workings of a model farm exhibit was explained to them. They watched breathlessly while Santa Claus himself stepped out from behind the sixty foot Christmas tree, and—best of all—they had a royal time filing past the old fellow as he distributed gifts to them.

The fair will end on Thursday night. The proceeds are to be devoted to making life pleasanter for children on the northwest side centering about the Red, White, and Blue club at 1001 Currier street, near Milwaukee avenue and Augusta street. In the throng yesterday at the "circus" were 350 kids from that play center.

TAUNTS AROUSE ROME DEPUTIES; RIOTING IN HOUSE

ROME, Dec. 18.—For two days there has been great excitement in the chamber of deputies over the discussion of recent disorders at Lucca, when Socialists were beaten in an encounter with nationalists.

Sig. Corradani, under secretary of the interior, attempted today to describe the events at Lucca as they had been reported to the government, but the Socialists would not allow him to speak, hurling all sorts of insults at him.

The tumult reached a climax when the Socialist Brunelli read a telegram saying the Socialists Bentini and Ciccolai on their arrival at Bologna had been beaten by nationalists.

"Well done! Well done!" cried several deputies of the nationalist ex-combatant groups. One of the nationalists added, "we told you you wouldn't be allowed to return to Bologna."

This infuriated the Socialists, who left their benches and threw themselves against the nationalist deputies. Although many members tried to separate them, a fist fight followed. There were ten Socialists to each of the Nationalists.

STREET SWEEPER AND BOY HIT BY AUTOMOBILES DIE

Automobile Killings in Chicago in 1920, 565

John Thomas, 63 years old, a street sweeper living at 1244 West Sixty-first street, died at St. Bernard's hospital yesterday of injuries received Friday when he was struck by an automobile at Sixty-third and La Salle streets.

Herman Kleinow, 7728 South Sangamon street, driver of the car, was arraigned yesterday before Judge Joseph La Buy in the Englewood court on a charge of assault. His case was continued until after the inquest, which will be held tomorrow.

Vincent G. Walsh, 10 years old, 1831 Cuyler avenue, who was struck by an automobile on Thursday while playing tag in the street with some other boys in front of 3919 North Lincoln street, died at the American hospital.

Mrs. Emma Dier, 21 years old, 5357 Cuyler avenue, was probably fatally injured last night when she was struck by an automobile after she had alighted from an east bound Irving Park car at Long avenue. Everett McDaniels, an attendant at the Chicago State Hospital for the Insane at Dunning, owner and driver of the automobile, was arrested.

GIRL WHO FLED WITH PANDOLFO'S SON FOUND HERE

Miss Hazel Garrison, 17 years old, who disappeared three weeks ago from the home of her wealthy father in Bowling Green, Ky., was found yesterday at 105 East Grand avenue in a rooming house conducted by Mrs. Mary Hodges. With her was Edward Gerlack, a former employé of the Industrial Securities and Trust company, 10 South La Salle street.

Miss Garrison said she left Bowling Green with Charles E. Pandolfo, son of the former head of the Pan Motor company, recently convicted of a charge of using the mails to defraud. The son was arrested several days ago and sent back to Bowling Green, charged with uttering fictitious checks. She and Gerlack have been posing as borther and sister, she said.

Gerlack was released. She was committed to the custody of a brother, who started back with her for Bowling Green.

GERMANY'S 'WAR WRECKS' REBEL; SEIZE HOSPITAL

Defy Police Until Given an Armistice.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Dec. 18.—Two hundred German soldiers, legless, armless, lame and blind, the worst wrecks of the world war, conducted a successful revolution here today.

They captured the hospital buildings, drove out the entire hospital personnel and then defied the police for hours.

The maimed soldiers, having lived together in the hospital for more than two years, became incensed today at a government proposal to distribute them among various civilian hospitals and mutinied.

Calls Upon His Allies.

First the leader of the men, both of whose legs were shot away in the great war, called for his bearers—two veterans each of whom had one arm left—and was carried to a telephone.

Thus he summoned to "headquarters" from the other military hospitals the balance of his command. Shortly after the reinforcements arrived, some afoot and some in motor trucks.

A squad of one legged veterans then charged the hospital offices waving their crutches, and had no difficulty in driving the authorities from the premises and occupying the telephone exchange to prevent calls for police protection.

Armistice Effected.

A half hour later, however, the police arrived in force, but they found locked doors and barricades and resolute guards posted at all entrances. The police refused to use violence against the army of cripples and after two hours of negotiation the soldiers were persuaded to accept an armistice until late in January.

It is believed that the government will relent and will permit the wounded men to remain together.

HAITI INQUIRY FINDS MARINES ARE GUILTLESS

Crimes Few, Punished, U. S. Report Says.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The court of inquiry which conducted an investigation in Haiti of charges against the United States marines in the conduct of the occupation of the island republic reported to Secretary Daniels today, giving the marine corps a general exoneration, declaring it deserving of commendation rather than adverse criticism.

Unjustifiable homicides in two instances and serious isolated offenses in sixteen other cases were found, the court reported, and in all these cases offenders were tried by court martial, convicted, and sentenced.

Admiral Mayo's Report.

"After a careful study of the matters at issue," says the report, signed by Rear Admiral H. T. Mayo, president of the court of inquiry, "based not only on the evidence in record but also upon other original and reliable sources of information, and the court's own observations while in Haiti, the court regards the charges which have been published as ill considered, regrettable, and thoroughly unwarranted reflections on a portion of the United States marine corps which has performed difficult, dangerous, and delicate duty in Haiti in a manner which instead of calling for adverse criticism is entitled to the highest commendation."

Conclusions of Court.

The conclusions of the court of inquiry, approved today by Gen. Le Jeune, commandant of the marine corps, and Secretary Daniels, included the following detailed findings:

"1. The court finds that two unjustifiable homicides have been committed, one each, by two of the personnel of the United States naval service which has served in Haiti since July 28, 1915, and that sixteen other serious acts of violence have been perpetrated against citizens of Haiti during the same period by individuals of such personnel.

"2. The court finds further that these offenses were all isolated acts of individuals and that in every case the responsible party was duly brought to trial before a general court martial, convicted, and sentenced.

Finds No Other Crimes.

"3. The court has found no evidence of the commission of any other unjustifiable homicides or other serious unjustifiable acts of oppression or of violence against any of the citizens of Haiti, or unjustifiable damage or destruction of their property caused by any of the personnel in question.

"Referring to paragraph 2 of the precept, it is the conclusion of the court that there have been no proper grounds for the statement that 'practically indiscriminate killing of natives has been going on for some time,' as alleged in the letter from Brig. Gen. George Barnett, U. S. marine corps, to Col. John H. Russell, U. S. marine corps.

"It was inevitable that some offenses would be committed. However, considering the conditions of service in Haiti, it is remarkable that the offenses were so few in number, and that they all may be chargeable to the ordinary defects of human character, such defects as result in the commission of similar offenses in the United States and elsewhere in the best regulated communities.

Judges Conduct by Results.

"The general conduct of our troops of occupation can be fairly judged by the results of that occupation.

"Now for the first time in more than a hundred years tranquility and security of life and property may be said to prevail in Haiti. The Haitian people themselves welcomed the coming of our men and are unwilling to have them depart.

"The court cannot refrain from recording its opinion of much, and that the most serious part of the reflections which have been made upon the officers who have served in Haiti.

"The outstanding characteristic of those officers, from the brigade commander down, has been their sympathetic attitude toward every step that would lead to a betterment of the country and to improvement in the physical, mental, and moral conditions of the population."

WASHINGTON NEWS IN BRIEF

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 18.

Charges against the United States marine corps in the occupation of Haiti were characterized by the naval court of inquiry which investigated them as "ill considered, regrettable, and thoroughly unwarranted reflections" and the corps in its conduct of Haitian campaigns was declared to be entitled to highest commendation.

The house ways and means committee today drafted the emergency agricultural tariff bill which will be introduced Monday and its passage expedited for financial relief of the farmers.

The war department reported that the cost of maintaining the American forces in Germany up to June 30, 1920, was $257,000,000, a debt to the United States under the armistice terms, of which Germany has paid to date only $34,344,000.

The senate passed the maternity and infancy protection bill after its economy opponents had cut its required expenditures from $4,000,000 to $1,500,000 a year, and putting its administration into the children's bureau instead of creating a new government bureau.

In a speech delivered in Germany by Count von Bernstorff received here today, the former German ambassador to the United States declared that Germany's most pressing tasks for the future were concerned with the United States.

President Elect Harding will seek revision of treaty with Britain to permit free passage of Panama by American ships.

The house voted the adoption of the senate resolution reviving the War Finance corporation. Amendments made by the house necessitate the bill going to conference.

Attorney General Palmer ruled that maker has right to keep and consume cider, even after it becomes hard.

NORTH CHICAGO OFFICIALS EYED BY GRAND JURY

The Lake county grand jury, which has been sitting in Waukegan inquiring into gambling and liquor conditions thereabouts, is scheduled to round out its work on Monday.

It was reported last night, but not confirmed, that indictments will be returned against a number of persons about North Chicago, including some officials.

Lieut. Col. A. V. Smith, state's attorney, elected on a pledge to change the county from "the wettest spot in Illinois into a veritable desert," is known to have presented a mass of evidence to the inquisitors.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—Miss Sophia Erica Taylor, widely known in pleasure-seeking circles of London as "Babas" Taylor, was shot and killed last night in her flat in St. James street in the West End, by George Augustus Kelly, who is understood to have come over with the first expeditionary forces.

Kelly, immediately after killing the woman, killed himself with his army Colt .45 in the presence of a frightened maid-servent.

Kelly was recently manager of the dancing establishment known as the Palaise de Danse at Hammersmith which was advertised as "having the best floor and the best jazz band in London" and which was having a great vogue.

Jealousy Is Blamed.

Jealousy is believed to have been the motive of the murder. The affair made considerable sensation, as both "Babas" Taylor and Kelly achieved considerable reputation as dancers and gave exhibitions of their proficiency in the latest steps imported from America.

Miss Taylor, who had a private fortune of some $150,000, left her by one of her admirers, was frequently seen in fashionable restaurants in the later stages of the war entertaining or being entertained by American officers.

Kelly is said to have hailed originally from Omaha, Neb. One report has it that he had recently been supplanted in the affections of Miss Taylor by an army captain.

Kelly served with the American air force during the war and had been connected with a prominent American advertising agency.

SON OF FORMER MERCHANT.

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 18.—George A. Kelly, reported to have been found dead with a dancer in a London flat, was the son of the late George A. Kelly, who at one time was a member of a dry goods firm which went out of business here about seventeen years ago.

FATAL BLAST LAID TO REVENGE.

South Bend, Wash., Dec. 18.—A statement of Elgel Christianson, one of the four who died as a result of the explosion of the dredger Beaver here, that Fred Welch, now in a local hospital suffering from injuries received in the explosion, set off the blast for revenge, is being investigated by a coroner's inquest here today. Welch has been put under arrest and is guarded at the hospital.

BOMBED AFTER DEFYING QUESSE, WOMAN CHARGES

Blast Follows Refusal to Pay $770, She Asserts.

Charges that a bomb was exploded at her flat building, 2516-36 North Kedzie avenue, Friday night, after William Quesse, president of the Flat Janitors' union, had vainly attempted to collect a bill for $770, were made by Mrs. Emily Nachsten, owner of the building, yesterday.

One hundred and forty windows were shattered by the blast.

For some time, according to Mrs. Nachsten, union pickets have kept the apartment in a virtual state of siege. The "bill" was for pickets' wages, as well as for commissions of ice and milk menand others, whom the pickets had induced to remain away from the premises.

"I discharged a colored union janitor for inefficiency last month," said Mrs. Nachsten. "I had been paying him $144 a month for looking after thirty-six apartments. He had the thirty-seventh apartment to himself, rent free, with light and gas thrown in. He also tended another twenty-six flat building which brought his monthly earnings up to nearly $300.

Employs a Union Man.

"I employed another union janitor, Frank Wesely, but after a few days he told me the union would not let him keep the job and I would have to hire the colored man again. I refused and Wesely left.

"A picket appeared next day and walked up and down in front of the building to prevent the delivery of milk, ice, groceries, and laundry. The mail man and ash and garbage collectors were the only ones unmolested. On the advice of my daughter, Gertrude, and my married daughter, Mrs. T. M. League, and her husband, all of whom live with me, I refused to capitulate.

Present Bill of $770.

"Then came a union committee, consisting of President Quesse and two men named Osterberg and McWalters. They presented me with a bill for $770 for the picket's wages and other incidentals. They said it would have to be paid before a union janitor could go back to work. I refused to pay it, and last night the bomb was thrown."

Frank Finsel, the picket, was taken into custody by the police yesterday. He refused to talk and was released. Policemen guarded the building yesterday.

President Quesse refused to discuss the charges.

"Just let them go as they are," he said. "I have no response to make."

Oliver H. De Shon, a nonunion bill poster, whose home at 2456 Orchard street also was bombed Friday night denied he had received any warnings or threats from the Bill Posters' union.

Autos Collide and One Yields 254 Quarts of It

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 18.—After running the gantlet of prohibition agents from New Jersey, Jesse McCronklin came to grief on the last lap of his journey here late yesterday when his big, expensive automobile roadster collided with another machine and the police seized his 254 quarts of bonded whisky.

HUSBAND FLEES WHILE WIFE IS BUYING GIFTS

Mrs. Minnie Young of 384 Central avenue, Highland Park, spent a happy Friday in Chicago. She was making her Christmas purchases and she took especial joy in choosing a pair of house slippers and a dressing gown for her husband, Charles U. Young.

She doesn't mind now that her secret purchases are public knowledge because when she came home Friday night her husband had gone. With him he had taken, she learned later, $2,000 of their savings from a Chicago bank, $400 belonging to her father, T. P. Pierson, with whom he was in the upholstering business in Highland Park, as well as the money he obtained by a hurried sale of his automobile.

Saturday she received a curt note from Chicago, in which her husband informed her that he was "through being lectured" and she need not expect to see him again. She went to Justice of the Peace A. E. Smith and swore out a warrant charging wife abandonment, but she says she will withdraw it if "Charlie" will come back.

CLARA SMITH IS CONCEALED NEAR ARDMORE, CLAIM

Ardmore, Okla., Dec. 18.—A report said to originate with a close friend of the late Jake L. Hamon, Republican national committeeman, to the effect that Clara Barton Smith, sought in connection with the death of Mr. Hamon here Nov. 26, is in seclusion near Ardmore and will surrender following the appointment of Mr. Hamon's successor was current here today. In the temporary absence of Russell B. Brown, county attorney, and Sheriff "Buck" Garrett no official confirmation of the report could be obtained.

City Plans Legal Fight on Habeas Corpus Writs

Legal technicalities, often the hole through which crooks crawl to liberty, are to be used by the city law department to keep suspects held for questioning by the police from gaining their freedom on writs of habeas corpus.

"The return on every habeas corpus writ issued by Judge David hereafter will be drawn up by the city law department," Chief of Police Fitzmorris said yesterday. "I have arranged to have a lawyer in court attack the sufficiency of every petition for a writ of habeas corpus filed in Judge David's court."

YANKS ON RHINE, COSTLY TO FOE, MAY COME HOME

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Following announcement from Brussells that there is under serious discussion the withdrawal of American troops from the occupied Rhineland area in Germany in order to reduce the heavy expense upon Germany, due to the presence of the armies of occupation, the war department made an announcement of the total cost to Germany for maintenance of the American Rhineland force up to June 30, 1920.

From the beginning of the occupation until that time the total cost of American forces in Germany, which Germany must pay, amounted to $257,065,084. Up to that time Germany had paid to the United States on this account, $34,724,658, leaving a net balance due the United States, under terms of the armistice requiring Germany to reimburse the power for this occupation, of $222,340,425.

In December, 1918, the maintenance cost of the American army in Germany was $34,344,000. The heaviest month was January, 1919, when the cost totaled $39,234,000, but the expense dropped rapidly each month as the force was reduced until last June it was only $2,204,000.

Officials of the government said they had heard of no definite proposal for withdrawing the American troops from the Rhineland but admitted the subject was under consideration.

ART INSTITUTE REMEMBERED IN MRS. ROWE'S WILL

Bequests to the Art institute, the new Field museum, and the Illinois Humane society, are contained in the will of the late Mrs. Katherine Rowe, 4954 Grand boulevard, filed in the Probate court yesterday. Mrs. Rowe was the widow of Dr. Nicholas Rowe, founder of the American Field Publishing company, with offices at 159 North State street.

The terms of the will provide that bequests of $1,000 each with a number of valuable paintings shall be made to the Art institution and the humane society. A collection of specimens of birds and animals with antiques and rugs will go to the museum.

In recognition of faithful services bequests of $200 each are made to Charles P. Richards, Stewart J. Walpole, Frank Young, Henry Zielke, and Geraldine McLindon, employés of the publishing company. Walpole is also bequeathed 500 shares of the company's stock.

ONLY 1,040 GOOD FELLOWS SO FAR; 3,611 NEED AID!

Emergency Call Issued for Yule Cheer.

BY THE REV. G. M'WHORTER.

Good Fellows! Give heed this morning to the exhortation of Plutarch: "Let us not be weary in well doing." Up to Friday night there were just 1,040 Good Fellows enlisted in the Christmas cheer campaign, while 3,611 families had appealed for assistance. With only one week left in which to complete the campaign, we are faced with a real emergency—to provide for nearly 2,600 more families than there are Good Fellows signed up. We believe you will respond to this emergency.

The Good Fellows rallied to the call last year to the number of 2,500 and took Christmas cheer, food, clothing, candy, and toys to the 12,000 children. This year 1,040 Good Fellows have so far provided for less than 4,000 children. Good Fellows—"Let us not be weary in well-doing."

Only $1,500 for Heroes.

Believing you desire to know just what the Good Fellows are going to do for the wounded service men in the hospitals of Chicago, Oak Forest, Fort Sheridan, and Great Lakes, we beg to report that $1,500 has thus far been subscribed for the Christmas gifts Good Fellows will present to the 1,000 heroes in the hospitals. Does that amount satisfy you, Good Fellows? We were planning to spend about $5 upon each man, but so far we are limited to $1.50. Send in your checks and let us boost the minimum to $5 a man.

And here are some of the delightful features of the Good Fellow movement: Following the hospitable offer of William Collier, who has invited 100 wounded service men to attend his Christmas matinee of "The Hottentot" at Cohan's Grand, John Garrity has requested the Good Fellow department of THE TRIBUNE to arrange for a party of fifty wounded service men to attend the Christmas matinee of "Cinderella on Broadway," at the Studebaker.

There are many other bright spots in the daily story of the Good Fellows. The Pullman Car works employés sent up a request for thirty families to provide with Christmas baskets; the Chicago Surface Lines club asked for twenty-five families; the employés of the Rock Island railroad collected about $500 to care for more than thirty-five families, and taxi drivers from the Hotel Morrison stand contributed $25.

Some Great Good Fellows.

Many individuals are doing notable Good Fellow work this Christmas.

A. R. Wehrheim, a young west side business man, thinks enough of the idea to take care of a dozen poor families in liberal fashion; Noel C. Ward is buying clothing and bedding for a widow and her six small children; Charles Jordan walked into Room 906 Tribune building last week and laid down "a perfectly good Liberty bond" upon the Good Fellow desk; and the Rasmussen brothers, one living in Wheaton and the other in Tampico, Ill., are each taking care of a Chicago family.

But, Good Fellows of Chicago and vicinity, "let us not be weary in well doing."

Six days until Christmas! And there are 2,600 families yet uncared for! Fill out the Good Fellow blank now and send it to Room 906 Tribune building.

ST. LOUIS MAN ROBBED HERE.

Julius Kausman of St. Louis was passing the Conway building, 111 West Washington street, early yesterday when two men dragged him into a doorway and with drawn revolvers ordered him to "stick 'em up." He did. They took $40 and a gold watch, and told him to go on his way.

GOOD FELLOWS!

Here's a Form to Fill Out. It Will Aid You in Stating Your Plans for Helping Poor Kids.

If you will be a Good Fellow on Christmas day to some family of poor children in Chicago please fill out the attached blank and send it to "The Tribune," Good Fellow Department.

I will be Santa Claus to ..... children. (as many as you wish)

MATERNITY BILL MINUS A BUREAU PASSES SENATE

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The senate today passed the Sheppard bill for the protection of maternity and infancy after opponents of the measure forced material modifications and a substantial reduction of expenditure. There was no roll call.

The bill in its present form does little more than provide for a campaign of instruction for the benefit of expectant mothers and in the care of infants. The provision for medical and nursing attention was stricken from the bill.

Instead of creating a new government bureau to carry out the purposes of the bill the children's bureau is directed to administer the act. An amendment to this effect was adopted with a view of curtailing the number of government employés.

An annual expenditure under the bill as originally proposed of about $4,000,000 was reduced by about $1,500,000 a year as a result of protests by senators that the treasury was in no condition to finance new governmental ventures.

ASSEMBLY AND COUNCIL CLASH OVER MANDATES

Shantung Question Up Before League.

GENEVA, Dec. 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—The first meeting of the assembly of the league of nations closed this evening in a burst of eloquence after passing through one of the fullest days of its existence in a rather agitated and not always clear debate.

In farewell speeches, Paul Hymans, president of the assembly, and Dr. Giuseppe Motta, president of Switzerland, told the delegates the first assembly had proved the league was a living organism and a success. The opinion expressed by the delegates who have participated most actively in the work of the assembly is that it has done all that could be expected of it if not more.

The founding of the international court of justice was pointed to by the two men as the outstanding achievement of the assembly.

Delegates Well Pleased.

A number of pet projects have met with disaster; yet there are few, if any, delegates who remained for the entire assembly that will leave dissatisfied with the work of that body.

The final day was marked by another encounter between the English delegates and the representatives of the British dominions. Lord Robert Cecil, acting for South Africa, and C. J. Doherty for Canada, provoked an aggressive and significant declaration by Arthur J. Balfour to the effect that if the assembly adopted any recommendations concerning mandates he and his successor on the league council would pay no attention to them.

Takes Slap at Council.

Lord Robert Cecil and Mr. Doherty criticized the council for holding back information about mandates and supported the recommendations of the mandates committee, the most important of which were that the assembly express the opinion that the resources of the territories under mandate should not be exploited by the mandatories for their own profit or for the profit of the allies and that the recruiting of troops should not be allowed in such territories.

The recommendations were adopted unanimously. Mr. Balfour contented himself by saying they would have no effect, instead of voting against them.

Vote Esperanto Down.

Esperanto fell a victim to a sharp assault by Gabriel Hanotaux when the committee reported in favor of an expression by the assembly with the object of encouraging the general teaching of Esperanto in the public schools with a view to making it eventually an international language and the language of the league. After a debate the assembly voted against the proposal.

M. Hymans, in his closing speech, dwelt upon the fact that the session of the assembly demonstrated to all the value of the league of nations.

"The league has developed a consciousness," he said, "and now resolves to live, and will live. Through the setting up of an international court of justice the assembly has established a house of rights and a palace of peace."

"March Toward the Stars."

The activities of the assembly respecting typhus he declared to be a magnificent demonstration of human solidarity. When the assembly spoke of disarmament, M. Hymans said, the members of that body displayed keen anxiety to light the weight of armaments from the shoulders of the world but at the same time realized that in the present unsettled condition of Europe nothing better could be done than had been.

He referred to the fraternal spirit, shown by the assembly, the members of which were separated only by shades of opinion, not by principles. He appealed to the youth of the world, the men of tomorrow, those who fought in the great war to construct a moral world indispensable to the future of mankind, and concluded:

"Let us continue our ascending march towards the stars."

Argentine Minister Sees King George and Curzon

LONDON, Dec. 18.—Honorio Pueyrredon, the Argentine foreign minister, who was received by King George this morning and by Earl Curzon, the foreign minister, yesterday, told the Associated Press this afternoon his conversation largely concerned league of nations matters. He expressed the opinion that the British foreign minister now "fully understands" Argentina's relations with the league.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN POET!

Walter O'Brien smites the bloomin' lyre at the banquet of Juvenile court attaches and reads a satire verse of his own composition, lampooning some fellow worker. Each guest followed suit, and there was much laughter, but it is rumored the muse of poesy up and died on the spot.

Verses and Water

THALIA, being the muse of the poetry of comedy, must have wept yesterday when about thirty attachés of the Juvenile court ground out as many examples of rhyming satires on each other at the annual Christmas banquet, held this year at the Y. M. C. A. hotel.

The names of those present were written on slips of paper and mixed up in a hat. Each drew a name and had to dash off an impromptu bit of verse concerning that person. Here's a sample:

"Why talk about the beauty squad,
And why they look so clean;
But Arthur Hodges is the one
That Fitzmorris never seen."

Hodges is a detective assigned to the court. Joseph L. Moss, chief probation officer, was toastmaster. They drank water and made verse, which may explain something.

WILL ENFORCE PARKING LAW STARTING DEC. 27

Rigid enforcement of the present thirty minute parking ordinance will begin on Monday following Christmas day, Chief of Police Fitzmorris warned motorists yesterday.

The announcement followed a conference between Mayor Thompson, D. F. Kelly, general manager of Mandel Bros., and the principal opponent of the drastic no-parking ordinance adopted by the council and then reconsidered.

Printed cards bearing the principal sections of the present ordinance will be distributed to motorists next week.

"I will put enough policemen on the job to enforce the ordinance," the chief said. "Motorists who are served with summonses will go to court. There will be no fixing of cases."

M'GANNON LOOKS LIKE THIRD MAN, COP TESTIFIES

Cleveland, O., Dec. 18.—Patrolman Walter Schuld today testified that the "third man" he saw at the scene of the shooting of Harold C. Kagy on May 8 corresponded to the description of Chief Justice William H. McGannon of the Municipal court, now on trial, as a result of Kagy's death.

Patrolman Schuld, witness for the state at the trial of John W. Joyce, who was recently acquitted of a second degree murder charge in connection with Kagy's death, again took the stand as a state witness today. On direct examination, Schuld denied an opening statement by the defense that he had received an order to go to Municipal court in an effort to identify Judge McGannon as the "third man."

Schuld testified he saw a man answering the description of the "third man" coming from the grand jury one day and despite objections by attorneys for the defense, was asked to name that man.

"Judge William H. McGannon," Schuld replied.

Under cross examination by defense attorney, Patrolman Schuld also testified that when he asked Kagy, a few minutes after the shooting, to name the man who shot him, Kagy replied, "Johnny Joyce."

CLASHING TALES OF $150,000 BOND FIND FOG TRAIL

Woman Can't Be Located; U. S. Not Interested.

Federal officials and police of many cities, trailing the strange adventures of the $150,000 worth of United States treasury certificates of indebtedness which bobbed up in the possession of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Jagger of Gary, encountered conflicting stories yesterday as to how they were found.

Jagger, an expressman, said originally Mrs. Jagger found them in a taxicab while en route to the La Salle street station in Chicago. But his former attorney, Lester D. Butler of Gary, said Jagger had supplied him with a number of versions.

Several More Versions.

The first was that Mrs. Jagger found them on the edge of a roulette table in a gambling hall at French Lick, that she brought them home and hid them in a birdseed box; the other was that she was in the Blackstone hotel one day when a messenger rushed up to her with the bonds and left before she could detain him.

Chief of Police William A. Forbis of Gary said he had checked a number of blind clews—one that the certificates were a part of the $100,000 taken from Ambrose J. Small, the missing Canadian theatrical magnate; the other that they were a part of the Colosimo loot. But he learned they were found before Colosimo was killed.

Woman Can't Be Found.

Mrs. Jagger left Gary several days ago. She was reported to be in Indianapolis, but could not be found. Capt. Thomas E. Hall of the United States secret service there said he had investigated the case "and the government is not interested in it. Mr. Jagger never asked me to help find the owners of the certificates."

Jagger's attorney said he was going ahead with the suit against Herman Faber, whom he accuses of obtaining $20,000 of the certificates and failing to pay for them, and the suit against Benjamin Laube, justice of the peace, whom he accuses of obtaining a $10,000 certificate for $1,500.

OBREGON MEETS WITH CABINET FOR FIRST TIME

Mexico City, Dec. 18.—President Obregon today met the cabinet for the first time, the meeting being preceded by the swearing in of Gen. Erique Estarada as secretary of war in succession to the late Gen. Benjamin G. Hill.

The session was secret, but it is understood the mining and labor situation was discussed, also various projects President Obregon recently submitted to congress for consideration.

The mining situation has been relieved by the apparent settlement of the strike of the Cohuila miners. More silver and copper mines are closing down, however, because of the low prices of those metals.

El Democrata estimates 40,000 miners are not working in Puchuca, Sinaloa, and Durango.

RAILROAD LABOR BOARD LIMITS ITS OWN POWER

The United States railroad labor board handed down a decision yesterday interpreting the Esch-Cummins transportation act to mean that the board does not have jurisdiction over any interurban or electric lines.

Appeals from employés on various electric lines, asking the board to hear their grievances, were denied.

The decision affects every electric line in the country and many city transportation systems owned by interurban companies.

Arguments in the case were heard several months ago. Members of the board stated at the time their belief that, regardless which side won, the matter would be appealed to the United States Supreme court for interpretation of the transportation act.

ADVERTISING MEN SEE SIGNS OF BUSINESS BOOM

Signs that business throughout the middle west is beginning to show improvement and that manufacturers are optimistic that the spring of 1921 will see a resumption of buying on a basis more nearly normal, were reported by 100 newspaper advertising representatives who met yesterday at the offices of the William H. Rankin company in the Monroe building. Particularly in such cities as Cleveland, Detroit, Akron, Dayton, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Buffalo, and Pittsburg, great manufacturing centers which had felt the period of readjustment more sharply than some others, was a more cheerful atmosphere apparent. This was due largely to the fact dealers were succeeding in disposing of products at new lower prices and beginning to buy again from manufacturers.

DENMAN CABLES BALFOUR ON 1917 "CHINA TREATIES"

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—William Denman, former chairman of the United States shipping board, sent a cablegram tonight to Arthur J. Balfour, asking him to tell whether in the spring of 1917 he informed the president and other American conferees of the existence of the secret treaties affecting Shantung, the German ships in China, division of the islands of the North and South Pacific, and the coercion of China into the war.

The cablegram was sent as the result of the publication this morning of a cablegram from London, describing the conversations on these topics by Mr. Balfour as "private."

$5,000,000 IN BOND FORFEITS AWAITS COUNTY

Collection Would Wipe Out Deficit.

Henry Barrett Chamberlin, operating director of the Chicago crime commission, suggested yesterday that the county of Cook might solve its financial difficulties by collecting the $5,000,000 in judgments on forfeited bonds which is outstanding.

"The county is threatening to reduce salaries 20 per cent at a time when the crime situation demands the employment of additional clerks, bailiffs, and prosecutors to cope with conditions," Mr. Chamberlin said. "The state's attorney is asking for a large appropriation that he may employ high grade assistants.

"The answer is simply this: Let's collect. The judgments will take care of the six additional criminal courts; wages can be raised, instead of reduced, and a better grade of lawyers can be attracted to the state's attorney's office."

Plan for Collection.

Several attorneys and county officials have advised the commission that the bond judgments may be collected in the same manner as any other judgment. The state's attorney, applying to the clerk of the court in which the judgment was granted, would be issued an execution, which, being presented to the sheriff, would authorize him to seize anything in the possession of the bondsmen.

Thus even the personal property—even the wages—of the persons involved could be seized if the value of the scheduled real estate was insufficient to meet the judgment, sold by the sheriff, and the proceeds turned into the county treasury.

County Board Can Act.

The county board has the authority to settle judgments and has been doing so. Usually the settlement was for only a small percentage of the judgment. The net revenue of the county in a period embracing approximately the last year on settlements was $1,700. During the same period approximately $700,000 in judgments were rendered on forfeitures in the Criminal court, excluding entirely the Municipal courts.

At present the county board is trying to prepare a budget within the estimated revenue.

Recently Chief Justice Charles A. McDonald forfeited bonds on four safe blowers totaling $180,000. He announced that he would write to the county board instructing it not to compromise or settle the judgments when they are returned. They are good and collectable if the county board will insist on collections, it is said.

PULPITS TO ECHO CRY OF STARVING BABIES OF EUROPE

Pastors and Rabbis Will Urge Donations Today.

From nearly every church and synagogue pulpit, theater stage, and public rostrum in Chicago the cry of the 3,500,000 starving children of Europe for food will be heard today. The same program will be carried out in every city of the country. It is part of the European relief council's campaign to raise $33,000,000 in the next sixty days. Tomorrow Hoover booths will be opened in the leading loop banks and contributions will be received in them.

Outlook Pleases Carpenter.

"Our organization in Chicago and in Illinois is functioning," said A. A. Carpenter, state chairman. "Contributions are pouring in. We feel certain Chicago will raise its million and that the rest of the state will give a million."

Dawes Tells Meaning.

"This is America's fulfillment f her promise," said Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes, Illinois treasurer of the council. "We promised to save Europe. Whatever the saving of Europe may mean politically, it has only one meaning to the humanitarian. It means that we must carry through our work of feeding a generation of babies and children until the nations can find food to feed them."

SUBURB FARE BATTLERS

Federal examiner and lawyers figuring on both sides of the railroads' plea to raise suburban fares. Left to right—Attorney R. V. Fletcher, counsel for Illinois Central; Attorney A. McLaughlin, for Northwestern; Examiner William B. Disque; Assistant Illinois Attorney General Morton D. Culver, and H. V. Slater, rate expert for the state public utilities commission. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

THE first round in the fight being made by twenty-two railroads operating suburban trains out of Chicago to increase commutation rates was staged yesterday in the Great Northern hotel at a hearing before William B. Disque, examiner-attorney for the interstate commerce commission.

Opposed to the railroads in their fight are the Illinois attorney general's office, represented by Assistant Attorney General Morton D. Culver, and the public utilities commission, represented by H. V. Slater. They are taking the side of the suburbanites.

The plea of the railroads is that under the present rates they are losing money. They contend the 20 per cent increase in passenger rates awarded on interstate business last fall should also apply to intrastate service. Their case is being presented by Attorney R. V. Fletcher of the Illinois Central and Attorney A. McLaughlin of the Northwestern.

According to testimony, the roads lost $1,300,000 on suburban service last year, the Northwestern being the heaviest loser, to the tune of $800,000.

The state contests the increase. Hearing will be continued tomorrow.

A. L. FISH KEEPS SUICIDE THREAT; FOUND IN LAKE

Romance Over, Phoned of Death Plans.

Alvin L. Fish, son of S. T. Fish, wealthy South Water street commission merchant, fulfilled his announcement to THE TRIBUNE on Dec. 7 that he would commit suicide. His body was found on the lake shore at Sixty-seventh street yesterday morning.

The tragedy followed Fish's unsuccessful efforts to rekindle a romance that began with a chance acquaintance, a moonlight automobile ride to Crown Point, Ind., and a hasty wedding, and ended in an early annulment of the marriage.

"Suicide while temporarily insane" was the verdict of the coroner's jury. Only a few witnesses were heard. The body was found in a pool on the sand by South Park Policeman Elmer Irvine and taken to the undertaking rooms of Thomas E. Corcoran, 1546 East Sixty-seventh street.

Identification was made by S. T. Fish and by Leonard Fish, a younger brother of the dead man.

A. L. Fish was divorced from Mildred G. Robins of 4845 North Rockwell street, on Nov. 25. On the night of Dec. 15 he telephoned to THE TRIBUNE.

"I'm in the loop," he said. "Never mind where. When I conclude talking I will take a taxicab to Fifty-first street and the lake, leave my overcoat and hat on the beach, and leap in.

"Please don't argue with me. I am sober and sane. I have been deliberating for weeks. You will say I am taking the weakest way. I know that, but it is my choice. I am telephoning THE TRIBUNE because your reporters have been kind to me."

Efforts to trace the call failed. Relatives and friends, when notified, voiced doubt that the young man would end his life, as he had made previous threats. He had been missing for three weeks when his body was found.

Leonard Fish and Miss Robins were the only witnesses at the inquest.

"Alvin fell from a buggy while in Michigan five years ago and received injuries which I believe affected his brain," said Leonard Fish. "He was rejected for military service.

Miss Robins testified she had separated from Fish three weeks after their elopement to Crown Point and two weeks later had the marriage annulled.

"It was because we quarreled frequently," she said. "He often threatened to commit suicide."

"Do you think he was in his right mind?" asked Deputy Coroner Evans.

"No. I did not consider his threats seriously. He acted queerly."

END TESTIMONY IN THE NEWBERRY CASE; COUNT NEXT

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[United Press.]—Testimony on alleged illegal destruction of ballots in the 1918 senatorial contest between Henry Ford and Truman H. Newberry in Michigan was completed today by the senate investigating committee, headed by Senator Spencer of Missouri.

The next step will be the recounting of the ballots by the committee. This will begin Jan. 4, the day after arguments are opened in the Supreme court on the criminal conviction against Newberry, Senator Spencer announced.

Dr. Otis E. Newsome, town clerk of Calvin, Mich., told the committee today that twenty-eight ballots were lost, despite a court order to preserve them.

WIFE FEARED "WAR MADNESS OF PAT O'BRIEN"

She Defends the Woman Sucide Cursed.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 18.—Lieut. Pat O'Brien, officer of the royal flying corps during the world war, who, according to a police report, committed suicide by shooting himself at a hotel here last night, was suffering from a "wreckd nervous equillibrium," according to Dr. Walter Seager, his friend and physician.

Dr. Seager said Lieut. O'Brien probably had been suffering from the results of his experiences during the war. Lieu. O'Brien had fallen behind the German lines and been captured. While en route to a German prison camp he leaped from a moving train. For seventy-two days he evaded recapture and finally reëntered the allied lines.

Feared He Would Kill Her.

The widow, who was Miss Virginia Livingstone Allen of Washington, D. C., was prostrated tonight in a room in the same hotel where her husband killed himself.

Through a close friend, Mrs. Sarah Otis of Springfield, Ill., Mrs. O'Brien expressed the opinion her husband had been mentally unbalanced and that he had planned to kill her, had she responded to his telephone request for her to meet him last night.

Before shooting himself, O'Brien wrote several notes. In one of them, addressed to his wife, he was very bitter toward Mrs. Ottis, asking a curse on "that awful woman," and blaming her for the estrangement of his wife.

Widow Defends Friend.

Mrs. O'Brien declared Mrs. Ottis "has been more of a mother to me than anything else. Mrs. Ottis came out here from Chicago two months ago to visit us.

"Last Tuesday, after Mr. O'Brien had given way to a terrible fit of temper, in which he broke my finger, I left our home and engaged a room at a hotel. Mrs. Ottis joined me at my request. She had nothing to do with my leaving home. I simply decided I could no longer live with my husband. Mr. O'Brien found out where we were and engaged rooms in the same hotel. I believe he intended to kill me as well as himself."

"I was staying with Mrs. O'Brien," Mrs. Ottis said, "because I was afraid damage would be done by her husband. He had been irrational for several weeks."

Mrs. Ottis further described O'Brien as "a lovely boy, but undoubtedly mentally unbalanced because of his experiences in the war and possibly from a wound."

Ignores Wife in "Will."

Mrs. Ottis said Mrs. O'Brien's belief was based on the fact that she was not mentioned in a message to "Brother Elmer" and unofficially termed a will, that was found. This alleged will said:

"Please see that Clara Clegg, my sister, gets $1,000 from my farm in Indiana, as I owe it to her. After you take what you have coming to you, see that mother gets all the rest.

"PAT O'BRIEN."

Mrs. Clegg arrived recently from Momence, Ill., where her mother lives. Pat O'Brien's brother, Merwin, is expected soon from San Francisco. There will be no inquest. The coroner is convinced the aviator killed himself.

"Hero-Coward's" Bitter Note.

"Only a coward," O'Brien's note to his wife said, "would do what I am doing, but I guess I am one. With all my war record, I am just like the rest of the people in this world—a little bit of clay. And to you, my sweet little wife, I go thinking of you. And my dear, sweet mother, my sisters, and brothers. May the just God that answered my prayers in those days that I spent in making my escape from Germany once more answer them.

"And bring trouble, sickness, disgrace, and more bad luck than any else in this world has ever had, and curse forever that awful woman, that has broken up my home and taken you from me; the woman that stood in my home and gave [several words blurred]. She caused this life of mine, that just a few moments ago was happy, to go on that sweet adventure of death.

"To the five armies I have been in, the birds, the animals I love so well, to my friends, to all the world of adventure—I say good by. Please send what you find back to my mother in Momence, Ill."

O'Brien was author of the famous war book, "Outwitting the Hun."

WIFE'S LOVE FOR DAUGHTER BASIS OF DIVORCE SUIT

Because a mother loved her daughter more than she did her husband a divorce suit was filed in the Superior court yesterday. The plaintiff is Gabriel Longobardi, detective sergeant, formerly a member of the "black hand squad." The defendant is Mrs. Jennie Longobardi, now a resident of New York City. The sergeant alleges that he was deserted by his wife on Sept. 18, 1918.

"Mr. Longobardi tells me," said Attorney Ernest Stout, who filed the divorce bill, "that his wife is a splendid woman and that the only reason for the suit is that her love for her daughter, Dolores Casenelli, a movie actress, is greater than her love for him. She has said that she intends living with her daughter and that she is through with her husband."

NO U. S. ARMIES SENT TO EUROPE BY HARDING PLAN

League Substitute Would Avoid Guarantees.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Marion, O., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—A statement in general terms of the part the United States is willing to play in a new league of nations, to be followed by a conference of representatives of all the nations in Washington to decide upon the actual structure and scope of the league—this is the new Republican program outlined by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, after a conference with President Elect Harding today.

It will not do merely to negative the Wilson league, Dr. Butler said. He declared that in his opinion Mr. Harding would be able to work out a constructive substitute, keeping in mind the broad principle that the United States guarantees no military power at the disposition of any council of nations.

Advantage of Tradition.

"We should not enter into the keeping of the European peace by offering to furnish military force, either by treaty or in a league arrangement," he said.

"The judicial form of international cooperation, accompanied by stated international conferences for declaring, revising and carrying forward the rules of international law, is the form to which the people and the government of the United States are committed by tradition and by many formal acts."

Dr. Butler impressed upon Mr. Harding the economic phase of the international situation, declaring that the outlook in Europe must be bettered before this country can come into a normal business condition.

Senator Reed's Views.

Senator James Reed of Missouri came away with a similar set of ideas. After he left the Harding house this morning, he said:

"Mr. Wilson tried to build a governing body of the world that had power to enforce its decisions by its army and navy. That idea was defeated in the election, and the man that ignores that verdict breaks faith with the American people. There shall be no governing body, no emperor of the world. That is settled.

"There is no objection to an arrangement for conferences among the nations. Representatives might meet in Paris, London, or Washington for this purpose. Beyond this the laws of the world should be built up and codified and agreed upon. We have had wars start because the international rights were not clearly defined. If we had had any common sense operating in this country after the peace we should have had the great nations meet and make treaties, agreeing to respect and live up to the accepted code of international law. That is as far as we can go.

Takes No Stock in Referendum.

"As to preventing war by referendum to the people, I take no stock in it. When nations get to the point where they are ready to fight they will pay no attention to such resolutions and procedure, any more than they will to treaties. These people talk as though there was some great power in the world that could enforce such things. Don't you know that it is a point of honor that nations should declare war before making war and that weeks before Japan declared war on Russia she had sunk the better part of the Russian fleet? Look at the action of Germany in going through Belgium, despite treaties. Wars are brought about by the conflict of ideas, by conditions."

New for Navy Disarmament.

Senator Harry S. New also conferred with Mr. Harding today. He was inclined to favor a disarmament agreement if one could be made as the most effective means of ending wars. He indicated he would not be adverse to taking such machinery of the Versailles league of nations as might be found practicable, but told Mr. Harding that in his opinion a covenant mutually pledging the leading nations of the world to reduce armaments would be vastly superior to any complicated international peace structure.

LABOR TO AID IRELAND.

Leaders of the Farmer-Labor party will take the stump for the Irish freedom cause at a protest meeting to be held in Car Men's hall, Ashland boulevard and West Van Buren street, this evening. The principal speakers will be Parley Christianson, candidate of the party for the presidency, and John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

THE STAMP OF HEALTH

CHICAGO and Cook county are trying to hold their established lead in the nation's fight against tuberculosis. This is shown by this year's sale of Christmas seals, chief factor in financing the battle.

Sixteen girls are working day and night in the offices of the Chicago Tuberculosis institute in the Hartford building, opening envelopes and extracting amounts ranging from $2, the customary remittance for seals, to $50 and $100. The larger amounts are sent in to purchase "health bonds," an innovation offered this year to persons who desire to contribute large amounts but cannot use a large quantity of seals.

The money brought in by the penny seals finances free milk to the pupils of twenty-four open air schools in Chicago; free nursing and clinic service in Cook county towns, and the "Modern Health Crusade," in which 25,000 school children have been enrolled. The seals have helped to cause a reduction of 26 per cent in the Cook county tuberculosis death rate.

HARDING WANTS FREE PASSAGE THROUGH CANAL

Changes in the Panama Treaty Sought.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—In addressing himself to his announced project of exempting American ships from the payment of Panama canal tolls Mr. Harding, it was disclosed today, intends to seek a new understanding with Great Britain removing the provision of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty prohibitory of such discrimination.

"I think I know a way to reach such an understanding with Great Britain," Senator Harding said to one of the Republican leaders when he was in Washington last week.

Open to All in Treaty.

Mr. Harding did not go into particulars and there is much curiosity concerning the leverage he contemplates bringing to bear on Great Britain to induce that nation to consent to a change in the treaty under which the United States proceeded to construct the Panama canal. The Hay-Pauncefote treaty provides that—

"The canal shall be free and open, in time of war as in time of peace, to the vessels of commerce and of war of all nations, on terms of entire equality, so that there shall be no discrimination against any nation or its citizens or subjects in respect of the conditions or charges of traffic or otherwise."

Britain Protests Exemption.

When congress in 1912 included in the Panama canal act an exemption of American coastwise shipping from the payment of tolls Great Britain protested that this was a violation of the treaty provision. The exemption was defended by the Taft administration as not repugnant to the treaty, but in 1914 President Wilson found himself in such need of British support in American complications with Japan and Mexico that he repudiated his party platform pronouncement favoring free tolls and caused congress to repeal the provision of the canal act.

Senator Root and other authorities on international law contended that the exemption of even coastwise shipping was a violation of the treaty. Defenders of the exemption argued that it was no discrimination against foreign shipping because foreign vessels are excluded from the American coastwise trade and therefore do not compete with American coastwise ships.

In Republican Platform.

This latter argument, however, will not hold in regard to the exemption of American ships in overseas trade, as is proposed by the Republican platform, which says:

"We recommend that all ships engaged in coastwise trade and all vessels of the American merchant marine shall pass through the Panama canal without payment of tolls."

In view of the British protest against the exemption of coastwise shipping one can easily imagine the opposition of England and other nations to the exemption of all American ships.

In this connection it is pointed out that Canada has maintained the Welland canal toll free, and that exemption of American ships from payment of Panama tolls might engender retaliatory measures, such as the exaction of tolls from American ships passing through the Welland canal and the prospective St. Lawrence waterway.

The coastal states are strongly in favor of the Panama exemption, while business and agricultural interests in the interior are opposed to it.

NEW ENGLAND'S RAILROADS ARE CALLED U. S. KEY

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—Insolvency of the New England railroads would threaten the credit of all carriers, the interstate commerce commission was told today by Howard Elliott, former president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford raod.

Mr. Howard was supporting the application of the New England roads for a reallotment of rates between carriers east and west of the Hudson river.

"Insolvency of any one or more of the roads," Mr. Elliott said, "would not only be a disaster to New England but for the whole country, because it would raise the question in the minds of the public and investors in securities of other roads whether the extending of credits on the paper they hold would be worth while."

Railroads of New England must meet outstanding debts to the amount of $526,000,000 in the next three years—$334,000,000 in 1921, $86,000,000 in 1922, and $106,000,000 in 1923.

CABLE

The Gift for the Whole Family from the Whole Family

WHY not combine the family gift money this Christmas and choose the one supreme gift for the whole family, from the whole family—a beautiful Piano or Player from Cable's?

Ordinary gifts are likely to be quickly forgotten, but this gift of gifts will carry Christmas cheer and happiness far into the years to come.

Only a Small Initial Payment Needed

A small initial payment places any instrument in your home on Christmas Eve—or before, if you wish. The first payment on a fine instrument from Cable's is probably far less than the cost of many inconsequential gifts which give pleasure for but a day or two.

Buy Now at These Low Prices

As a special inducement to make your Christmas selections now, we offer many impelling values in Grands, Players and Upright Pianos.

The three instruments featured at the right are typical examples of the unusual price inducements we are now offering throughout our store.

If you have been awaiting lower piano prices, here is your opportunity—timely, money-saving offerings you cannot afford to pass.

Inspect Our Christmas Displays

Come to our music rooms now and personally examine these many special Christmas offerings. You'll find, in our comprehensive stocks, just the instrument of your liking, at a price to suit your pocketbook.

SMALL GRAND

'HEDGING' SAVES GRAIN DEALERS FROM HAZARDS

'Futures' Furnish Means to Avoid Losses.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Risk of ownership is at the bottom of the grain trade economics. Removal of the hazard is what the system of dealing in "futures" seeks to accomplish. Its the stock argument. "Futures" furnish opportunities to actual handlers of grain to hedge. This protects them from fluctuations in market prices. It stabilizes material prices at least as far up as the sale of flour.

Beyond that point it does not travel far—the "spread" between flour at the mill and a loaf of bread over the retail counter is vastly greater than the "spread" between wheat on the farm and flour at the mill. A comparison of the recent great drop in grains with the cent a loaf cut in bread indicates this to any consumer. In itself it is an argument for the general theory on which grain exchange practices are based.

Farming the Great Gamble.

Agriculture, when all is said and done, is the great American gamble, greater even than politics. The farmer is forever taking his chances against atmospheric conditions. With his crops in the ground, it's a gamble against the weather, against rain, drought, rust, and frosts.

When they mature and are harvested the hazard continues. The price the crops will bring is a horse race chance. The volume of world production constantly fluctuates. Every month in the year sees a grain harvest in some part of the globe, and what the grower in Kansas or Iowa gets for his output hangs upon such factors as world abundance or shortage, transportation facilities, rail and ship, foreign needs and foreign buying power, rates of exchange, volume of domestic consumption. If the city workman tightens his belt a notch and eats a loaf or two less bread a week as a protest against the baker and retailer, it bobs up sooner or later as an effect upon grain prices.

Ownership and Risk Go Together.

Thus, ownership is inseparable from risk. If the farmer after harvest stores his grain in the belief prices will go higher, he is up against shrinkage, storage, interest, deterioration and the possibility that prices may tumble instead of rise. All the intervening holders of the grain between farm and flour sack have the hazard of ownership.

In other lines of commodities and in merchandizing this is passed on to the consumer in the form of heavy tolls. But in the case of grain, through trading for future delivery and "hedging," the risk of ownership is distributed and shifted over a vast speculative field.

In production, the risk is distributed over some 6,450,000 farmers. As the crops come to market the funnel grows narrower; the number of handlers is smaller, and the risk grows correspondingly. Right here "hedging" comes to the front.

To illustrate: A country elevator man when the crops begin moving buys 5,000 bushels of actual grain at $1.50 a bushel. To this he adds 3 cents as his margin of profit. Before he can get his stuff to market, however, prices may fall. So to protect himself he wires his broker to sell for him 5,000 of December wheat. The prices of "futures" follow quite closely the current prices plus carrying charges, and the 5,000 of December is sold equal to, say, $1.55 at the country station.

Later on the elevator man gets his cars, ships his grain and sells it. The moment his actual wheat is sold he buys back his 5,000 December "future." What has been accomplished? Suppose that between the time the wheat was bought in the country and the time it was sold in the terminal prices fell off 10 cents a bushel.

Loss and Gains Equal.

The elevator man then has sold actual wheat at equal to $1.43 in the country, which cost $1.53, including his 3 cents margin. He has bought back a December future contract at a price equal to $1.45 in the country, which he originally sold for $1.55 a bushel. He has lost 10 cents a bushel on his actual wheat and has gained 10 cents a bushel on his "future." So he has broken even. His actual profit is in the 3 cents margin allowed on the original transaction and the fluctuation in market prices has not touched him.

If the market had advanced 10 cents instead of declined he would have gained 10 cents a bushel on his actual wheat and lost 10 cents a bushel on his "future." Either way the ball rolls, hedging has removed his risk of ownership. In this illustration, to avoid complication, no allowance is made for the commission for the broker.

By hedging, the elevator man has put his holdings on a sound basis, and is able to negotiate credit which might be withheld if the hazard had not been covered. Without hedging the entire elevator business would thus be on a speculative basis, and to protect themselves against possible fluctuations, the handlers naturally would have to charge much higher margins, which would be passed on to the consumer.

Similarly other middlemen utilize "futures" as insurance. Those who sell futures as a hedge against grain they own are the line elevators, independent elevators, some farmers' elevator companies, a few big farmers, and terminal elevator companies. On the other hand, millers, grain commission houses, and seaboard exporters buy futures as a hedge against sales of flour or grain.

In August and September, for instance, the mills, by hedging against flour sales through buying September or December future contracts are able to sell flour enough to keep them running until Jan. 1 without risk through price fluctuations as the wheat crop comes pouring in.

[In the next article Mr. Evans will deal with some aspects of speculation as a grain price stabilizer.]

BEG YOUR PARDON

On page 21, issue of Dec. 15, THE TRIBUNE said "Eugene Halaburt, colored, 21 years old, 4337 Indiana avenue, a truck driver," was fatally wounded in an encounter with two Negro bandits, and that when ordered to hold up his hands "he seized a monkey wrench and struck at the bandits." Mr. Halaburt is a white man. He was shot by two Negro bandits before having time to comply with an order to turn over his property.

In last Sunday's TRIBUNE an account of the organization of a new girls' sorority at a banquet held at Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co.'s tearooms gave the name of the organization as "Theta Sigma Omicron." The correct name is "Beta Sigma Omicron."

Yesterday morning Vincent Riley, a chauffeur, who was shot by the police when he attempted to escape after he and five other men had assaulted a taxidriver, was referred to as a bandit. An investigation showed that this was not correct.

BRITAIN BLAMES UNION RULES FOR JOBLESS CRISIS

Will Meet with Trades Delegates Tomorrow.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Dec. 18.—The government is being stirred to action by the growing gravity of the unemployment problem and the small but active revolutionary element is taking advantage of the situation to stir up trouble.

The Socialist Daily Herald prints every day on its first page items showing the extravagant luxury of the rich, as contrasted with the suffering of the poor. The revolutionary weeklies, of which there are three or four published, regularly and frankly incite violence.

To Announce Plan.

The government has announced that it will propose a definite scheme at a meeting with building trades delegates on Monday, and it will refuse to consent any longer to trade union obstacles to the finding of work for unskilled men. The London members of parliament will meet next Wednesday to discuss the situation in London, and they have served notice on Dr. McNamara, the labor minister, that they would like his attendance.

Business men are beginning to express strong disapproval of the policy of doling out money to the unemployed for doing nothing, and they are urging the government to take such action as will stimulate trade, which will bring an end to unemployment. One group has even suggested that a subsidy to employers, enabling them to undersell other nations in the export market, would be better than such doles.

Blames Wage Demands.

There is no doubt in the belief of the government that much of the unemployment is due to the action of the unions in insisting on wartime wages, which has resulted in the loss of contract after contract. A few days ago a $2,500,000 railroad contract for a British dominion went to Germany because that country was able to make a lower price.

Today it was announced that a Belgian shipping company cancelled an order for two 16,000 ton ships at Clyde because the high price of labor is making it more profitable to buy second hand tonnage.

PICKING THEIR OFFICERS

Members of Newspaper Wagon Drivers' union, No. 706, voting at Teamsters' hall last night.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

LED by their candidates, the two factions of the Newspaper Wagon Drivers' union, No. 706, waited patiently in Teamsters' hall, 166 West Washington street, for the results of the annual election.

The contest hinges about the election of a secretary-treasurer. John Flannigan, and Bernard Logan were the candidates.

The local was said at midnight to be divided about equally on the candidates. The polls were to close at 5 o'clock this morning.

MORE BANKS AND BUSINESS FIRMS TO PAY BONUSES

Several Chicago banks and corporations yesterday announced Christmas bonuses. The Washington Park National bank will give all employés 10 per cent of yearly salaries and 1 per cent additional for each year of service to a maximum of 21 per cent.

Bonuses of 10 per cent will be given by the Franklin Trust and Savings, the Englewood State, the Woodlawn Trust and Savings banks, while the Universal State bank will give 5 per cent.

Two Evanston banks yesterday announced the distribution of bonuses to their employés. The State Bank and Trust company distributed a bonus of 10 per cent to those who have been with the institution longer than one year. Those serving less than that were given a substantial gift. The City National Bank of Evanston gave bonuses ranging from 10 to 15 per cent of the year's salary to its employés.

The Public Service company of Evanston and the Mark Mauufacturing company announced the opening of cooperative stores for the benefit of their employés. The Public Service company will sell groceries. It is asserted employés will save about 46 per cent on prices of retail establishments. The Mark company will sell clothing. Overcoats may be purchased there for $18. They would cost $50 in retail stores, it was stated.

The Commercial Acceptance Trust company will give a 10 per cent bonus, and E. Iverson & Co. will give graduated bonuses depending on length of service.

Employés of the real estate firm of John A. Carroll & Brother were yesterday awarded a 10 per cent Christmas bonus based on their yearly earnings. The annual dinner of the employés of the real estate office and the Hyde Park State bank will be held Tuesday night at the Cooper Carlton hotel.

GREECE DECREES MOURNING TRUCE FOR TINO'S FETE

Athens Sets Stage for Royal Welcome.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ATHENS, Dec. 18.—By a decree issued by the regent, mourning has been suspended from Saturday to Monday to allow the celebration of the return of King Constantine.

Great preparations have been made in Athens for the fête which begins today. The Acropolis and the Lycabette monastery will be illuminated on all three nights by various colored lights, while the cafés, clubs, and restaurants will be open all night.

Plan Great Welcome.

The king arrives at 1:00 o'clock Sunday afternoon, and he will be received by Queen Olga, other members of the royal family, representatives of the government departments, and by many others. Naval students will form a cordon of honor. The king will then head an automobile procession to church, where Te Deum will be sung before the high officials. After religious services the king will address the people from the balcony of the old palace.

The Athens papers today state that an American warship saluted Constantine while he was at Venice on his trip to Greece.

Anti-Tino Scheme Fails.

Seventy army officers, who failed in an attempt to start an anti-Constantine revolution among the soldiers in Thrace, are now in hiding in Constantinople.

The newspapers are concerned over the Serb-Bulgarian negotiations, as it is believed those countries may take advantage of the present situation to secure changes in the treaty of Sevres. Belgrade journals are urging a Pan-Slav alliance for the "right to live."

Documentary evidence purporting to show that Prince George was sent to Paris in April, 1915, with a definite proposition wherein Greece was to enter the war on the side of the allies has been given out by officials of the new government.

Says Allies "Stalled."

It is stated that Greece demanded certain definite guarantees, but the allies were "stalling."

Prince George, the documents point out, was instructed to contract war on the side of the allies provided they would guarantee Greece's integrity during the war and for a period of five or ten years after it; make territorial concessions in Asia Minor, including Smyrna and the hinterland, and in several islands that were held by Turkey; take measures to protect the interests in Turkey of Greek nationals, and extend financial and military aid, the extent to be decided upon later.

TINO IS SEASICK.

ATHENS, Dec. 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—The cabinet today received a wireless message from the cruiser Averoff, on which Constantine is returning to Athens, saying that rough seas had been encountered and that all members of the royal family, including Constantine, were seasick. Because of this, the message said, the vessel had slackened speed and the arrival at Phaleron would be delayed. Constantine sent a personal message saying he was anxious to land.

Allied Ministers to Stay.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—A Franco-British proposal for withdrawal of the allied ministers from Athens just before the arrival there of Constantine, says an officially inspired note tonight, not having received the same welcome in Rome as in London and Paris, will be dropped.

The British, French, and Italian ministers, however, it is added, will abstain from any ceremonies connected with the arrival of Constantine and from official relations with him.

Allied warships have been ordered to quit Greek waters to avoid rendering honors to the cruiser Averoff, on which Constantine is journeying to Greece.

Mahogany Chaise Longue in Silesia. Special price..... $98

Antique Gilt Reading Lamp, with silk shade, complete; special price, $75.

YOU don't need to be told how fitting it is to give gifts of permanent utility for Christmas; and there's nothing more useful, nor more likely to be permanent, than Scholle furniture.

There's not an article we have that we cannot advise you to buy; we know the quality of everything here, and we a sure that you, or any person who receives from you, any of these things will e satisfied with it.

But you know our idea about that. Anything we sell that isn't satisfactory, at any time, may be returned, and the money will be repaid, or other goods exchanged for it. Nobody ought to keep any Scholle merchandise that isn't wanted. Just now we're enjoying a special sale of lamps; our customers seem to be enjoying it also. They're very nice lamps, and we've done a good deal to the prices; they're surprisingly low. Table lamps, floor lamps, candlesticks, candelabra, torchiers; you're sure to find some choice thing that's "just right."

Look also at a partial list of the many pleasing articles of furniture which are suited to Christmas giving. Some of them are quite costly; but many are very inexpensive.

CAN KEEP CIDER WITH A "KICK," PALMER RULES

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—Use of cider in the home by its manufacturer, even after it has become intoxicating by fermentation, is lawful and without the bounds of the prohibition enforcement act, according to an opinion submitted to the secretary of the treasury by Attorney General Palmer, made public today.

The opinion is in conflict with the regulations of the bureau of internal revenue, which state that home made cider must be "non-intoxicating in fact" although not necessarily containing less than one-half of one per cent of alcohol.

"Congress seems to have recognized the peculiar nature of cider," the attorney general declared. "When the juice of apples is pressed out, the immediate result is cider. When this is done, an intoxicating liquor, even within the definition of the prohibition act, has not been produced. But fermentaton very shortly sets in, producing alcohol, and all that is necessary to convert the cider into an intoxicating liquor is the lapse of a short time.

"Broadly speaking, one who has manufactured cider which has not yet had time to ferment has not manufactured intoxicating liquor."

Section 29 has manifestly sought to make it clear that it was not intended that one who manufactured cider and kept it in his home for beverage purposes until it fermented, would be guilty of possessing intoxicating liquors unlawfully, the opinion stated.

Possession of intoxicating liquor is not prohibited by the eighteenth amendment, the attorney general explained, and the only offense against the enforcement act which a manufacturer of cider for use in the home could be guilty of would be of having it in his possession after it ferments and produces alcohol.

"I think that congress has, at least by necessary implication, provided that the possession by the manufacturer of cider, even after it has by fermentation become intoxicating, shall not be unlawful so long as he holds it exclusively for use in the home or for sale to those having permits to make vinegar."

Mr. Palmer may be asked to reconsider his decision by prohibition enforcement officials.

OPERA IN CHICAGO DECLARED DOOMED UNLESS PUBLIC ACTS

HAROLD F. McCORMICK.

Grand opera in Chicago may fall by the wayside. Unless the public gives full support to the company at the Auditorium theater, it will be a closed book after the 1921-'22 season.

Announcement that a crisis had been reached in the affairs of the company was made yesterday by the authorities in charge. The sponsors of the opera have made it known that they no longer feel they can make up the heavy deficit, which amounts to about $350,000 annually.

Bills running into six figures have been footed every year by Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. McCormick, the largest contributors to the opera fund.

"Chicago has never supported its opera company as it has its Art institute, symphony orchestra, and similar institutions," said Mr. McCormick. "Opera has never made money and probably never will. There will be a deficit even if the subscription lists are complete. But the deficit will not amount to much if Chicago supports its opera as it should."

ACTION TO TEST LIQUOR PERMIT LAW PROPOSED

A suit to test out in this district the right of the government to refuse to issue permits for the transportation of personal liquor stocks from warehouses to private homes, will be filed in the federal court this week. District Attorney Clyne said yesterday.

"Many owners of whisky purchased before Jan. 17, 1920, and stored in bonded warehouses, believe the recent Supreme court decision in New York gives them the right to transport the booze to their homes," he said. "That ruling legalized the movement of tax paid liquor purchased prior to Jan. 17, which had been stored in warehouses.

"Because of the Illinois search and seizure law it is doubtful if that ruling will apply here. The bill which an attorney indicated would be filed shortly will demand that the government issue permits for the movement of a quantity of liquor from a warehouse to a man's home."

R. W. Stone, prohibition director for Illinois, returned from Washington, where he conferred with John F. Kramer, prohibition commissioner, on the application of this ruling to Illinois.

"The comissioner has not yet decided how the law will operate here," Mr. Stone said, "and until that is done we will continue to refuse permits for all transportation of personal liquor unless it is to be sold for medicinal use."

STATE STREET BRIDGE CLOSED TODAY.

The State street bridge will be closed from 7 o'clock this morning until 2 o'clock this afternoon. North bound State street cars will turn west at Van Buren and north on Dearborn street to Kinzie.

POLITE MAN WHO LIKES TO ASSIST OTHERS WINS $50

Stephen Ryan, Gentleman, Nets Courtesy Prize.

Into the office of the Circuit court clerk stepped THE TRIBUNE'S politeness reporter yesterday. Near the tables on which lie the ponderous docket books he paused, pawed through a volume or two, then looked uncertainly about him.

"Is there something you are looking for?"

Turning around, the reporter saw a short man coming toward him. A Charlie Chaplin mustache was located just abaft the nose. His lips, clutching the butt of a cigar, were curved into a smile. He had spotted the stranger from across the room, noted his bewilderment, and come to aid him.

"I'm trying to find a divorce record," explained the politeness seeker.

"Well, I'll get it for you," offered the man. "Was it in the Circuit or Superior court?"

The reporter didn't know. Some one had told him his wife was free once more. He wished to find out about it. Everything was very vague.

Courtesy Without Limit.

"It was provably in the Superior court," decided the man. "Let's take a look."

He led the way down the corridor to the other end of the county building. Quickly he looked through the big index books, searching for the names the reporter had given him. Not a record could be found.

Back once more to the Circuit clerk's office, where many more minutes were consumed in seeking the mythical case. Finally—

"Well, I guess you are not divorced," announced the man with the cigar butt. He went on to explain that the lady might have gone to another county to obtain it, but that would necessitate a certain period of residence there. It was obvious the politeness seeker still possessed a wife.

"I'm very much obliged," said the reporter, shaking hands. He was a bit puzzled. The man seemed so unusually obliging that it looked like a frame-up to get THE TRIBUNE'S daily prize of $50.

He Likes to Help Them.

A bit of private inquiry ensued. Upon consultation with certain folk in the press room, the politeness seeker learned that the man—his name is Stephen J. Ryan and he lives at 4546 Indiana avenue—was always taking care of somebody. Only the day before he had helped a puzzled Negress locate some records. A week ago another scribe asserted, Mr. Ryan had spent over an hour of his time chasing down an elusive document for a citizen. He is solicitor for the National Corporation Reporter and has been working around the county building for the last twelve years. He got THE TRIBUNE'S $50 politeness prize.

"Why do I help folks that way?" he said later. "Why, I like to. I've often been in predicaments myself where a little aid would straighten things out for me, and then I always ask for help and get it. Now it is my turn."

They're Not All Like Him.

The politeness reporter didn't find that everybody has the same genial philosophy, however. A few minutes later he had entered the empty courtroom of Judge Fitch. Walking up to the clerk's desk, he stood expectantly.

Soon a man, evidently the clerk, came to the door of an anteroom. He took one look at the reporter—then his lips moved in silent imprecation and the portal was shut with a bang.

To Judge Brothers' courtroom then proceeded the politeness quester. For a time a deputy sheriff there seemed determined to maintain his official dignity by not resorting to such a banality as speech. After the reporter had watched his profile, leisurely regarding a newspaper, for a space the deputy indicated he was ready to give audience.

"You Must Have a Lawyer."

"When will my divorce suit come up?" was the question.

"We're only hearing criminal cases," announced the personage. Then he unbent suddenly and, learning that the reporter had no lawyer, agreed to dig up the records and send him to a good attorney.

In the county controller's office, whither the politeness seeker went in search of a mythical gentleman, two citizens crowded him out of line. One man was obviously an employé. The other—a gray mustached individual, whose attire was featured by a fur cap—had come to collect jury pay.

As the latter waited he began making queer noises, which resolved themselves into the approximate tune of "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

"Where can I find Joe Muldoon?" the reporter was finally enabled to ask.

"I don't recall him," said the clerk—a small, bald headed man—pleasantly. The next moment he raised his voice to inquire of the entire office whether any one knew where Muldoon could be found. So the reporter decided to give him honorable mention.

'MAY I HELP YOU?'

And He's Always Willing to Help, So He Won the $50 Politeness Prize.

STEPHEN J. RYAN.

DRUG COMPANY GIVES PRIZES TO POLITE EMPLOYES

THE TRIBUNE'S politeness campaign was taken up yesterday by another business house. The McLean Drug company, which operates a chain of drug stores, is going to award a prize of $10 three times a week to the employé who has been found to be most courteous to a customer.

The McLean company sent its own politeness reporter out and after a visit to every McLean store in the city, awarded the prize to E. L. McCaulley, of 24 Keystone avenue, River Forest, a clerk in the store at Wilson avenue and Sheridan road.

HENS OF SOUTH BACK ON THE JOB; EGG PRICES DROP

A drop in the price of eggs yesterday promised to bring joy to the consumer. Receipts increased considerably and word that the southern hens had gone back to work was passed around.

The best fresh eggs sold at 78 and 79 cents wholesale, 5 cents below the wholesale price a week ago. "Ordinary firsts," the grade which has a larger sale over the counters in retail stores, dropped in the wholesale markets to between 59 and 64 cents a dozen. A week ago they were 64 to 69 cents.

Providing retailers follow suit in the reduction of prices, the best eggs should be obtainable for from 80 to 32 cents.

CANADA WARNS JAPS TO OBEY EXCLUSION LAWS

Consul Scatters Notice Over Japan.

BY FREDERICK SMITH.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

YOKOHAMA, Dec. 18.—Further evidence of the Canadian desire for independent action in matters hitherto controlled by the British government lies in a notice sent to the steamship companies and passenger agencies in Japan by the British consul general in Yokohama.

Here Is Notification.

The notification reads as follows:

"Notification has been received from the Canadian authorities to the effect that, in cases of persons traveling in Canada, they prefer to deal with each case on its merits at the port of entry in accordance with their own immigration regulations. A British visé, therefore, is not necessary for entry into Canada."

Meaning of It.

The foregoing means that the Nippon Yusen Kaisha and the Canadian Steamship companies will take immigrants to Victoria and Vancouver at the risk of being compelled to bring them back to Japan, if the Canadian authorities refuse them entry.

Following the action of the Canadian Pacific in refusing to carry British mails because they were dissatisfied with the contract, and in connection with Canadian concurrence with American ideas regarding the American restriction of Asiatic immigration, the latest move looks like another step in showing Canadian determination to administer their own affairs.

Japan Invites Press to Inspect Mandate Islands

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TOKIO, Dec. 18.—The Japanese navy department, in view of the repeated charges that Japan is fortifying the mandate islands and mistreating the natives, has notified the foreign correspondents that accommodations will be available for the first three correspondents applying, on a steamer leaving in the middle of January for a two months' cruise among the mandate islands.

GIRL THINKS ALL BANDITS COWARDS; SHE PROVES ONE IS GRACE CURRY.

Miss Grace Curry, 19 years old, had long believed that all bandits are cowards, and she proved it when she encountered one at Avers avenue and Huron street. She was returning from a theater with Bart Eberman, 21 years old. The bandit appeared from an alley and commanded:

"Stick 'em up."

Eberman obeyed and the bandit relieved him of $24 in cash, a number of checks, and a railroad pass. He then turned to Miss Curry.

"Get into that alley, you, or I'll forget you're a woman."

"Bah!" she said. "I wouldn't do it on a bet. You're afraid to shoot, anyway."

The robber stepped close to her, looked at her for a moment, and then ran.

SUPREME COURT PONDERS PLEA OF CARDINELLA

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The state Supreme court took under advisement today the case against Sam Cardinella, leader of the famous Cardinella gang, and Joe Lopez, Joe Constanzo, and Sam Farrara, sentenced to hang for the murder of Anthony Varchetto. Former Assistant State's Attorney Raber appeared for the state. A decision is not expected until in February.

Attorney Charles E. Woodward of Ottawa urged a reversal of the judgment of guilty returned in the Circuit court of Kane county against Walter Stevens, Chicago gunman, convicted on a charge of shooting an Aurora policeman.

The defense claims Stevens was in a hospital at Chicago, undergoing treatment for gunshot wounds inflicted by a Chicago policeman, when the Aurora policeman was shot.

DRAWS YEAR IN BRIDEWELL.

Jacob Buske, 1610 Centennial place, was sentenced to one year in the house of correction by Judge John R. Caverly yesterday on charges of having stolen iron pipe from Kilander & Co., steamfitters, at 126 South Clinton street, on Dec. 5.

TEUTONS OFFER FRIENDLY HAND TO UNCLE SAM

New Covenant Is Seen by Von Bernstorff.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—"Our most pressing tasks for the future are concerned with the United States of America; the most intimate acquaintance between the two peoples whereby on our part we will let the past lie buried and direct our view toward the future, a readiness to enter into the closest possible economic alliance with America, and the acceptance of Harding's proposal to revive the idea of an international court or the organization of a better league of nations.

"We must, above all, be confirmed in the conviction that only through the solidarity of the interests of all humanity will it be possible to complete the work of reconstruction and to remedy the world's economic situation."

Count von Bernstorff, former German ambassador to the United States, and president of the German League of Nations society, declared the foregoing in continuing a recent address in the Saalbau at Frankfort, Germany, a copy of the address having been received here from Berlin today.

Discusses United States Politics.

"In regard to politics, we should not expect much from America," the count declared. "This may be inferred from the brief statement of former American Ambassador Hill in Berlin, who believed that for America there is only one foreign policy—the Monroe doctrine. America's interest in Europe rests only on economic and humanitarian considerations.

"Wilson's failure in foreign politics followed upon his recognition that a policy of isolation could not harmonize for any length of time with an American economic alliance with European states. Therefore Wilson attempted a reconciliation between the contending parties in which neither victor nor vanquished should be recognized and, for the avoidance of future wars, he sought the formation of the league of nations.

Speaks of Wilson's Defeat.

"After Wilson's failure the idea of America's political isolation was successfully revived and, simultaneously, the idea of the formation of an economic alliance. Therefore, since in America it has been considered impracticable to assume the obligations arising under the Versailles treaty, the recent presidential election resulted in the defeat of Wilson, who, four years ago, had been chosen peace president.

"Now, the Republican party has achieved victory upon the issue of a foreign policy without any regard to the domestic struggle between the conservatives and the radicals and the disreputable social elements. This conclusion will continue in force for four years. Wilson had declared this alternative 'for or against the league and the Versailles peace,' yet there are many groups in America in favor of the league but against the Versailles treaty."

U. S.-Japan War Unlikely.

Count Bernstorff declared he did not believe war between the United States and Japan was inevitable because Japan, he said, has her eye on China and America is looking toward the south and eastern Europe. Both powers, therefore, he declared, "have their backs turned on each other and one can scarcely believe they would engage in a struggle over the question of predominance in the Pacific ocean. The thing for the Germans to do is not to worry too much over this antagonism and in general not to be always reckoning on what advantages might come to us through the conflicts of other powers."

JACKIE'S BLOUSE AND SUICIDE NOTE FOUND AT RIVER

A sailor's blouse containing letters expressing an intention of committing suicide, was found under the North Clark street bridge yesterday morning by a policeman. The writer is thought to have been Charles Weaver, Jr., a Kentuckian stationed with the fifteenth regiment at the Great Lakes Naval Training station.

One of the letters, dated Dec. 17, read:

"Dear Dad: I guess I'll end it all as I have tried to get out of the navy every way without deserting, so I'll say goodbye to you and dear mother. Give her all my love and also Winnie, Marie, and John. Your loving son,

"CHARLES WEAVER, JR."

At the naval station furlough papers gave Weaver's home as 307 Riggs street, Falmouth, Ky. A wire was sent the father.

The current of the river at the bridge is such as would carry a body quickly away and no attempt was made to drag it. Police stations to the south were notified to watch for a body.

DROWNS WHEN ICE BREAKS.

Crivitz, Wis., Dec. 18.—Gordon Schroeder, 15, was drowned skating in a mill pond here yesterday when ice broke about thirty feet from shore.

DYNAMITE LURKS IN MILADY'S HAIR, ALDERMEN FEAR

A group of aldermen in the council anteroom yesterday debated Ald. Timothy A. Hogan's suggestion for an ordinance to prohibit women ambushing their ears in their hair.

"It's an absolute necessity," declared Hogan. "Girls can't hear the honk of a motor horn. I have no doubt a large percentage of automobile accidents are due to the present style of hairdressing."

How About "Sickle Hooks?"

Ald. A. J. Fisher facetiously argued the ordinance should also prohibit the

"sicklelike hooks they wear on their foreheads."

One alderman said women would approve a law which would "liberate them from the atrocious discomforts and dangers of a hideous style." He begged THE TRIBUNE not to use his name, however.

Horne's for the Women.

"I think we're stepping out of our sphere," said Ald. John G. Horne. "Anyway, I'm for the women no matter how they wear their hair."

Ald. Joseph McDonough concluded the argument with this:

"Lay off that stuff. It would murder you politically. Remember Eddie Murphy? He introduced a bill in the legislature against hobble skirts. The women ran him ragged. It's dynamite. Don't monkey with it."

12,000 POLLS OFFICIALS HAVE PAYDAY

Scene at county treasurer's office as presidential election judges and clerks draw their belated pay. At extreme left—George Fitzgerald, with check; J. J. Leedy (third figure) and Charlotte K. Austin, an official of the Twentieth precinct of the Sixth ward.

FOR ten hours yesterday afternoon and last night 12,000 judges and clerks of election filed through the county treasurer's office for their belated pay for services rendered at the presidential election and the registration, canvass and revision, which preceded it.

"Christmas presents, eh?" suggested a clerk to one of the mighty throng.

"Well, hardly," replied the judge, presenting credentials for payment of $22 for his services at an Eighteenth ward polling place. "I only worked sixty-two hours—twenty-four of them without a break—for this dough."

George F. Lohman, chief clerk of the election board, began accepting applications during the day from men and women for appointment as judges and clerks at the spring elections. Applications were not numerous.

Philadelphia Gets Tip on Courts from Chicago

William R. Roper, a member of the welfare committee of the Philadelphia city council, spent yesterday in investigating the Municipal courts here. He represents a faction of the council in Philadelphia which is seeking to reduce the expenses of their courts. He found much to praise.

Alderman Fixes $2 Limit on Christmas Tree Prices

Don't pay more than $2 for a Christmas tree. First grade trees are plentiful and any person who pays more than $2 for one is being cheated, Ald. Max Adamowski, chairman of the council committee on living costs, declared yesterday. He asked that the names of dealers who overcharge for Christmas trees be sent to him.

Perry L. Persons Heads Lawyers' New Organization

Perry L. Persons of Waukegan, Ill., was elected president yesterday of the Federation of Bar Associations of Illinois, which was formed at a meeting in the Hotel La Salle yesterday. Other officers elected are: Vice president, Ralph C. Austin, Joliet; treasurer, Mrs. Catherine W. McCulloch, Evanston; secretary, J. Kent Green, Chicago.

MONUMENT OF WORLD'S FAIR IS A RIFLE RANGE

The old Field Columbian museum in Jackson park passed to a new phase of its existence on Saturday afternoon when the Hyde Park post formally took possession of the old world's fair relic for a rifle range.

Many organizations of a civilian nature applied to the south park board for permission to use the building, and all were refused, until Hyde Park post applied. The former soldiers are busy cleaning up and setting the ranges and targets. There will be a 200 yard range, a 100 yard range, and a 50 yard range, also a pistol range. The government issued to the post some time ago several Springfields and 200,000 rounds of ammunition for the use of its rifle club.

Many of the boys attained the rank of expert marksmen during the war. Other members of the post wanted to improve their marksmanship. The rifle club was formed last spring and now has a membership of 200.

The officers of the rifle club are Dayton R. E. Brown, president; B. O. Buchanan, vice president, and J. C. Grubb, secretary and treasurer.

Meanwhile the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Architecture is making plans to raise enough money to put the building in repair and find a use for it.

According to T. B. Tallmadge, who has been working on the committee on the museum building, the edifice is structurally sound and needs only renovating inside and out.

FOOD CARDS FOR TRAMPS, IS PLAN ON NORTH SHORE

Another Sign the Good Old Days Are Back.

Had that eminent citizen, J. Raglan Patchmore, called at the Evanston police station last night he would undoubtedly have enjoyed himself immensely. Nine of his compatriots, knights of the road, were there, holding a reunion after five years in the desert of war activities.

Sergt. Robert Johnston, at the desk in the station, looked up in surprise when the gentlemen of leisure asked to be registered for the night. He rubbed his eyes. Could it be?

"By George, if it ain't Jim—and John, and Mike, and——" he went on down the list. "Where you boys been all this while?"

Tales of the Wandering Lads.

After the boys had been settled in the lockup, following a shower bath,

Sergt. Johnston sat up late, listening to tales of wanderings that had led some to South America, others to Australia, and others to Canada.

The nine tramps—for they admit the appellation—had had rather a hard time of it escaping the authorities in those lean years when war raged in Europe. They had forsaken old haunts and sought pastures new.

"We will be in New Orleans by February, if not sooner," was Mike's message. "We had hoped to get there sooner, but were unavoidably detained. A matter of municipal business. 'Twas a hard session on that last rock pile."

Old Faces Come Back.

"It looks like a hard winter to me," said Sergt. Johnston, later. "These birds are old hands at the game. Except for two new faces, I have known them all for the last fifteen years."

There is talk in Evanston of reviving the plan inaugurated by James A. Patten, the wheat king, of years past. Coupon books are issued to housewives and when a hobo applies for assistance she tears off a coupon, good for a meal, bath, and bed at the municipal lodging house in Evanston and Weary Willie hies him thither to enjoy a well earned rest before answering again the call of the road.

HELEN E. STARRETT, NOTED SUFFRAGIST AND EDUCATOR, DIES IN WEST

MRS. HELEN E. STARRETT.

Mrs. Helen Ekin Starrett, founder of the Starrett School for Girls, 4932 Lake Park avenue, Chicago, a pioneer suffragist actively associated with Susan B. Anthony, a member of the board of 100 electors of candidates for the Hall of Fame, an authoress and educator of note, and an organizer of the Chicago Woman's club, died Thursday, Dec. 16, in Portland, Ore., where she had resided the last five years.

Few Chicago women were better known than Mrs. Starrett, who was noted for her interest in young women. During the national suffrage convention, held here last spring, Mrs. Starrett visited Chicago, and, although in her eightieth year, she addressed that assembly several times and appeared before many audiences of note. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Helen S. Dinwiddie and Mrs. Kathryn S. Whitten of Berkeley, Cal.; and three sons, William Starrett, mayor of South Orange, N. J., and president of the Fuller Construction company; Paul Starrett of East Orange, N. J.; and Ralph Starrett of New York City. Funeral services were held yesterday in Portland.

33 CALLED BY U.S. TO EXPLAIN BUILDING COSTS

District Attorney Clyne last night announced that thirty-three contractors, manufacturers, and leaders in the building trades would be examined by the federal grand jury Tuesday in connection with charges that a building monopoly exists. Books and records have also been called for.

"All the records, minutes of meetings, and contracts entered into by all parties interested in building and manufacturing building material will be examined before the inquiry is through," Mr. Clyne said.

The high prices asked for building material, and which are alleged to be the result of combination, are the cause of the investigation.

STAID CITY DADS OF EVANSTON AT OUTS OVER HOTEL

Mayor Accused of Aiding Wealthy Friends.

The usually placid Evanston city council is torn by internal strife.

In an open letter addressed yesterday to Mayor Harry P. Pearsons Ald. Hiram McCullough charged him with opposing the new zoning ordinance because of his friendship with certain wealthy Evanstonians whose property would be lowered in value.

The property in question is adjacent to the southwest corner of Davis street and Judson avenue. The home of Henry J. Patten, brother of James A. Patten, occupies a portion of the block.

A hotel to cost $1,000,000 is planned for one vacant corner. A permit cannot be granted for its erection until the new zoning ordinance is passed. Ald. McCullough is sponsor for this ordinance. Mayor Pearsons favors a thirty-five foot height building clause for the district.

"You stated to us (the zoning commissioners) that you would rather see the entire zoning plan fail than to permit other than residences to be built in that section," the letter states, in part. "It seems to me you were especially insistent upon a clause with a thirty-five foot height limit for the southwest corner of Judson avenue and Davis street.

"The value of the property would decrease $100,000, you state, if a hotel was allowed to be erected.

"You and other members of the council are able to overawe the laymen in the council when you discuss law points, but it would seem that no one, however lacking in legal training, could not pass on the question before us."

The letter urges the mayor to reconsider his actions and proposals. The mayor would not discuss the letter.

COURT RESERVES HIS DECISION IN FIGHT FOR CHILD

Judge Zeman yesterday took under advisement the petition of Dr. Le Roy Philip Kuhn, wealthy physician of 912 Gault avenue, to be awarded the custody of his 12 year old daughter, Kathryn Margaret. He intimated he would announce his decision Tuesday.

A legal battle between Dr. Kuhn and his sister, Mrs. Ada Weeks of Evanston, has been waged for several days before the judge for the custody of the child.

Dr. Kuhn charges that his sister has alienated his daughter's affections.

Mrs. Weeks, the wife of an Episcopal minister, urges her "long care for the child" and charges the doctor with in effect deserting his daughter.

WOMAN FALLS FROM CAR; DIES.

Mrs. Catherine Tillman, 69 years old, 2337 Calumet avenue, died in the Lakeside hospital yesterday of injuries received Dec. 16, when she fell from the rear step of a street car on East Thirty-fifth street.

LEAVES NOTE TO CORONER; KILLS SELF WITH GUN

Leaving a note to be read "only by the coroner," Frederick Seifl, 50 years old, committed suicide yesterday by shooting himself three times while in his home at 1817 South Racine avenue. He died shortly after he had been rushed to the county hospital. Mrs. Seifl told the police her husband had been brooding "over some matter" for several months, but declared he had refused to reveal to her the cause of his worries.

Admits Taking Liberty Bonds Owned by Church

Wilmington, Del., Dec. 18.—Charles F. Eastman, assistant secretary-treasurer, Hercules Powder company, today admitted, according to the police, taking $40,000 in bonds belonging to the company to support his personal stock account. He also admitted he used $20,000 in Liberty bonds, the property of the First Central Presbyterian church, for the same purpose. Both the Hercules and church losses are well secured.

Queen of Puddings-

Recipe

2 cups milk
1 tablespoon butter substitute
1 cup stale bread
1 egg
3 tablespoons sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon orange extract or few gratings orange rind
Marmalade
½ box Campfire Marshmallows
2 tablespoons cocoanut

Scald milk, add butter substitute and stale bread broken in small pieces. Let stand until cool, add egg beaten slightly with sugar, salt and flavoring and turn into greased baking dish. Bake in moderate oven until firm. Cover with a layer of marmalade, jelly or jam; cover marmalade with a layer of Campfire Marshmallows and sprinkle with cocoanut. Bake until delicately brown.

Most hot puddings may be finished with a top of marshmallows like this.

This recipe was specially prepared by Alice Bradley, famous cooking authority, for use with CampfireMarshmallows.

And Campfire Marshmallows are specially prepared for just such uses as this. They are the only marshmallows made essentially for cooking purposes.

Their flavor and texture are different—better for cooking. Try Campfire with this recipe.

ATTORNEY ASKS GOODYEAR TIRE FIRM RECEIVER

Charges Unwise Steps; Allegations Denied.

Columbus, O., Dec. 18.—Appointment of a receiver and an accounting of the affairs of the company was sought in a suit filed here today against the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company of Akron by Frank S. Monnett, Columbus attorney and former attorney general of Ohio. Mr. Monnett said in his petition that he is the owner of forty-five shares of preferred stock.

In his petition Mr. Monnett states that the directors of the company issued a 2½ per cent dividend last fall when they had no surplus on hand with which to pay it, and that they declared funds for this purpose through the borrowing of money on the sale of stock.

"Brokers Got Too Much."

The petition alleges this stock sale amounted to $27,000,000; that the company received less than 85 per cent, and that the brokers received the remainder, and that the issuing of this stock was in violation of the terms of the other preferred stock. He claims that the issuing of that stock damaged its preferred stockholders to the extent of $40,000,000.

The petition further states that on July 1, 1920, the directors issued 150 per cent stock dividend, or $31,137,000 in common stock, and that there was no legal authority for such issuance, as the company was without a surplus.

Mr. Monnett's petition also stated that the company recently borrowed $2,000,000 at various rates and thereby lost $500,000. He also claims that the directors now seek to authorize a further loan of $25,000,000, which he asks the court to enjoin them from consummating.

Hope to Dismiss Suit.

Akron, O., Dec. 18.—E. A. Selberling, president of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, in making a statement on the suit filed today at Columbus asking a receivership and accounting, tonight declared that the company is absolutely solvent. He added that steps will be taken immediately to obtain a hearing in court on a motion for dismissal of the suit.

Mr. Selberling's statement follows:

"Neither the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company nor its attorneys have as yet received a copy of the petition or complaint, and consequently do not know the nature of the averments made as a basis for the suit.

"This action comes as a great surprise both to myself and the other officials.

"The company is absolutely solvent, having not only sufficient assets to pay every dollar of indebtedness but enough to cover its entire outstanding preferred stock, leaving many millions of dollars for the common stock holders."

Another Firm in Court.

Boston, Mass., Dec. 18.—The Plymouth Rubber company, a corporation capitalized at $1,500,000, with factories at Canton, Mass., was the subject of a petition in bankruptcy filed in the federal court today. The claims aggregate about $3,000.

HOLY NAME SOCIETY MEETING.

The Archdiocesan union of the Holy Name society of Chicago will hold its last quarterly meeting of the year at 2:30 p. m. today at Holy Angels' hall, Oakwood boulevard and Vincennes avenue. The Rt. Rev. A. J. Kearick and Quin O'Brien will speak.

MERCY AND LOVE

Hero Surgeon and Public Health Aid Who Will Wed in Romance of War Hospital.

RUTH H. NEWMAN.
[Buck Photo.]

MAJ. DAVID A. HORNER.

FOR twenty-one months Dr. David A. Horner of 6858 Merrill avenue was hard at work saving the lives of the wounded on the battlefields of France. He was a major in the United States army attached to the 38th Welch division of the king's army. A year ago last June he received the British military cross, earned in the third battle of Ypres and on the Somme.

For many months Miss Sarah H. Newman has been a reconstruction worker in the public health service at the hospital at Drexel boulevard and Forty-seventh street. Maj. Horner's interest in rebuilding shell torn men did not cease upon his return to Chicago. His professional duties often took him to the hospital.

Another reason for his visits became plain on Friday, when he and Miss Newman obtained a license to wed. The date is still a secret.

SPRINGFIELD IS SLOWEST TO CUT PRICES OF FOOD

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—A further decrease of 2½ per cent in retail food prices in November as compared with October was reported today by the bureau of statistics. Decreases were noted in all of the fifty-one cities for which monthly prices were tabulated. The greatest decrease, 5 per cent, was in Memphis.

In Birmingham and Seattle the decrease was 4 per cent; in seventeen other cities, 3 per cent; in Chicago, Milwaukee, and seventeen other cities, 2 per cent; in Boston, New York, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, Washington, and six other cities, 1 per cent.

The decrease in Springfield, Ill., was less than five-tenths of 1 per cent.

TISDALE 'INSANE EMBEZZLER,' TO BE BROUGHT BACK

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Gov. W. L. Harding this morning granted the application of the state of Illinois for the extradition of Harry D. Tisdale, the Chicagoan wanted for the embezzlement of $26,208 from the Manufacturers' Junction railway. He will be taken back to Chicago next Tuesday.

Tisdale has been a patient at Hill's retreat, a sanitarium here, since Nov. 16. Detectives located him three weeks ago and had themselves committed to the retreat, where they have guarded their man.

Attorney A. H. Sargent, representing Tisdale and his family, fought the extradition proceedings.

According to Sargent, Tisdale did not disappear or run away, but was sent to Des Moines by relatives after it became apparent he was losing his mind.

Dr. Gershom Hill, head of the sanitarium, said Tisdale has been gradually losing his mind for nearly fifteen years.

"Fifteen years ago," he said, "Tisdale was in a train wreck near Marshalltown, Ia. He was not injured, but helped remove the dead and injured. The event left its mark on his mind. Now he is completely demented."

North American Salad Dressing Recipe No. 4

Roquefort Cheese

Take 4 ounces of Roquefort cheese, mash well and add to 4 portions of French dressing. (See Recipe No. 2.) Serve it immediately.

At the North American you will get a regular old-fashioned dinner: One of those dinners that made your mouth water in the good old days when you were a youngster. You will get food just as good as any you ever tasted, and because of our Common Sense plan the price will be away below what other good restaurants charge.

Turkey, tender and plump, selected from the choicest Missouri spring turkeys: Your choice of white or dark meat: You'll get a big portion—a portion generous enough for anyone.

If you don't want to eat turkey, we suggest one of our great big juicy tenderloin steaks with mushrooms. We cook it before your eyes for 75 cents. With the steak we suggest a big mealy Idaho potato—baked—15 cents. And head lettuce with real Roquefort cheese dressing—35 cents.

When you see the food spread out for your inspection and choice you'll get the kind of an appetite you got from your mother's kitchen. And you can tell exactly what you want. You don't order from a printed bill of fare and hope you will like what you get. You see the food itself and know just what you want.

And because you serve yourself the prices are down low. Some of them are shown in this advertisement. Compare them with what other good restaurants charge? And when you compare them, remember you can't get better food anywhere at any price, and every portion is a big and generous one—often ample for two persons.

Eat your Christmas Day dinner here (or breakfast or lunch or dinner any day) and get the best food in the city at prices way below any other good restaurant.

DEMPSEY BOUT STIRS SECOND GUESSERS

LEFTY WILLIAMS PLANS TO FIGHT SCANDAL CHARGE

Barred Sox Star Says He Has "Ace in Hole."

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Encountering Claude Williams, one of the eight White Sox players under indictment by the Cook county grand jury, yesterday, I absorbed the impression that he plans a fight to stay in organized baseball, in spite of the revelations before the jury and its action. Joe Jackson, another of the three players who confessed to the jury, may join Williams and the other indicted players in their fight against being barred from the game. Jackson is expected to come to Chicago after the holidays.

CLAUDE WILLIAMS [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Williams gave no definite outline of his plans or those of Jackson in reference to combatting the grand jury finding, except to say he might have "an ace in the hole," but his general attitude was one of confidence.

Action Next Month.

Apparently Williams and the indicted players have not yet realized the full measure of the upheaval in baseball which resulted from exposure of the scandal in connection with the world's series of 1919 and of conditions which had existed in professional baseball long enough prior to that contest to make such a scandal possible.

First steps in the fight of the indicted players will be taken next month, probably when their grand jury indictments come up for trial. Action of the American league club owners in New York Friday indicates the league will press the indictments by the employment at the expense of the league of a special prosecuting attorney for that purpose.

Baseball's Own Problem.

The baseball folks apparently do not expect Cook county to incur any uncommon expense in helping them clean house, since these indictments are not a Cook county affair alone, but involve the whole structure of organized baseball.

If the players are successful in defending themselves against the indictments, so as to escape legal punishment for what happened in the fall of 1919, the proposition will revert to President Comiskey of the White Sox, whether to pass the buck to higher authority by reinstating the suspended players, or to hand them their unconditional releases, as in the case of Hal Chase, Lee Magee, and other players under suspicion in the past.

May Go Up to Judge Landis.

In case the owner of the White Sox desires to pass the ultimate verdict to higher authority it would be within the power of the American league to take action directly in the matter or to refer it to the supreme arbiter of baseball, Judge Kenesaw Landis, whose unlimited power to deal with all such cases involving the good name and future welfare of baseball, was made absolute when the American league club owners ratified the new national agreement at their session in New York Friday.

That action transformed the potential power of the new commissioner of baseball into a concrete form and made him the ultimate arbiter of all cases in which the good name and future welfare of major league baseball is involved.

A Long, Rough Road.

The indicted players, therefore, have a long gantlet to run. First the local courts, then the private office of President Comiskey, after that the American league and at the end of that troublous lane, Judge Landis.

If any player succeeds in passing through that ordeal with a clean bill it will be positive proof to the public that he is entitled to it, but there won't be a chance for a guilty man to get by.

Police Raid Ring When Fighter Punches Referee

Philadelphia, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—In a bout tonight between Bobby Burman and Young O'Leary, both local men, the police invaded the ring in the third and arrested Referee Keenan, Burman and Eddie Hayes, one of Burman's seconds. In this round Burman claimed Keenan spit into his face. When he made this charge Keenan tried to punch Burman but missed. Burman then twice knocked down Keenan and as Hayes jumped into the ring to get at Keenan, the police took a hand.

THE TIGERS' BOSS

TYRUS COBB.

$30,000 SALARY FOR TY COBB AS PILOT OF TIGERS

New York, Dec. 18.—President Frank J. Navin of the Detroit American league club announced today that he had signed "Ty" Cobb as manager of the Tigers for next season. Mr. Navin declined to state what the salary inducement was, but it was whispered about that the contract calls for $30,000, or about $10,000 more than Tyrus received as a player.

FRANK NAVIN.

Appointment of Cobb to succeed Hughey Jennings, who resigned Oct. 15, last, puts one of baseball's most spectacular and talked of players in a managerial berth.

Cobb declared that he did not seek the position but accepted it because Mr. Navin insisted that the team needed him as a leader.

Best Hitter for Twelve Years.

Cobb joined the Tigers in 1905, coming from the Augusta club of the South Atlantic league. He went into the outfield and in his first season batted for an average of .240.

In 1906, he started his climb toward fame and in 1911 developed into a .420 batter. His fiery style of play, both on the bases and at the plate, caused him to be spoken of as one of the greatest drawing cards in baseball. For twelve years he led the batters of the American league.

Cobb was born in Royston, Ga., in 1886, and played his first professional ball in 1904. At the close of the 1918 season he enlisted in the chemical warfare service and attained the rank of captain.

Hurt Early in 1920.

During the 1920 season the Georgian was kept out of the game during much of the early part of the season by injuries. At that time there was talk that he would take the managerial reins of the Tigers, and these rumors were revived when Jennings announced his resignation.

Jennings, Cobb's predecessor, had much to do with Cobb's development. He assumed charge of the Tigers in 1907, and piloted pennant winning teams in that year and the two following seasons.

It is generally believed Cobb will be a playing manager, as he said last season that he was not through.

WALSH'S ARM IS GONE, BUT HE STILL THINKS WELL OF THE SPITTER

New York, Dec. 18.—"It's no more than right. There's nothing wrong about the spit ball."

Big Ed. Walsh, once the iron man of the White Sox staff and one of the greatest spit ballers of all time, thus commented today on the new lease of life granted moist ball pitchers by the majors.

ED WALSH. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

"The spit ball is nothing more than a curve ball," Walsh said. "It is not dangerous and it is not a handicap to batting. Much of the effect of the spit ball on a batter is psychological."

While favoring the spit ball, the old star is against freak deliveries.

"Russell Ford was the first one to use a freak ball," Walsh said. "He was putting floaters and funny twists over the plate that were being mighty hard to hit. Every one was curious to know what he was doing with the ball and they might not have known to this day if he had taken care of his glove. One afternoon, however, one of the boys picked up his glove and saw the palm cut out. Underneath was a sheet of emery paper. That was the start—and finish—of the emery ball."

ECKERSALL GIVES RATING OF BIG 10 FOOTBALL TEAMS

Elevens Figured by Records, Not Percentages.

CONFERENCE RATING

1. Ohio State.	6. Iowa.
2. Wisconsin.	7. Indiana.
3. Illinois.	8. Northwestern.
4. Michigan.	9. Purdue.
5. Chicago.	10. Minnesota.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Rating western conference football elevens for the season brought to a successful close by the 7 to 0 victory of Ohio State over Illinois, in the championship struggle, the percentage table is ignored and the teams placed in order, according to their strength.

While the percentage table is used primarily to permit gridiron fans to see at a glance just how many games the various elevens have won and lost, it is not published with any idea of ranking the aggregations as to strength. If the Big Ten teams were to play an equal number of games with each other, the percentage table would apply, but not under other conditions.

Round to Form Differently.

Some elevens showed better form early in the season than others. Some developed slowly and were powerful near the close of the year, while one or two suffered in mid-season. It would be unjust to rate one eleven higher than another after that team had beaten an eleven which is placed above it.

Comparative scores are usually an unsatisfactory way to determine the relative strength of teams. Still, when one team, such as Chicago defeated Iowa, 10 to 0, and the Hawkeyes in turn won from Northwestern, 20 to 0, it would be unjust to place either the Hawkeyes or Purple ahead of Chicago. Previous to meeting Chicago, Coach Jones' men had won from Indiana, 14 to 7.

Indiana Meets Weaker Teams.

Indiana, although it won three conference games and lost one, did not meet any of the strong elevens in the conference with the exception of Iowa. The Hoosiers experienced difficulty in winning from Northwestern, and Purdue by 10 to 7 scores.

Ohio is the undisputed holder of first place. The Buckeyes played consistent football all season and won all their games. Three contests were won in the closing minutes of play by use of the forward pass. Ohio State had a well balanced eleven, but its big asset was Stinchcomb.

Wisconsin, which lost its only game to Ohio State, 13 to 7, is placed second. There is no question about the Badgers' right to the position, although they were unable to cross the goal lines of either Minnesota and Chicago, beating both these opponents by 3 to 0 scores. Wisconsin was one of the teams which suffered a last minute defeat by Ohio.

Illinois Is Ranked Third.

Illinois is placed third. The Orange and Blue eleven was defeated only by the teams which are placed higher in the rating. Coach Zuppke's men lost to Wisconsin, 14 to 9, and Ohio, 7 to 0. The 1919 champion defeated Iowa, 20 to 3, and was victor over Chicago, 3 to 0.

Michigan, which won two conference games and lost the same number, is placed fourth. The Wolverines are given this position because they defeated Chicago 14 to 0 after the Maroons had defeated Iowa, which in turn won from Indiana and Minnesota.

Fifth place is given to Chicago. When Iowa was beaten, 10 to 0, Coach Stagg's outfit began to show championship possibilities, but unfortunate injuries to the backs greatly weakened the team. The Maroons lost to Ohio, 7 to 6, and were beaten by Illinois and Wisconsin by 3 to 0 scores. Chicago had a strong defensive team which would have been nearly as powerful offensively if the best ball carriers had not been injured.

Hawkeye Schedule Unfortunate.

While Chicago is given fifth position, Iowa was just about as strong at the close of the season, but the fact that Chicago defeated the Hawkeyes entitles the Midway eleven to the preference.

Iowa, which is given sixth position, was unfortunate in that it was compelled to play Indiana so early in the season. Coach Jones was compelled to develop his eleven to a high point of early season efficiency, with the result the team was in a bad slump when Chicago and Illinois were met. Iowa was a well coached eleven and had it not met with defeat by Chicago would have earned a higher rating.

Seventh place is given to Indiana. The Hoosiers' setback by Iowa is responsible for the position.

Good Showing Against Indians.

Indiana undoubtedly concentrated on Notre Dame, because Coach Stiehm's men were able to win from Purdue only by 10 to 7 in their last game of the season. The Hoosiers played their best football against Notre Dame a week previous, but were beaten, 14 to 10.

Northwestern is placed eighth in the rating. The Purple was beaten decisively by Wisconsin, 27 to 7, and later in the year succumbed to Iowa, 20 to 0. Coach McDevitt's men held Indiana to a 10 to 7 score, but won from Purdue, 14 to 0, and defeated Minnesota, 17 to 0.

Purdue is accorded ninth place. The Boilermakers experienced an unsuccessful season and lost their four conference games. Minnesota brings up the rear with six conference defeats.

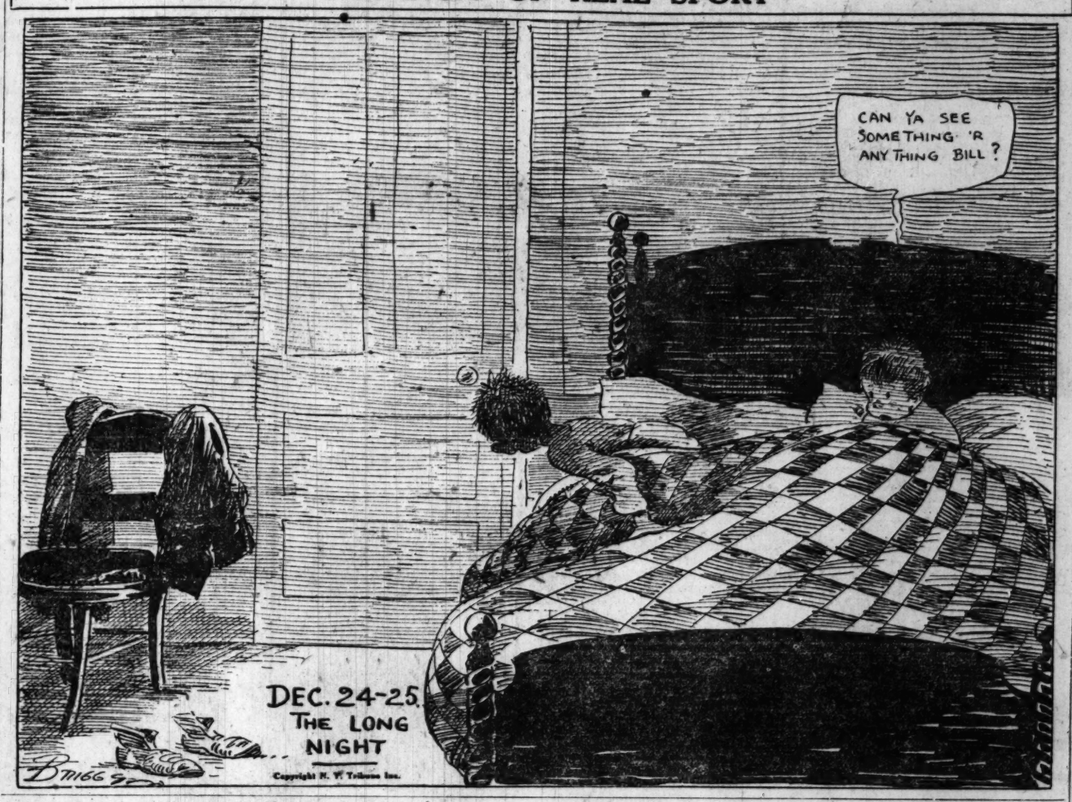
THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT



The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

Today's Question.

How many rounds would a bout between Dempsey and Wills go?

Where Asked.

On Clark street between Washington and Randolph streets.

The Answers.

Sidney Cook, 3838 South State street, porter—I believe Dempsey could knock out Wills in fifteen rounds. The fact that he is champion means a lot in the fighting game. Wills would be fighting against heavy odds, and should he stay longer, then I say I believe Dempsey would lose confidence, also the fight.

Thomas Turner, 328 East Thirty-seventh street—A bout between these two men would last about ten rounds, with Wills the winner. He is a heavy hitter, and should he connect earlier than the tenth it would mean curtains for Dempsey. The champion cannot stand much punishment.

Jack Carter, 3423 State street, janitor—Dempsey has it on Wills. Despite the fact that Wills is a hard fighter and a heavy hitter, he has a yellow streak and would not last over six rounds. If Dempsey should rush him early in the battle he would win sure, but if he lets him stay over six rounds Wills likely would become confident and slip over the sleep producer.

B. S. Stokes, 437 East Forty-second place—The bout would go ten rounds, with Wills the winner. Wills is in a class with Johnson and can hit as hard as the ex-champion ever could. He is one of the few who whipped Sam Langford, one of the hardest men in the United States. The only knockout, I believe, ever slipped over on Sam came from Wills.

Harry Parnell, 4014 Wabash avenue, messenger—I don't think Wills would have a chance with Dempsey. I never saw Wills, but even if he was as big as Johnson, I don't believe he would last over three rounds. Dempsey's record show's he's a hard hitter and as clever a boxer as Johnson ever was.

GIPP BURIED ON BLEAK HILL NEAR LAKE SUPERIOR

Laurium, Mich., Dec. 18.—Snow, driven by a zero gale, swirled about the casket of George Gipp, Notre Dame football star and All-American full back, as it was lowered into its place in Lakeview cemetery here today.

Floundering through eight feet of snow, the family and close friends took his body to a bleak hillside overlooking Lake Superior, and paid final honor at the grave. The casket was carried nearly five miles to the cemetery on a horse-drawn sled, snow making automobiles impossible.

Gipp's aged father and mother, although worn out with grief and the strain of three weeks' worry while he fought pneumonia in a hospital at South Bend, Ind., went to the cemetery despite admonitions of physicians.

OHIO TEAM HERE FOR BRIEF STOP ON COAST JAUNT

WALTER H. ECKERSALL, The Tribune's football expert, is accompanying the Ohio team to the coast. He will write daily articles on the activities of the players, as well as cover the intersectional clash with California Jan. 1 at Pasadena.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Determined to uphold the caliber of football played in the middle west, Ohio State, undefeated western conference football champion, left Chicago late last night on the second lap of its journey to Pasadena, where the University of California eleven, Pacific coast champions, will be met in the feature event of the annual Tournament of Roses carnival on New Year's day.

JACK WILCE [Ohio State Coach].

The Buckeyes spent yesterday en route from Columbus. They arrived in Chicago at 7 o'clock and later in the evening were guests of the Ohio Alumni club at the Engineers' club.

Signal Drill at Denver.

The team departed over the Northwestern in a special train of seven coaches, consisting of a baggage car, four sleepers, dining car, and observation club car. To avoid train weariness a stop will be made at Denver, where the team will engage in signal drill and other limbering up exercise.

Wednesday afternoon and night will be spent in San Francisco, where the players will have another opportunity to unlimber. The next morning the squad will start southward, but a stop will be made that day at Palo Alto, where the team will take a workout on the field of Leland Stanford university. The party will entrain that evening and arrive in Pasadena at noon Friday.

Week to Get Acclimated.

If everything goes well on the trip, Coach Wilce will have a full week in which to put the team in shape for the great intersectional contest. The squad of twenty-three football men will be under charge of Athletic Director L. W. St. John. Besides the football squad, sixty Ohio followers made the trip.

According to weights given out by both coaches, Ohio State will have an average advantage of six pounds. The Buckeyes will average 182 pounds and California 176. Pete Stinchcomb, reliable back on Ohio, is the lightest player on his team. He scales 154 pounds, while Quarter Back Erb of the coast team has the same distinction on his eleven. He weighs 145 pounds.

Tried Lineup Likely to Start.

Just how Coach Wilce will start his team against the far westerners is not known, but indications point to the same lineup as in the important Big Ten clashes. If the Buckeye mentor elects to start the men who won the conference title, the team will take the field with Slyker and Myers as ends; Capt. Huffman and Spiers, tackles; J. Taylor and Trott, guards; Nemecek, center; H. Workman, quarter back; Blair and Stinchcomb, half backs, and Willaman, full back.

In the Wake of the News

FATE OF CROOKED SOX.

WAKE baseball fans, balloting on the question: "Have the White Sox players who threw the world's series of 1919 been punished enough, or should they be brought to trial and sent to prison?" expressed the following opinion:

For no further action.....185
For criminal prosecution.....110

The vote presented many interesting phases. In the earlier returns the ballots were nearly 3 to 1 that the players already had suffered enough. Of these ballots a surprisingly large number were from women, and several from ministers. Not a single voter in either class was affirmative for prison sentences.

It was noteworthy also that the country vote was much stronger proportionately for criminal prosecution than that of city fans. Does that indicate a higher standard of morality in the country, or that city fans cannot forget entirely their old admiration for their one time favorites?

Many letters contained scathing criticisms of the club owners and rulers of baseball—in fact, this was quite general—and held that the players were no more guilty than those who employed and ruled them.

It was somewhat surprising, however, to note the num r who suggested that the players be returned to the game under probation and given another chance. This was not even contemplated in the question. Such expressions were all from city fans, whose opinion was influenced, perhaps, by the desire to see a winner and the fact that it will take several years to replace the stars who are stars no more.

All right; we pass. It's now up to Judge Landis.

In our opinion, baseball attendance will not suffer materially from the grand jury disclosures. Shady pugilistic and wrestling bouts have occurred frequently in the past, but the promoters still pack 'em in whenever principals of reputation perform.

To many patrons, however, baseball will be on a different footing. It will not be under the same suspicion as boxing and wrestling, but its vaunted reputation as the only "square professional sport" has been sullied.

RUDOLPH MAY LEAVE BRAVES

Boston, Mass., Dec. 18.—Dick Rudolph, who was one of the trio that pitched the Braves out of the ruck to a league and world championship in 1914, probably will leave the team. He has been given authority by President George W. Grant to negotiate for his transfer. It is understood he seeks to join Detroit because of suggestions received on the joint spring training trip of the Braves and Tigers last year and a desire in the closing years of his pitching career to take a fling at American league batsmen.

MARKET LETTER.

WITH liquidation continuing in what brokers termed an orderly manner (which caused the poor fish to ask wotinell would be a disorderly manner), specialties suffered more severely than the seasoned, and some under-seasoned, issues.

The utilities board decision not to raise rates blew the light out of Peoples Gas. Famous Players' weakness was ascribed, in part, to the cumulative effects of the White Sox scandal. Price reductions took the sweetness out of sugars. Shaw Taxi blew out a few tired ones. There was no bottom to leathers. Mail order houses still felt the lack of mail. If this continues, they will become mail order bungalows—they're pretty low now, y'know.

The third week in December, crucial to dopesters expecting a turn, has passed without material change in the trend. That is disconcerting, but the market for some time has been without precedent. Establishing losses for income tax purposes has been about the only counter irritant to outraged feelings, and that now has become an irritant.

We think certain classes of stocks, amply margined, are a purchase—although experienced observers will tell you speculation in stocks at any time is a poor chase. Amply margined in the preceding sentence may mean most anything. It does.

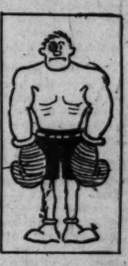
OLD TIMERS CAST ASPERSIONS ON CHAMPION JACK

Counter That Every Boxer Has One Bad Battle.

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The second guessers are still reviewing the fight between Jack Dempsey and Bill Brennan at Madison Square Garden the other night. Opinions are being bandied back and forth with absolute recklessness, until right now the heavyweight problem appears a bigger puzzle than the "how old is Ann?" riddle when it was foisted on the unsuspecting public.



The general idea, so far as we can understand, is that the heavyweight candidates of the present day are a sad lot as compared to the heroes of other decades. Until Dempsey engaged in his quarrel with Brennan, the dopesters had it that Dempsey was the greatest heavyweight of all time. But when Jack permitted the challenger to remain around for a dozen rounds all the dope was tossed into the discard.

Old Boys Tote Out Anvils.

There may have been some particular reason for Dempsey's rather surprising form the other night, but his performance has given the old-timers a splendid chance to make comparison. Dempsey still remains at the top of the heavyweight list, but the experts opine that the entire collection of heavies today do not, in any shape or form, measure up with the old boys.

HARRY WILLIS.

In looking over the present crop of big fellows we find that besides Dempsey the string includes Fred Fulton, Jess Willard, Harry Wills, Georges Carpentier, and others of more or less importance. A careful perusal of this list would hardly lead one to believe that they are as formidable an array as the champions of other days. Could the present list of heavyweight stars cope with such great fighters as John L. Sullivan, Jim Jeffries, Peter Jackson, Bob Fitzsimmons, Jim Corbett, or Jack Johnson?

Not Scientific Enough.

We had a talk with a prominent member of the New York Athletic club today. He was strong in the opinion that the present gang of heavies weren't good enough to be bottleholders to the ancient lads when they were struggling for fame and fortune. Outside of Dempsey, he thought that all the honors for prize ring glory would go to the boys who fought in the past.

There doesn't seem to be any particular pose or style about the present day boxer, he said. His opinion was that the boxer of today does not make careful enough study of his business. The mauling and covering up style, he thought, was a poor idea which prevails most conspicuously with the men battling today.

The old timer, he thought, displayed greater sense while occupied in the ring. The straight hitting style and the beautiful system of feinting of the past exponents were conspicuous by their absence among the current crop. The crouching style never warranted any good returns, and covering up in corners was a miserable way of displaying knowledge of the great old game of hit and get away. The expert explained that when a veteran boxer was cornered he stayed up straight and fought his way out of danger.

Others Knock "Old Fogies."

The supporters of the present style, however, are just as insistent that the old timers had a fogyish style and that if it were possible for them to come back they would be made to look ridiculous.

In discussing the problem with a well known instructor, who refused to permit his name to be used, he was very emphatic in belittling the thought that the old timers were as good as the present day boxers.

"Why, it makes me laugh," he said. "The very suggestion is silly. Can't the people understand that the world does move, and that everything improves accordingly? It is the same with boxing. The boys of today have taken the style of the famous old favorites and improved upon them. Dempsey is a wonderful fighter, and will stay at the top of the heap until Old Father Time steps in and counts him out.

"I can't understand why there should be such a hullabaloo about Dempsey's failure to beat up this fellow Brennan. Brennan was a tough bird, but didn't Dempsey do all that could be expected of a champion? He won, and won decisively, with a clean knockout. So there you are. That ought to stop the croakers."

All Look Bad at Some Stage.

Floyd Fitzsimmons, the man who engineered the Dempsey-Miske fight at Benton Harbor, wasn't surprised at Brennan's staying for twelve rounds with the champion.

"There is always some one to come along and make a champion look bad" he said. "It is true that Dempsey did not look any too good, but there never was a moment, in my mind, that he didn't have his task well in hand, and when the opportunity presented itself the champion was there, like he always is, and slipped Mr. Brennan the old quietus."

In reviewing the situation today it must not be overlooked that the big Negro boxer, Harry Wills, just about measures up to any of the old timers. This fellow Wills has everything—wonderful physique, great hitting powers, and in his many fights with Sam Langford showed that he has wonderful stamina. The difficulty attached to Wills ever coming to the front is that mixed bouts are not popular and that a colored heavyweight champion probably would not be accepted as the proper idea.

Wills Match Is Remote.

Should Wills be matched with Dempsey there are many of the opinion that Jack would be beaten, and with the thought of the Jeffries-Johnson fight still in mind it is not likely that any of the fight promoters would care to risk anything in a financial way toward bringing the two men together. This about leaves it up to Georges Carpentier as the only logical playmate for Jack Dempsey.

One of the theories advanced today in this heavyweight puzzle was that Jack played possum when he engaged Bill Brennan. Jack, it was advanced, was running out of opponents, and now that Mr. Brennan showed he could stay an unexpected time with the champion, it will serve in encouraging others to take a crack at Dempsey.

There is no doubt that challenges to the champion will now come thick and fast, but except for Wills and Carpentier, it does not appear as if any one right now in the list of heavies has a chance with the mauler from Utah.

Jess' Comeback Doubtful.

For several weeks reports have been emanating from Kansas that Jess Willard has been silently preparing himself for another jam with Jack. The big fellow who suffered such a humiliating defeat at the hands of Dempsey at Toledo last July 4, has never been satisfied with the result of that contest.

Indeed, Jess has engineered every effort possible to bring about a return engagement until now Tex Rickard has the pair matched up to do battle on next St. Patrick's day. Jess may furnish a genuine surprise in his comeback effort, but we have our doubts.

In only a few instances in the history of the ring has any fighter ever suffered the kind of a beating Willard was subjected to, and then return and reverse the verdict. The Dempsey-brennan result might encourage Big Jess to renewed confidence, but I can scarcely see anything but a repetition of the Toledo event for the Kansas farmer.

How About Carpentier?

How about Georges Carpentier and his chances with Dempsey, when they meet next summer? is another one of the questions which is being propounded every minute these days. Is the French champion speedy enough, and does he carry the punch necessary to topple over Jack when they clash?

Opinions vary as to Georges' chances with our own American titleholder. Those who are inclined to string along with the Frenchman insist he proved in his fights that he has the greatest qualification, which is the punch.

While Georges never has met men as big as Dempsey has been compelled to compete with, it must be remembered that Georges has invariably conceded height and weight to most of his opponents. The fight between Carpentier and Levinsky must be tossed out of the reckoning in making deduction on Carpentier's chances. In beating Levinsky the Frenchman had a very easy time of it, yet he showed that he was there with the old kick.

No Setup, at Any Rate.

Dempsey took Levinsky and beat him just as easily as the Frenchman, and the dope there is just about even. However, it must not be taken too seriously that the Frenchman would be easy for Jack. Any man with the speed of Georges and his acknowledged hitting ability will make trouble for any opponent. Since the Brennan fight Carpentier's stock has taken on quite a boom, and some of the more rabid have set notions that Georges will defeat Jack when they clash.

The talk will not down that the moving pictures played an important part in Dempsey's holding up Brennan for those dozen rounds, but this assumption hardly will hold good. Allowing that the pictures were suggested as a reason for extending the bout, why a dozen rounds?

Of course, this is only one of many excuses being offered by the stanch Dempsey supporters, but observers at the ringside on the night of the fight noticed particularly that Dempsey did not appear to be himself. He was light and closely drawn, and when he stepped into the ring didn't appear to weigh more than 170 pounds.

A "MEDAL-SOME" MERMAID

ETHEL BILSON.

MISS ETHEL BILSON, a winner of numerous medals in swimming races and fancy diving contests, will represent Sinai Social center in the events of the coming championship indoor swim season in Chicago.

Miss Bilson was a yeowoman in the navy during the war, and for much of the time was stationed in the office of the judge advocate general of the service in Washington. During her residence in the national capital she was the winner of fourteen medals in the outdoor swimming events of the United States tidal basin championship series of 1919, and since her return to Chicago added considerably more "jewelry" of the sort to her prize collection. Her specialty is the diving events and sprint races.

Being a member of the navy, it was perhaps natural the Chicago miss should show adaptability in water sports, and in her first public competition in Washington she snatched a cluster of gold and silver medals from the envious misses of the capital. Miss Bilson also took part in athletic programs for the benefit of wounded and recuperating service men in Washington.

The competition around Chicago is considerably keener than that in Washington, according to the proficient water nymph, who says that the girls who compete in Amateur Athletic federation and Central A. A. U. events here show the result of able coaching and years of keen interest in water sports.

Cleveland Tech to Play Coast High Champions

Cleveland, O., Dec. 18.—An inquiry was received here tonight from the Tacoma Advertising club asking if Technical high school football elevens of this city, high school champions of the central west, would play one Everett, Wash., high school team, champions of the Pacific coast, at Tacoma, on New Year's day if the game could be arranged. East Tech football officials said they will play the game.

PAGE'S FIVE GIVES MAROONS A RUN, BUT LOSES, 29-21

Butler U. Tossers Hold Champs for a Half.

Pat Page came marching home to the University of Chicago with his Butler college basketball team, and took a 29 to 21 defeat from the Maroons before a big crowd of alumni in Bartlett gymnasium.

Page's team was not disgraced and forced his last year's Big Ten champions every minute. In the first half Butler played rings around the Maroons in passing and in the floor game, but better shooting gave Chicago a 16 to 15 margin. In the second half the Maroon defense held the Hoosiers to one basket, and Stagg's team won by eight points, with Halladay, Birkoff, and Crisler of last year's team, and Stahr, a new man, showing to the best advantage. NEW THREE CUSHION CHAMP REAL ALL-AROUND ATHLETE

JOHN LAYTON of St. Louis, newly crowned world's three cushion champion, is a versatile athlete. In addition to holding the three cushion title he was at one time world's pocket billiard champion.

He has played professional baseball, fought a few ring battles, engaged in a number of wrestling matches, been swimming instructor at the municipal bathing beach at St. Louis, and is a clever trap shooter.

He never tried football, getting enough injuries in other forms of sport, while in his only game of lawn tennis his opponent, Charley McEnry of Sedalia, broke a knee cap in endeavoring to stop one of John's shots.

Layton played shortstop on the Wichita team in the Western league, and for three years managed the Sedalia team in the Central Missouri league, each time winning a pennant. He broke a collar bone about eleven years ago which put him out of baseball.

He started playing professional pocket billiards in 1902 and in 1913 played his first pro match at three cushions, meeting Pierre Maupome at St. Louis. He practiced for the recent three cushion tournament by playing pocket billiards, on the theory that hitting the first ball right is the big secret of success at the angle game.

Layton was born at Stewardson, Ill., in 1887, and at the age of 6 moved to the Goose Hill district of St. Louis, which has produced many famous athletes, including Jack O'Connor, Jack Powell, Bobby Byrne, Ed. Swacina, Dick Walsh, and Dick Kerr of baseball fame, and Harry Trendall, the lightweight boxer.

JOHN LAYTON.

START STATE CUE PLAY TOMORROW

With five players qualified from Chicago and four from downstate districts of the Illinois Billiard association play in the second annual state amateur pocket championship will be started tomorrow night at Mussey's Madison street room. Joe Moriarty, who won the title last year and later made a good showing in the national amateur championship at New York, will not defend his honors. He has elected to try for the three cushion championship.

INDOOR MEET OF I.A.C. TO BE JAN. 28

Announcement was made yesterday by Charles A. Dean, chairman of the athletic committee of the I. A. C., that the fourth annual indoor handicap track and field meet of the Tricolor club will be held at the Broadway armory on Jan. 28.

Dean intends to interest more of the small club athletes in this year's affair and every effort will be made to get nominations from mediocre performers. Aside from the regular number of handicap contests there will be relay races for Legion teams.

EVANSTON FIVES WIN TWO FROM LAKE VIEW HIGH

Heavies Cop, 28-6; Lights by 13 to 12.

Evanston High school quintets won two games from Lake View yesterday, the heavies copping 28 to 6 and the lightweights emerging on the long end of a 13 to 12 score after an overtime period. The heavyweight contest was easy for Evanston, Smith leading the scoring with five baskets.

Lake View led, 9 to 7, at the half of the lightweight game, but Evanston brought the score to 11 all at the end of the regular time. In the extra five minute period, Howell sank a long field goal for the winning score. Lineups:

Why the Franklin Gives You a Finer Motoring Service

NEW SCHEDULE OF FRANKLIN PRICES

Type	New Price	Old Price	Reduction

Runabout (Convertible)	2750	3300	550

All Prices F. O. B. Syracuse

THE striking thing about the Franklin price reduction is its relative increase in the already outstanding value of Franklin performance.

This performance has always had real facts back of it:

20 miles to the gallon of gasoline
12,500 miles to the set of tires
50% slower yearly depreciation
(National Averages)

The Franklin is economical of fuel for definite, logical reasons. It is light-weight—meaning less weight to move; and it is direct air cooled—to allow the engine to operate at the most efficient temperature.

Franklin tire life and car life are prolonged by Franklin light weight and flexible construction. These principles allow tires and car to wear out normally instead of being pounded out before their time.

These two principles also account for Franklin comfort, safety and ease of control. With road shock greatly diminished, the Franklin clings more closely to the road. Unhampered by excess weight, it starts and stops more quickly, handles more easily.

Having no radiator and no water, the Franklin is free from winter troubles, from overheating in summer, and from leaks the year round.

This performance, joined to savings ranging from $500 to $800 per car, makes the Franklin a motoring value that is unequalled today.

JINX PERCHES ON SOX FIRST BASE FOR 21 SEASONS

Initial Corner for White Hose Is Hoodoo Job.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Except for two men, the position of first base on the White Sox team has been a jinx job in the twenty-one years since Charles A. Comiskey invaded Chicago with his St. Paul club in the winter of 1900.

CHICK GANDIL. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The two exceptions are Frank Isbell and John (Shauno) Collins, and these exempts may owe their immunity from the hoodoo stuff to the fact that they played many other positions besides first base. There may have been other minor exceptions in the cases of youngsters who have tried and failed to make good on the initial corner of the south side diamond, but the jinx seems to have pursued all the others who have acquired the right to be considered regulars on that job.

Isbell Plays Every Position.

Isbell was the original first baseman of the White Sox. He came to Chicago with Comiskey, and although several others, whose names never etched themselves into the memories of south side fans, displaced Issy from the bag temporarily, he kept on reverting to the task season after season, until Jiggs Donahue claimed the berth in 1904.

HAL CHASE. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Isbell then switched to various other positions, both infield and out—in fact, in one season he occupied every position on the team. In the last game of that year, because it was discovered from the records that Issy had done everything except catch, he went behind the bat with two out in the last half inning and the final batsman fouled out.

Possibly for his versatility Isbell escaped the hoodoo, for he graduated from the Sox into minor leaguedom, and is now the prosperous owner of the Wichita Western league club.

Fans Mourn Jiggs Donahue.

The man who got nearest to being a regular first baseman for the Sox during Isbell's reign was the original Cozy Dolan, who died before his years of usefulness of the diamond had passed. Sox fans all recall the unfortunate end of Jiggs Donahue, who fell a victim in his prime to a sickness which cut short his career and ended in his death. Donahue shared with Isbell and George Rohe the honors of the world's series of 1906, the only baseball derby that has been played between teams representing one city. His playing at first base contributed as much to the victory of the White Sox as did the four two base hits by Isbell or the three bagger by George Rohe with the bags loaded.

Chick Gandil succeeded Donahue for a brief spell before he was sent back to the minors for more seasoning, only to return years later to the south side team after he had played with the Washington and Cleveland teams of the American league.

Gandil and Chase Now Out.

Gandil could not hit a curved ball when he first came to Chicago from the Pacific coast, but after being canned to Montreal he learned to cope with the low benders which drove him out of the big leagues. He was a world's champion in 1917 and might have been in 1919 but for the gamblers. He was one of the eight Sox players implicated in that sensational scandal and did not come back. An unsuccessful attempt to manage an outlaw team in the northwest finished Gandil's diamond career.

Following Gandil came several who tried their hands at firstbasing without much success until Hal Chase was obtained and starred in the position until he jumped to the Federal league in midseason. Once more John Collins finished the year on first.

Barred from Outlaws.

Chase was one of the first major league players to be implicated with gamblers, while he was with the Cincinnati club in 1918, but escaped punishment until the following year, when he was with the Giants and tangled up others with him, including Heine Zimmerman. Chase recently was barred from playing with an independent team on the coast.

Of the youngsters tried out Babe Borton came nearest to making good. Borton recently was suspended by the Pacific Coast league following revelations regarding the scandal pertaining to the coast circuit's pennant race in 1919.

Among those who tried for the Sox first base job and failed were Bob Shroeck and Ted Jourdan, neither of whom inhabited the place long enough to become infected, so they had good prospects of minor league careers before them. With each failure John Collins gravitated back to the job and finally achieved much distinction there this past year.

FISHERMAN'S LUCK FOLLOWS BASEBALL LUCK

EARL SHEELY. ERNIE JOHNSON.

HAVING been sold into big league captivity (to the White Sox), Earl Sheely and Manager Ernie Johnson of the Salt Lake club decided to celebrate by going fishing. This was a few weeks back. They struck off into southern Utah and pulled up at Fish lake—well named, judging by the above exhibit, which was only part of a satisfactory haul of rainbow trout.

Sox fans, however, probably are more interested in the big league possibilities of this pair than in their fishing prowess. Johnson is a Chicago boy and made his start under the Comiskey banner, so is well known, while Sheely is a newcomer, but probably will be heard from before the next big time races come to a drab October finish.

Sheely has all the physical appearances, not to mention records, of a real find. He towers 6 feet 4 inches into space, plenty of height for first sacking, which happens to be his specialty. He weighs 205 pounds, is 25 years of age, and started his career by tossing rattles in a small central Illinois community.

He first played professional ball in 1912 with the Vancouver club of the Northwestern league. Before the season was a month old he fractured his left ankle and was forced to quit. He returned to the game at Spokane and was there in 1915 and 1916. The next season he was with the Salt Lake club and remained there until Comiskey purchased him recently.

The lad never has failed to maintain a batting mark in excess of .300. Last season was the best in his career and he led the Coast league with an average of .373. Incidentally he topped the fielding marks of first sackers in that circuit for three seasons. Still better, he set the pace in home runs during four campaigns, getting thirty-two last season, which was within one of the league record.

A CLOSEUP OF SHEELY.

Young Mr. Sheely already has expressed great satisfaction over his ascension to big league time. He also is quite confident of himself, which bodes ill for Jack Collins, who covered first base so capably last season. Jack, however, may be needed in the outfield, and even if he fails to get a regular berth will be around for emergencies just as he has been for years past.

WOODS and WATERS by LARRY ST. JOHN

NEW BOOKS FOR THE SPORTSMAN.

As the calendar year wanes, the sportsman's season also approaches the end. Already his beloved tackle is stowed away and in a few days the waterfowl season ends; unless he pursues Molly Cottontail during the winter months, his guns too, will soon be put in their cases until another opening day rolls around next autumn. But the sportsman still has his memories, anticipations, and reading hours.

A book dealing with his favorite pastime makes a most acceptable gift to an outdoorsman, and a few lines of activity offer such an array of literature as that pertaining to the woods and waters. The second book printed in the English language was a work on angling and hunting, and every season since it was issued, away back in 1496, new books have been added to these subjects.

The past year's crop of outdoor books, while not exceptionally large, covers a big field in an unusually able manner and has something to offer on almost every phase of the out of doors.

Books for the Hunter.

Every reader of sporting journals is familiar with the work of Lieut. Townsend Whelen. For many years his writings on rifles and rifle shooting have been eagerly read, for he not only possesses a wide knowledge of his subject, but also a conservatism and reliability unusual with those who write about firearms.

The lieutenant is now a lieutenant colonel—you can't keep a good man down, sayeth the old saying—and his book, "The American Rifle," is a sort of encyclopedia on the subject, but mighty interesting reading to the big game hunter and rifle shooter; it has more than 200 illustrations, almost as interesting as the text.

"Sporting Rifles and Rifle Shooting," by John Caswell, is also an excellent work on the same subject.

Those who hunt with bird dog or hound will glean much profitable information from Warren Miller's "The American Hunting Dog." This work not only gives the usual advice on training, raising, and doctoring dogs, but it gives a lot of much needed information on the different families or strains of dogs and the book covers hounds, airedales, spaniels, retrievers, and griffons as well as setters and pointers. Even the hunter who does not own dogs will find this an unusually interesting work.

Books for the Angler.

Writers have given the angler more than ordinary consideration this year; a goodly number of new books and several reprints of older works have been issued since last Christmas. Zane Grey, the novelist, has written a wonderfully readable book on Catalina fishing and one has but to read it to get a severe case of "fishin' fever," and an itching to hook a tuna or marlin swordfish out there among the islands of the blue Pacific.

Another new work on sea fishing deals with the Atlantic coast: "The Call of the Surf," by Van Campen Heilner and Frank Stick. Both authors are enthusiastic surf fishermen and writers and Stick is an outdoor artist of extraordinary ability; the book contains a number of his paintings, as well as photographs that add to its attractiveness.

"The Idyl of the Split Bamboo," by Dr. George Parker Holden, deals principally with the construction of the split bamboo rod, but contains other matter, such as equipment, the angler's camp, etc., that will interest the piscatorially inclined.

Every year we look for a new book by Dixie Carroll and we have not been disappointed this season. His "Goin' Fishin'" covers a wide range of angling topics and is written in his usual breezy and chatty style.

Among the reissues this year in angling books is "Fly Fishing," by Earl Grey, late ambassador to the United States from Great Britain. The new edition is considerably lower in price than the original, and while it deals with fishing in Britain, it contains a great deal of interest to the American fly fisherman.

Another notable reissue is "Bass, Pike, Perch, and Other Game Fishes of America," by Dr. Henshall. It describes ninety varieties of American game fishes, both salt and fresh water, with directions for catching them. Beyond doubt Dr. Henshall knows more about fish and fishing than any man in America, being a noted ichthyologist and fish culturist as well as the dean of American anglers; he's a young fellow—nigh onto eighty-four fishing seasons young to be exact—best known perhaps by his monumental work, "The Book of the Black Bass."

An unpretentious little work, issued last spring and still going strong, "Practical Fly Fishing," by Larry St. John, may not be unworthy of an angler's perusal.

TROJAN BRINGS NEW TACTICS TO JOB WITH CUBS

Evers No Longer "Crab"; Motto Now: "Let's Go."

He is built like a bantam, with the inclinations of a gamecock. He HAD a voice like a foghorn and a tongue like a knife. He has the pointed chin and square jaw of a fighter, and he is.

He WAS the "human crab."

Umpires feared him and players gave him a wide field. Chicago fans reveled in his pugnacity and enemy fans threatened him. Managers fined him and league chiefs suspended him.

He was the "Fighting Trojan."

His Scraps Make Diamond Iliad.

In a thirteen year trip down the major league pike Johnny Evers left a wake of fire and brimstone. His fights became history just as much as his brilliant playing record.

That was Johnny Evers when he stepped out of his spiked shoes and "went over" with the Knights of Columbus during the war.

Another Johnny Evers took over the management of the Chicago Cubs and greeted 700 of his old fans in a banquet by the "Johnny Comes Marching Home" club here recently.

The same bony Evers frame will fill the old Cub uniform, the same fighter's heart will beat under the old "C" that he wore to fame, and the same wise baseball brains will work inside the old Chicago cap. But the acid is gone out of his tongue.

The Trojan had a manager's chance in 1913 with the Cubs.

Reasons Crabbing Doesn't Pay.

"I talked too much and I crabbed too much," he reasoned before one of the 1919 world's series games in Cincinnati. "If I get another manager's chance I'll know better."

He got his chance last spring when Manager McGraw offered him a contract as coach and assistant manager of the Giants, and he showed 'em.

Seeing the return of the "volcano" to the diamond, John Heydler, the National league chief, sent for him with the ultimatum:

"Keep your mouth shut and lay off my umpires."

Not a Pacifist, But—

Johnny then made his debut in a Giant uniform. That very day one of the umpires was "off on balls and strikes." The Giants were howling when Johnny walked out between innings to the third base coaching line.

"Get on 'im, Johnny," a fan yelled from the stands.

"Listen, I'm not saying a word from now on. Look at me and see a mummy," he answered.

New York fans couldn't believe it at first but they came to realize that the Crab and the Battler had learned self-control.

The club owners realized it also.

Johnny is back in the game, and his motto is, "Let's go, you Cubs!"

AW, C'MON; BE A GOOD FELLOW!

PROS TO STAGE LAST GRID TILT OF YEAR TODAY

The final outdoor football game of the season will be played this afternoon at Pyott field between the Stayms and the Cardinals. The Cardinal team is one of the strongest in the west, with a long record of victories, including one over the Staleys of Decatur.

The Stayms will be well prepared for battle, as they have loaded up with such stars as George Halas, Blacklock, and Sternaman of the Staleys and Annan of the Tigers. All are former college stars. Halas and Sternaman are from Illinois, Blacklock from the Michigan Aggies, and Annan from the University of Chicago. Paddy Driscoll will be the mainstay of the Cardinals.

The indoor football season will open this afternoon at Dexter Park pavilion, where the Original Thorns and Forest Parks will play. A curtain raiser at 1:30 between lightweight teams also is billed.

I. A. C. STARS ON ALVERNO FIVE.

The newly organized lightweight basketball team of the Alverno A. A. includes four former members of the Illinois A. C. championship quintet. Ed Becker, L. Pickrum, Trinkaus, and L. Carlson are the ex-tricolor men. For games address L. A. Carlson, 3019 North Clark street.

OFFICIAL AVERAGES FOR A. L. PITCHERS; SHAWKEY IS LEADER

The leading pitcher of 1920 in the American league was Bob Shawkey of New York, who worked in 38 games 267 innings, and allowed but 73 runs, for an average of 2.46 for each full game of nine innings. Stanley Coveleskie, premier hurler of the champion Cleveland team, was second with an earned run average of 2.48. Coveleskie appeared in 41 battles, worked 315 innings, and allowed 87 runs. Urban Shocker, St. Louis, followed the Indian star with a 2.71 average, gained in 38 games, 246 innings, in which opponents counted 74 times.

THRILLS IN SHOT OVER NEW LINKS ON CANFIELD RD.

Butterfield Course Is Pictured by Secretary.

BY JOE DAVIS.

"The shot at the twentieth tee is from an island in a natural basin which is to be converted into a large lake, across the limpid bosom of which players may shoot the winged wizard right on to a hidden punch bowl nestling in the valley."

It would be hard to imagine a more terrifying shot than this, not even a carry across the turbulent surface of the Niagara river, but such is the word picture of the twentieth hole of the new Butterfield Country club painted by Secretary John E. Gavin.

Club on Canfield Road.

The new club, located on Canfield road, between Twenty-second and Twenty-first streets, has made good progress. The first group of 100 members is nearing completion. When that goal is reached the membership fee, which is now $500, will be increased by one-half for the second 100 and doubled for the third century.

The club now has possession of 195 acres. During the last six weeks a large crew of workmen has been engaged in plowing up the whole course, grading, bunkering, and laying out greens. Nine of these latter will be ready for seeding in the spring and it is hoped to have them ready for play by July.

Bond Issue Floated.

To hasten the work of construction a bond issue has been floated and to this President John F. Barrett and Treasurer John B. Foote each has subscribed $15,000.

PLANS are under way for a new course at Barrington, Ill., where the promoters have located a piece of property which equals that of any club in the Chicago district from a golfing viewpoint.

The real estate committee of the Forest Preserve commission is negotiating for the purchase of additional land near the Edgebrook course to provide an eighteen hole course. The present nine hole course is a dinky affair, about the size of Garfield park, and inadequate for its rapidly increasing patronage.

Secretary Andrew Humphreys announces the annual meeting of the Garfield Golf club will be held Dec. 22 at Lawler hall, 3929 West Madison street, at 8:30 p. m. Election of a board of governors will be held.

It is reported that Leo Diegel, who last year was with George O'Neil at the Lake Shore Country club, has signed with the Lochmoor club of Detroit for next season. The Lochmoor club has made a bid for the national amateur championship.

CROOKED WORK FOOLS EVANS IN SERIES OF 1919

Umpire Shows How Well "Black" Sox Worked.

BY BILLY EVANS.
[American League Umpire.]

The wise guy with the second guess is always with us. Now that it has been proven there was something wrong with the 1919 world series, the "I told you so" person is having his inning.

BILLY EVANS

Recently I heard a group of five discussing baseball. All were well versed in baseball, and the conversation took in any number of topics, but finally narrowed to the 1919 series between Chicago and Cincinnati.

Since the confession of Eddie Cicotte, which implicated a number of other players, I have read and listened to a lot of stuff from the "I told you so" brigade.

Asks Billy's Opinion.

I was one of the four umpires in that series. Being on the field, in close contact with the players, in the best possible position to analyze the plays, what I thought of that series might be of interest to the public.

One of the fellows in the group, noticing that I was a silent listener, decided to draw me into the conversation:

"Well, Bill, you umpired that series. You are supposed to know something about baseball. How did it strike you? Give us some of the inside stuff."

The 1919 world series is a nightmare to me, now that I know it was crooked. I hate to think about it. I had such confidence in the integrity of every man connected with baseball that I didn't believe it possible.

Takes Many to "Throw" Game.

Any one who knows baseball knows that to put over a crooked deal it is necessary that most of the team be implicated. I did not think such a thing possible, yet it seems that the trick was turned. Just how difficult it is to throw a game, and do it without creating suspicion, is shown by the fact that Dick Kerr was able to win two games for Chicago, despite the efforts of a number of his teammates to the contrary.

Since the exposé of the crooked work on the part of the Sox, I have heard much criticism of the pitching of Lefty Williams. Now that we know things were not right, it is easy to pick the work of Williams to pieces. Much stress has been laid on the number of bases on balls he gave in the second game.

I was the umpire back of the plate in that game, and was in a perfect position to pass criticism on the work of Williams. The Chicago southpaw is a pitcher who always had the reputation of working the corners, keeping the ball on the inside or outside of the plate, where it was most difficult for the batter to get hold of.

Looks Like Hard Luck.

In the fourth inning he walked three men—Rath, Groh, and Duncan—and all three scored on a single by Roush and a triple by Kopf. In the sixth Roush was given a base on balls, sacrificed to second and scored on a single by Neale. Thus all four runs in that game were the direct results of bases on balls.

Of the four men walked, Williams didn't throw one ball that would have been classed as a real bad pitch. Every ball delivered was at the waistline, and not one of them was over six inches inside or outside, and most of them much less than that. There wasn't a ball around the shoe tops or above the shoulders, so that even a spectator in center field would have known it was a ball.

I regarded the loss of that game at the time as one of the hardest bits of luck I ever saw a pitcher go up against.

Sees Jackson Fan in Pinch.

In the final game I did see Joe Jackson strike out in a pinch with the bases filled, and a few innings later knock a home run with no one on.

Only once in the series did I rave at the way the Chicago club was playing, and then with no thought of suspicion, but with pure disgust. That was after the fourth game, in which the brainy Eddie Cicotte, after making a wide throw to first, followed it up by cutting off a perfect throw to the plate, deflecting the ball to the grandsand, making it possible for Cincinnati to score the only two runs of the game. I didn't think the crafty Cicotte could pull such a "bone," with the play right in front of him.

GOTHAM MAYOR CHALLENGES KID ICE RACERS HERE

New York, Dec. 18.—Replying to a letter from Mayor Thompson of Chicago, Mayor John F. Hylan, "on behalf of the boys and girls of New York," today challenged the school children of Chicago to engage in an intercity ice skating contest this winter. Anning S. Prall, president of the board of education, Mayor Hylan said, will take charge of arrangements here and already is mapping a preliminary program for the event.

The ice skating contest was suggested to Mayor Hylan several days ago by Mayor Thompson, who said that he was acting at the request of the executive board of the ice skating committee of Chicago schools.

Roll Second Half of Intercity Match Today

The second half of the intercity match between Phil Wolf and Jimmy Blouin of Chicago and Stein and Schaefer of St. Louis will be rolled this afternoon and tonight at the Randolph alleys. The first half of the series was rolled last Sunday at St. Louis, where the Chicago men took a lead of 68 pins. The afternoon session will be rolled at 2:30 and the evening at 8.

AW, C'MON; BE A GOOD FELLOW!

For PLAYERS of WHIST
By A. R. METCALFE

THE mystery of the revoke penalty has always been too deep for the average player, although the laws are explicit. The following incident occurred on the north side during the last week:

A club was led and trumped by the declarer. After two or three more tricks had been played, the declarer exclaimed, "Why, I have a club." The question then arose, as it has many times before, whether the opponents could claim the revoke, and the referee selected gave the following decision:

"The laws of the Whist club, New York, do not specifically mention such a case. A revoke is not a revoke unless discovered by an adversary; therefore, no penalty could be claimed in the case cited."

The decision was entirely wrong. The opponents could not be aware of the revoke until the club was played to a subsequent trick, and even then were not obliged to make the claim until the close of the deal.

All revokes might be avoided if the decision of this referee should hold, and revoking be made profitable. The only result from calling your own revoke is to help your adversaries to discover it.

Very fascinating are deals of the type shown below:

THE HANDS:

S—K, 8, 3.
H—8, 6, 5, 3.
C—Q, 8, 2.
D—A, 6, 4.

S—A, J.
H—10, 9, 7, 4, 2.
C—A, 10, 9.
D—K, J, 10.

S—Q, 10, 4, 2.
H—K, J.
C—J, 7, 6, 4, 3.
D—8, 7.

S—9, 8, 7, 5.
H—A, Q.
C—K, 5.
D—Q, 9, 5, 3, 2.

Score—0-0. West dealt and bid one no-trump, which closed the bidding. North had the initial lead.

THE PLAY.

Tricks.	N	E.	S.	W.

West secured eight tricks.

The initial trick showed that north had opened a very poor suit of four cards, and almost certainly held a Cavendish hand—three cards in every suit but one.

A little calculation showed south that the declarer could have but two spades, which made that suit the best for south to attack.

At trick three it was necessary for south to underplay the seven of spades to save the game. West must have the ace of spades solus, and by playing the four south prevented the powerful no trump hand from securing the coveted thirty points.

NATIONAL TENNIS ASSOCIATION TO MEET ON FEB. 5

New York, Dec. 18.—The annual meeting of the United States Lawn Tennis association tonight was set for Feb. 5. Award of various national championship tournaments and the 1921 Davis cup challenger round, should the American team now at Auckland win the international trophy, will be outstanding features.

It also was announced that the Davis cup committee will meet Monday to consider proposed revisions of the Davis cup regulations that have been submitted by the French Lawn Tennis association. These relate to the rules which shall be applied to such matches, raising the question whether these should be the rules of the International Federation or of the champion nation, as is required by the present regulations.

The executive committee has reached the conclusion that it is better to have a tournament of forty bona fide entries than one of twice that number in which half the competitors default, and will submit this plan to the meeting.

Brickies Soccer Team to Play Harvey Again Today

Harvey and the Bricklayer soccer team will resume their struggle to determine which of the two shall represent the Chicago district in the fifth round of the national cup competition at Bricklayers park today. Last Sunday's match ended in a tie, 1 to 1. Manager Bob Newton of the suburbanites announces that Center Forward Walker, who was unable to compete in last Sunday's conflict owing to illness, will be in the lineup today. The only other tilt billed for the afternoon is the Peel cup game between Aleck Currie's North Shores and the Victorias at Foster field, Evanston. These elevens have already met twice but have thus far been unable to reach a decision.

K. of C. League to Play Second Round Today

Second round games in the K. of C. Basketball league will be played today. Contests in the southern section will be decided at the Seventh Regiment armory and those in the northern division at the Broadway. Games are:

Northern section—Tonti vs. University; O'Connell vs. Newman; Columbus vs. De Sota; Marquette vs. Hennepin.
Southern section—Calumet vs. Aquinas; Fort Dearborn vs. La Rabida; McHale vs. Englewood; Peres vs. Leo.

Dodger Trainings Play Rexos for League Lead

The Dodger Trainings and the Rexos will clash this afternoon at Hebrew institute gym for the lead in the City Indoor league. They are tied now without a defeat. Tom Shanley and Tom McGuire will be the battery for the Rexos and will be opposed by Red Kaufman and Ivy Spreitzer. The Ripon A. C. will play the Roosevelt Giants at Stanford park.

Field Artillery to Hold Athletic Show Tuesday

The 1st field artillery, I. N. G., will hold an athletic and vaudeville show Tuesday night at the armory, 234 East Chicago avenue, beginning at 8 o'clock. Much of the talent—athletic and entertaining—will be from the ranks of those who were overseas.

SKATING RACES NEXT SUNDAY.

Although the skaters still are tied up by the lack of ice, over 100 entries have been received for the annual South Side Skaters' club Derby, scheduled for next Sunday at Jackson park. Thirteen events will make up the program.

INDUSTRY STILL SLOWING DOWN IN MANY CITIES

Signs of Readjustment Are Nation-Wide.

Dispatches received last night from cities in all sections of the country indicted a further slowing down of the industrial machinery. Several points, scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific, reported layoffs or reductions in pay.

On the other hand, an optimistic note was struck in a dispatch from Flint, Mich. which said that it was believed improvement in the automobile industry would be seen early next year, adding that the General Motors plants would resume full operation as soon as the market justified that. These views were expressed in a letter received by the Flint chamber of commerce from Pierre S. Dupont, newly elected president of the General Motors corporation.

Where Trade Slows Up.

Some of the dispatches telling of slack conditions follow:

Troy, N. Y.—The knit goods manufacturers of Troy, Cohoes, and Waterford announced a reduction of wages to take effect Jan. 3. Thirty mills are affected.

Johnstown, Pa.—A general wage reduction of 25 per cent, effective Dec. 27, was announced by the Cambria Steel company. L. R. Custer, vice president of the company, said, in addition to the cut, all but a few of the smaller departments of the works would be closed down two weeks.

Lawrence, Mass.—Designers, engravers and printers at the Pacific Print works, went out on a strike against a wage cut of 22½ per cent which is to go into effect Monday. Should the strike continue it would eventually affect the entire plant, employing about 1,000.

The attitude of the mill operatives at Lawrence, Mass., toward the wage reduction announced by cotton mills that employ about 20,000 persons is being formulated by various groups independently. The Wool Sorters' union announced that they had voted to resist the reduction and would seek to organize the other unions in opposition.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—The Utah-Apex mine, one of the largest lead producers of the state, closed. The low price of lead, high freight rates and inability to get satisfactory sales contracts were assigned as reasons.

Salem, Ore.—The C. K. Spaulding Logging company announced that the Salem plant of the corporation would close indefinitely. Approximately 400 men will be thrown out of employment.

Springfield, Mo.—The St. Louis and San Francisco shops at Springfield, Kansas City, St. Louis, and Memphis will close from Dec. 20 to Jan. 3. Approximately 1,200 men will be affected by the closing order in Springfield.

Ask Congress to Act.

New York, Dec. 18.—The executive board of the United Textile Workers today decided to submit its application for a congressional investigation of the entire textile industry to Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor.

The international officers of the union, it was announced, will bring the question before Mr. Gompers and the executive council of the federation in Washington on Monday or Tuesday of next week.

The Clothing Manufacturers' association will demand a legislative investigation of alleged union graft in the clothing trade, Harry A. Gordon, counsel for the association, announced today after a meeting.

The manufacturers will not propose a grand jury inquiry, as was announced yesterday, he said, but will ask Gov. Elect Miller, as soon as he is inaugurated, for a committee similar to that now investigating the "building trust."

LAKE SHORE TRUST ELECTS SHELDON CLARK AS DIRECTOR

Sheldon Clark of 1367 North State street has been elected a member of the board of directors of the Lake Shore Trust and Savings bank, 610 North Michigan avenue. Mr. Clark is vice president of the Sinclair Oil company. Last August Gov. Lowden appointed him a member of the Lincoln park board to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Frank T. Simmons. He is commodore of the Chicago Yacht club and president of the Chicago Aero club.

SHELDON CLARK.

NO POLITICS, SO 'PENNSY' POLICE DO GREAT WORK

Convictions Are Close to Arrests.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

"Politics is the main reason why we do not have effective police forces in the United States. Pennsylvania has a nonpolitical police force. There has not been a taint of politics in it since its origin. Nor can there be. If any governor dared to inject politics into the Pennsylvania state police force a wail would go up that could be heard in Illinois."

This is from Maj. Lynn G. Adams, superintendent of the Pennsylvania state police. The following is from Capt. George P. Dutton, deputy superintendent of the New York state police:

"It was freely predicted that politics would run and ruin the department. Nothing of the kind has happened. The present superintendent is an independent Democrat who was appointed by a Republican governor and is now working under a Democratic governor. Practically every man in the department is an ex-service man. No men are now employed unless they have had military experience."

No Outside Influences.

Maj. Robert E. Marsh, commander of the Michigan state police, says in his last report:

"The force has not been bothered by any outside influence, political or otherwise. These men are actuated by a strong loyalty to the state, strong pride in their organization, and an eager desire to uphold the laws fairly, unbiased by any influence, except justice and the welfare of the people of Michigan."

The Michigan police last year convicted 93 per cent of the persons arrested; the New York state police, 86 per cent, and the Pennsylvania state police have averaged more than 90 per cent in ten years of service.

Compare that with the records of the Municipal court of Chicago, the only one of the several to publish official reports. These show that only 30 to 43 per cent of the persons arrested for felonies are held to the Criminal court; that from 34 to 52 per cent of those arrested for misdemeanors are convicted, and that in quasi-criminal cases from 30 to 43 per cent result in punishment. Of those held to the Criminal court some are not indicted and others escape at the trial.

Obtain Good Results.

Perhaps the contrast between the results obtained by the state police of New York, Pennsylvania, and Michigan with the municipal force of Chicago cannot be explained by politics alone, but there is no doubt whatever that politics locally has interfered with better police service.

If Illinois is to have a state police the barring out of politics at the start will add to the police protection given the residents of the state. That alone will tend to prevent crime in the rural districts.

A crook will probably avoid a territory where—if caught—he will have nine chances of conviction to one of acquittal when he can operate in a large city, where his chances are two to three times as good in getting away even if captured.

County Cops Arrest 1,537.

The twelve road policemen appointed for a few months last summer by the county board also supply a comparison with the Chicago police. These county board coppers made 1,537 arrests and obtained 1,311 convictions. That is in excess of 85 per cent.

In Michigan the Houghton county board has been asked to go on record against state police. The Detroit News summaries "the reasons advanced therefor" as follows:

"They (state police) appear to believe in the enforcement of the prohibition law."

"They leap in promptly and undertake the enforcement of law where the same work could be done just as well by local officers, if they were given more time—perhaps a year or so."

"In some districts where they are stationed they have not caught a single criminal—and indeed there has not been a single criminal since they were stationed there."

BLIND Y. M. C. A. HOTEL GUEST IS ROBBED, HE SAYS

Blind, broke, and friendless, E. H. Friberg, a salesman for the Palace Lamp company of Benton Harbor, Mich., presented himself at the office of Chief of Police Fitzmorris yesterday with a plea for aid.

"I left $90 in my room at the Y. M. C. A. hotel while I took a shower bath," he said. "While I was bathing some one took the key out of my bathrobe, entered my room, and took my money."

Friberg's sight was destroyed by the explosion of a bottle of acid when he was 7 years old. He was on his way to New Orleans. His home is in Westminster, Mass. Now he is looking for a job in Chicago which will permit him to earn enough to buy his ticket to New Orleans, where he has contracted to go to work for the lamp company.

CITY HALL CLAIMS IT WILL GARNER LOT OF U. S. JOBS

Federal patronage in Chicago will not be permitted to pass unchallenged by the city hall into the hands of an organization controlled by Senator Medill McCormick and Senator Elect William B. McKinley. The Lundin lieutenants let this become known yesterday.

The word was sent out that a "reasonable" proportion of the Chicago jobs under the incoming Republican national administration will be at the disposal of the city hall forces and will be added to the general pot of patronage that now includes the city, sanitary district, and part of the county, and to which the Chicago end of the state jobs will be totaled after Len Small is inaugurated governor on Jan. 10.

It is reported from the Washington headquarters of the city hall that several strong figures in national politics, including Senator Penrose, are disposed to be friendly to Mr. Lundin's spokesmen in the capital.

Information from other than city hall sources, however, is that a complete working agreement has been established between Senator McCormick and Senator Elect McKinley, that presages entire harmony in the naming of federal officers.

Astute politicians look for the first developments of this situation when the speakership fight begins to warm up next week at Springfield. During holiday week conferences are scheduled to open at the state capital having to do with the organization of both senate and house.

Word comes directly from Governor Elect Small that no decision has been reached as to any of his cabinet appointments, and that nothing will be ready for announcement prior to the arrival of the members of the new legislature at Springfield, immediately after the New Year.

Home Made Wine Blamed for Death of Drummaker

Home brew added one more to the toll of its deaths when Michael Zumer, 40 years old, a manufacturer of drum heads, died at 2137 South Racine avenue, apparently the victim of alcoholic poisoning. According to the widow, Mrs. Mary Zumer, he had been drinking some wine which he made himself and was taken sick three days ago. Dr. Frank Kadlec, 5000 South Ashland avenue, said Zumer had died of the effects of the wine.

WHY REMAIN A JAY TOWN?

Chicago is a jay town, but it does not have to be. It cannot escape this description merely by showing force. It is greatness to be the great railway center of the country, but it is not greatness to look like a railroad yard.

Why should Chicago sit contentedly in its incongruities? A potentially beautiful water side and a potentially beautiful street parallel each other on the city's front, but between them is the incongruity of railroad yards, tracks, and smoking engines. The beauty of the street and the beauty of the water front are both spoiled. It is a jay town which drapes itself along a railroad track.

Carter Harrison used to say, and a great many men have said it with him, that smoke did not offend any one who knew what it meant. Smoke was evidence of energy, of force, and construction. It was a dead town which had no smoke. That is a jay town statement.

Smoke is an unnecessary evidence of force. It does not make the force. The energy would be there if the smoke were done away with. New York has more energy than Chicago and no smoke. Anthracite is burned there and that makes smoke prevention easier, but proper furnaces and proper firing will permit the burning of bituminous without smoke.

The lake front may not be the Bay of Naples, but when the sun has a chance at the blue waters it is beautiful. A walk along Michigan avenue ought to be an asset of life in Chicago. Sometimes it is, but not so often.

Chicago is proud of its park system and of its outer parks, and it has a right to be. The city is not wholly negligent, but it is not thoroughgoing. It is patchy. It gives bad background to its best endeavor. Frequently we get a fine street and then allow uncleanliness to spoil it. Possibly it all gets back to smoke. That is a drab canopy. It establishes a tone and the rest is consistent.

Possibly if bright, searching sunlight were let in on the incongruities they would claim attention. Excellence is smothered by smoke. Blots are softened by it. A city with a drab tone is not offering its citizens what it should.

Chicago has a good art institute. It is not as good as the New York institute, but it is good, although probably the least of the great metropolitan galleries. Anyway, it is an achievement and an asset, recognized as such by the crowds which go there.

In parks and in arts the citizens gain a direct benefit from what the city offers them and they appreciate it. They would appreciate more. They would appreciate release from the conditions which bind them to ugliness. They would enjoy life more if they could find a release.

The Chicago Symphony orchestra is the best in the country. That is another achievement and asset. The opera is good, although on an artificial basis which may give way. The Chicago theaters are good, although they get plays in the second season instead of the first. The hotels are coming to fill adequately the needs of a great city.

There are plenty of graces in the city, but they are not allowed to be impressive. They are not allowed to give 100 per cent. That is jay. It is jay to do things half way and to allow the bad half to eclipse the good half. New York makes an impression on its own citizens and on visitors because it is consistent. It has energy and cleanliness, force and elegance, vitality and brightness.

Chicago has no consistency. It keeps its pig in the parlor. It wears its pearls on an unwashed neck. It puts on silk shirt and overalls. It has muddy shoes and a silk hat. That is why it is a jay town, but no reason why it should remain one.

"ENTIRELY SUICIDAL."

In 1912 Mahan, discussing the necessity of fortifying the canal, wrote the following: "What is the meaning of the well known urgency of the Pacific coast population that the government divide the battle fleet, sending one-half to that coast? This would be the most entirely suicidal act that could be contemplated."

The wish, said Mahan, proceeded from an uneasy sense that the whole fleet may not be able to reach the Pacific betimes, in case of the sudden outbreak of a Pacific war. That was prior to the fortification of the canal, but we will concede the canal might be blocked by treachery or other mishap. In any case, as Mahan said, the division of the fleet is suicidal.

Suppose, as the coast is assumed to fear, war should break out in the Pacific with the canal closed. If half the fleet were in the Atlantic and half in the Pacific, the enemy might defeat both in turn, as Japan defeated the divided Russian fleet. The result therefore would be that the coast would be as helpless in the end as if it had had no fleet and far worse off, because if the fleet had not been divided the coast eventually would have been relieved by its arrival.

In short, the Pacific states are more imperiled by Daniels' dividing of the fleet than the Atlantic states. If they will look ahead and try to grasp the simple fundamentals of strategy they will realize that the division of the fleet is an "entirely suicidal act," the cost of which would fall heaviest upon them. A united fleet in the Atlantic is a better defense of the Pacific than a divided fleet based anywhere. But as a matter of fact, as Mahan intimates in one of his later works, the Caribbean is the place for the fleet to be concentrated in normal times. From this base it could cruise into the Pacific normally or wherever circumstances indicated. But it should always be a unit able on short notice to strike with its maximum strength.

Daniels follows his own maxim, not divide the enemy and conquer, but divide ourselves and be conquered. He wants a great navy and then follows a policy which cuts what strength we have in two.

But the coast states are accomplices in this "entirely suicidal act." May they see the light before we are all required to pay the price.

A LABOR RESERVOIR.

One hundred and sixty job seekers for every hundred available jobs, reports the Illinois Free Employment agency.

A year ago perhaps there were 100 job seekers for 160 jobs; if not quite that, at least a comfortable ratio of jobs to men.

That was a labor famine, not a desirable condition from the standpoint of the nation's prosperity, but better by far than a job famine. The ideal would be neither a job famine nor a labor famine. Is it possible to avoid them?

Probably not. But the best thought and collective action of the nation should be exerted to avoid them. At this moment we have the job famine, the painful economic disease of industrial depression with its ugly symptoms of unemployment. Human nature and its product, human society, being what they are, doubtless we could not avoid them. At any rate we did not and we have now to deal with the facts. We are in an acute industrial depression. We do not think it will last long, but the stagnation which follows acute depression, like the weakness which follows a fever, will not pass quickly.

We shall have, therefore, for some time the problem of workless men and women. Can it not be met in some measure by wise public action? There is much public work to be done, work which is an economic benefit, such as the improvement of roads, drainage, etc. While public work means public expenditure and public expenditure means increase of public debt, therefore increased taxation with its consequences, is it not profitable, for the sake of avoiding the evil social, political, and economic consequences of widespread unemployment, to intercept these consequences in some measure by well conceived and conservative projects of productive public work?

The elements of the present situation are difficult to deal with and we would not encourage patent medicine devices which will produce superficial results at the expense of injury to the patient. But the problem of periodic unemployment, which appears in the swing of the industrial pendulum from overproduction to underproduction, from unhealthy inflation to destructive deflation, is too serious not to be attacked with vigor and thoroughness. What is needed obviously is a labor reservoir. Public work can be arranged for in good times to be taken up in hard times at a public expense provided for in good times by proper reserves. We ought not to be caught by periodic depressions without these reserves and we need not be if we will trouble to look ahead. Society preaches thrift and foresight to the individual Government should practice these virtues, and we think especially in the matter of providing labor during dull times. There is plenty to be done if there were means to do it. In our prosperous days we ought to have laid up these means.

THE NAVAL HOLIDAY.

The objections of Secretary Daniels to a naval understanding with Great Britain and Japan may be proof that he fell asleep on Nov. 2 and has not yet been called. But we find his ideas so characteristic that we, for one, admit he is as wide awake as usual. For example, the idea that the naval understanding "would certainly make for suspicion among the other nations of the world" is quite Josephian. Suspicion, we grant, would attach itself to any agreement for limitation of naval armament. But we ask the luminous Josephus if his project to create a navy equal to any in the world would free us from suspicion?

We believe that a limitation of building can be agreed upon if negotiations with the British and Japanese governments are begun promptly and in earnest. The Josephian suggestion that we either must go into the so-called league, in spite of the late solemn referendum, or go on building does not belong to an adult discussion. Furthermore, we see no reason why San Marino, Liberia, Costa Rica, etc., should be invited to enter an agreement for limitation of naval building. Common sense will tell our government that if a party to an agreement is unnecessary he is pretty certain to be a nuisance. A naval understanding with Great Britain and Japan will serve all the ends aimed at, and if the powerful reasons supporting it are given expression we shall accomplish it. We hope Senator Borah's resolution will be energetically pressed.

Editorial of the Day

MORAL BLINDNESS.

[From the Irish Homestead.]

Very few people realize the effect of declarations of policy by the heads of states upon the character of their citizens. If there is evident, however imperfectly, an instinct for justice and right, the citizens yield the state support. If deliberately, through anger, the heads of the state sanction a policy which is manifestly unjust, if it permits attacks on innocent citizens or their property without trial in due course of law, the spirit which prompts such a policy in due time, if not repudiated by the mass, affects their conduct also. The anarchist who conceives he is wronged by society and revenges himself by throwing a bomb at some public building indulges in indiscriminate justice and is really akin in spirit to the minister who sanctions reprisals on the property of innocent persons when angered by the acts of other persons who are unknown. We foresee, if this policy is continued, a mysterious multiplication, images and shadows of this reckless spirit in society. What the state condones will very soon prevail in society. As it is society is very lightly held together by legal conventions which have gradually drawn a cloak over the ancient savagery of man. If these conventions of justice are violated openly, if because of anger ministers permit this and members of parliament laugh at that, that spirit will begin to penetrate society and will break out mysteriously in a thousand ways, like a disease which is epidemic, for everything gives birth to its kind. Now, it is not possible for a man to be just in one respect and unjust in another respect with impunity. If he condones injustice he will blind his sense of justice, the sense which above all things is necessary for the head of a state, and, with that gone, truly he will be a blind leader of the blind and in other matters also will lead his state into perdition. It was this moral blindness on the part of a ruling class that led Russia to revolution and broke up Germany from within; and it seems to be attacking a mightier state, and truly its fate will be bitter unless its people insist on strict justice and uphold it.

AFTER THE OPERA.

Madonna mia, if I could but sing
Just once for you one moon-ful serenade,
Rising in hope, falling in chimed cascade
Of sighed diminuendo, and could bring
The plaintive, slow-bowed succour of each string
Of mellowest viol Stradivari made—
From song so sung and sobbing air so played
You might imagine half my worshipping.

But how can I with clavate hands of clay
And voice that crows and preachers should dismay
Court your keen ear, or my proud love presage,
Save only here on this prosaic page?
Doubt not love's deepest where its true distress
Most silent sings in utter songlessness.

LEGACIES NOT IN WILLS.

THE twentieth and latest bulletin of the Eugenics Laboratory, written by Dr. C. D. Davenport, gives some information on the inheritance of mental disorders which the public should know about.

The feeble minded vary, from the idiots, who are no more intelligent than 2 year old babies and do not respond to a call as well as a smart dog does, through the imbeciles up to the high grade morons, who eventually reach the level of intelligence of ordinary 14 year old children.

In the idiots and lower imbeciles there is generally some form of infection in a parent or in the child before birth or in early life which has determined the condition. If the child has an intelligence above this level and is not merely backward, the chances are exceedingly strong that the quality is inherited.

If both parents are mentally defective, all of the children will be also. If neither parent is defective, but both have close relatives that are, about one-quarter of the offspring will be defective. If one parent is defective and the other not defective, but of a defective family, about one-half the children will be defective.

Dr. Davenport says the presence of feeble-mindedness among us may not be evidence of racial degeneracy, but may be due to inheritance from the normal man of the stone age whose intellect was not well developed. Many of our families have a good deal of this blood in them, and it may cause the occurrence here and there in our stock of stone age intellect.

There is not much evidence of inheritance being a factor in Mongolian idiocy. However, the parents are often neurotic. It is difficult to fix the relation of inheritance to epilepsy because epilepsy is a group name embracing many different conditions. Fischbein states that there are more than 100 varieties of epilepsy, some very unlike, almost unrelated, to others. If both parents have an epileptic tendency, according to Davenport and Weeks, all the children also will have it. If both parents, while not epileptics themselves, are of epileptic stock, one-quarter of the children will have the tendency. If one parent has the tendency and the other is free from it, one-half the children will have the tendency. If one parent be entirely untainted, both as to himself and his stock, there is little probability of epilepsy in the children, even though the other parent be an epileptic.

So far as inheritance goes, feeble-mindedness, migraine, alcoholic, hysteric, and neurotic tendencies are cousins to epilepsy. For example, in epilepsy, migraine, and some forms of alcohol addiction there is a tendency to periodic outbreak which is one quality suggesting kinship.

Dementia precox is a form of mental disturbance in which emotionalism plays a considerable part. It follows the same inheritance laws as do feeble-mindedness and common epilepsy.

A considerable section of the study is devoted to the inheritance laws of temperament. Davenport studied the tendency to periodic outbreaks of violent temper in sixty-six families. This tendency does not skip a generation. The children of a temperamental man tend to be temperamental. However, if they escape their children also will escape.

The tendency to run away from home is inherited, but only through the mother's side. If the tendency is in the father's side only it is not inherited.

CHILDREN AND CONVICTS.

J. McN. writes: "We have in our town a new school building from every room of which the direct rays of the sun are excluded. Brick walls on the east, south, and west effectively keep out every ray of sunshine. What do you think of this? I think it is a crime, in spite of the well known fact that the north light is easy on the eyes. Children are forced to remain in those rooms five days a week, six hours a day, and nine months a year. In this place no vegetation, except toadstools, will grow, and yet the children are expected to thrive. Will they?"

REPLY.

I agree with you, though I know of no statute under which these people can be punished. The state of Illinois has just built a penitentiary cell house in which sunlight can enter each cell for a certain time each day. They got expert university advice as to laying out the cells and placing the windows in order to make this possible. Better to be a prisoner breaking rock at Joliet than a school child in some places.

YOU HAVE WINTER ITCH.

Mr. R. C. writes: "I have been troubled lately with itching all over my body. It does not cause any discomfort during the day, but chiefly at night, when disrobing previous to retiring. I never have had anything cause me so much discomfort and misery as this itching sensation.

"At first I thought it was caused by my blood as I am fond of pork and fried meats; especially was I inclined to think this as no outward rash has made any appearance on my body, save a few pimples here and there under the skin (not scaly) after I have been unable to stand the itching and occasionally would scratch the offending portion of my body.

"Have abstained from fatty foods, and kept my bowels open, but all without avail."

REPLY.

You have winter itch. If you are fond of pork and fried meats eat them. Keep the air in your house cool and moist and you could eat a side of middling meat or a can of lard and not itch.

What are some foods containing sulphur? 4. Are all fruits wholesome? 5. Is cocoa a wholesome drink? 6. Is candy injurious to health? 7. How about ice cream?"

REPLY.

1. Much depends on your size, sex, and occupation. Rose gives 2.5 ounces of egg, one-third ounce of bacon and 2 ounces of roast veal as an average amount of meat a day for a sedentary man weighing about 160 pounds and in moderate flesh.

2. It is a fad. Man's digestive organs are built on the basis of a mixed diet.

3. Among the foods richest in sulphur are eggs, oatmeal, whole wheat, potatoes, and lean beef.

4. All those habitually eaten by men are.

5. Yes.

6. Not exactly. Candies eaten in moderate quantity after meals are not. Candy eaten before meals upsets the appetite. Eaten in excess it tends to cause diabetes, obesity, pimples, bad skin, boils.

7. Good ice cream prepared under sanitary control is wholesome. It has two disadvantages of sugar, it is to ohighly flavored and it carries too much carbohydrates.

FEED BABY AS AT PRESENT.

R. R. writes: "I am a Spanish woman, 26 years old, married and have a six months old baby. For several weeks I have been troubled with heartaches. Is this any cause for quitting the baby's breast feeding to avoid heart disease?"

REPLY.

Keep the baby at the breast.

YES.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

WHEN THE FARMER LOSES ALL LOSE.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 12.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Business is rapidly approaching stagnation. Factories are shutting down and unemployment begins to loom as a problem, during the next four or five months.

The shrinkage of nearly five billion dollars in the price of agricultural products since last July is the one big factor in this situation.

This reduced purchasing power of farmers is what is stopping factories.

Consumers have been led to believe there was no bottom to the wheat market and have held off on purchases of flour.

From July 1 to Nov. 13 the mills of this country have ground in round numbers 66,000,000 bushels less wheat than a year ago.

The people of the United States have not stopped eating wheat bread. They have merely been buying from hand to mouth, looking for and to a degree forcing lower wheat prices, and consuming reserve stocks of flour.

For every cent the American people have saved on flour by this policy they have lost dollars in wages and profits.

Normal buying would have done much to have prevented the disastrous and ruinous drop in wheat. Would, I think, have prevented the price going below $1.80 in Minneapolis.

The world situation is such that I feel wheat has seen its lowest point. Now if every daily paper in the United States will start a buy a barrel of flour campaign it will put wheat up to a price where farmers can afford to sell. They can pay ther bank loans, thereby reducing the credit strain, buy needed goods and start the wheels of commerce and industry turning.

This is not a selfish proposition as you may think, judging merely from its source.

Restoration promptly of as much of the purchasing power of the farmers means money to us all. H. N. OWEN, Publisher Farm, Stock and Home.

FARM LAND AND FARMERS' LOSSES.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In his letter published yesterday, J. C. Coen of Indiana reveals the main reason for the farmers' apparent loss in raising wheat, wherein he uses $300 per acre as value of land as first basis of cost. His tax item, which is equivalent to $960 a year on 160 acres, looks very high. Last week I was talking with a prosperous Illinois farmer, who said no land was worth over $100 per acre for raising wheat.

I have interviewed several Illinois and two Dakota farmers, and in no case did they put cost half as high as Mr. Coen. Although raising five bushels less per acre, the Dakota farmers' stated cost was less than 30% of Mr. Coen's figures. Mr. Coen makes no omission in figuring costs, but neglects to make any allowance on credit side for value of straw, which is selling for $12 to $13 per ton, or for winter grazing.

If farmers are losing money in raising wheat at $2, how was it possible for them to make enough before the war to pay off old mortgages, increase their holdings several times, retire, and live in towns and cities, when they were getting an average of less than 85 cents for same? Yours truly, R. H. B.

BLUE LAWS.

U. S. S. Broome, Cherbourg, France, Nov. 27.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Through the courtesy of the American Library association or some other sensible American organization we receive THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE aboard this ship every time mail arrives. While glancing through the columns and perusing their contents I notice that much attention is being given to bolshevism. In this connection, the time seems opportune to call attention to the activities of the Anti-Saloon league for the "Blue Law" Sunday and against the smokers of the dirty weed. It appears to me that the men and women who comprise the Anti-Saloon league might direct their energies to some more productive occupation than trying to take from the working man what little pleasure there is left for him after six days of toil. The movement to which they are now directing their efforts certainly is playing into the hands of the agitators against one of the few governments of the world.

SHE MEETS NO $50 PRIZE WINNER.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I have read with much interest Arthur Foley's letter, "When Personal Liberty Ceases." He should not allow a small matter of that kind worry him. He, at least, can go to the city alone and have a good time. But what about the lonesome woman, strange in a city of this size, who cannot go about unescorted?

Take my own case, for instance. I, a stranger, a widow past 30 by quite a few years; raised in a refined home, always have led a clean, moral life, go to church sometimes; being of a friendly nature, I make advances to women; they are polite, smile, but turn their eyebrows and look, that is all.

So why not have a "social club" for strangers? The women of Chicago never mind me of the toothache. When one meets a friend who is complaining of the toothache, we generally say to ourselves: "Well, my tooth does not ache, so I don't give a dern if yours does ache."

That is the way some church women looked at me when I was complaining of how lonesome I was. They seemed to say, out of their eyes, "I have a husband and a home"; or, "I have a cross heart, so I don't give a dern if you have not." So, Mr. Foley, you haven't any worries.
A WOMAN STRANGER.

THE REVIVED DEAD LETTER.

Chicago, Dec. 15.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Recently I received a letter addressed to me at New Haven, Conn., where I formerly lived, containing an order for literature and inclosing the price of the same. Why the letter did not follow me to Chicago, as hundreds of others have, I cannot imagine. Instead it was advertised at New Haven and soon found its way to the dead letter office at Washington, where it has reposed safely for six and one-half years. The question is, How did I ever come into possession of the letter? Two explanations are possible. One is that the recent election gave Washington such a jar that even the dead letter office began to show signs of life, and my poor discouraged letter started on its journey again and arrived in Chicago in about a week, where it easily found its destination. It is a striking testimony to the fact that Mr. Burleson is incompetent to manage even a dead letter office, much less the millions of living epistles which the American people are daily sending out. The other explanation is this, that on the receipt of the election news Mr. Burleson, whose chronic hobby is to do the wrong thing, drank up all the embalming fluid in the establishment, mistaking it for aqua vitae. But even embalming fluid could not long conserve his true condition, and soon the remains became so offensive that even dead letters turned over in their tomb, and one which had been only a few years under his misdirection, actually rose up and demanded to be sent somewhere, anywhere provided it was a long distance from Washington. The dead clerks of a dead chief, scared to life at the thought of the exposures which would occur in their department next March, combined, and hence it is many people living at points remote from Washington have recently received letters which have remained for years in Mr. Burleson's Mausoleum, dead but unburied. Delays are unavoidable at times in the transmission of mail, but delays seem to be the regular thing, and prompt delivery the exception, and thus it is that the whole American people have suffered at the hands of this bolster whose incompetence is only equaled by his conceit, and often we have been unjustly accused of carelessness, and perhaps of dishonesty, by correspondents who did not know us. It is to be hoped that every administrative building in Washington will be thoroughly disinfected next spring. For myself, I prefer a good old fashioned sod burial, when the time comes, but for deceased members of the Wilson administration cremation is by all means the most sanitary and satisfactory.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago book store were:

FICTION.

"Mary Wollaston" [Bobbs Merrill], by Henry Kitchell Webster.
"The Age of Innocence" [Appleton], by Edith Wharton.
"Main Street" [Harcourt, Brace & Howe], by Sinclair Lewis.
"The Captives" [Doran], by Hugh Walpole.
"Harriet and the Piper" [Doubleday Page], by Kathleen Norris.
"A Man for the Ages" [Bobbs Merrill], by Irving Bacheller.

NONFICTION.

"The Sea and the Jungle" [Dutton], by H. M. Tomlinson.
"Outline of History" [Macmillan], by H. G. Wells.
"The Autobiography of Margot Asquith" [Doran].

Last week's six best circulators in the public library were:

"Mary Wollaston," by Henry Kitchell Webster.
"The Autobiography of Margot Asquith."
"Potterism," by Rose Macaulay.
"Outline of History," by H. G. Wells.
"Main Street," by Sinclair Lewis.
"White Shadows in the South Seas," by Frederick O'Brien.

A CHRISTMAS wish to the Tabloidites: May your holly wreathed packages contain all of the books that you have been longing for, the honest, satisfying companionship of old book friends, and the delightful piquancy of new ones. And for the new year, the leisure and quiet to enjoy those friends, to watch the shifting beauties of the sunset, the maze of the rainbow, with no thought of the probable pot of gold paint that splashes over one and lies at the end of the other—the time to read for the sheer joy of reading. I can imagine no greater blessing, no surer comfort in a life raucous with the screeches of a strangling loop and grayed by the smoke of an ironbound city.

"The Letters of William James" are even more intriguing in their two volumes than they promised to be from the sample of them which was published in a magazine. They are the sort of letters that one hopes men of genius write, but the sort which are rarely published. Letters—as a literary monument—are too often dull and impressive and informative. When they are the unrestrained personality of the writer they are the most charming kind of writing. They should be, and are, in the case of a few famous literary correspondences, more vivid and more charming than anything else the writer has done.

We have all known the insidious charm of a real letter. A bore in person has often become our best friend through his—or her—fascinating powers with a fountain pen. When letters of great men are published they too often are robbed of that vigor of the pleasantry of the moment. All of the jaunty nothings which are the strength of real letters are carefully edited lest the writer appear to diffuse his life.

Henry James has done a brilliant bit of editing in these letters of his father. He has preserved the fine, casual humor and gentleness of the letters, and thus made of his father a personality inspirited and inspiring through his letters as he must have been in his own person.

I have never known a Harvard man of the college generations, which included the professorship of William James, who did not reverence and love his influence and who did not speak first of all of his essential humanness. That gracious, fun-loving personality has been loyally preserved by his son in his edition of "The Letters of William James."

"Seven Men," by Max Beerbohm, is my idea of the most distinguished separate book of the season. First of all it is Max Beerbohm and Max Beerbohm at his best. The stories in it are the kind which make a complete appeal to the intelligence of the reader, subtly ironic, humorous in that unobvious manner which has won for the author the label "the incomparable Max." They are, also, brilliant recreations of the literary atmosphere of those oft-discussed Yellow Book days. Even the title is more than the usual descriptive or provocative one.

There are only five stories. Only six men are mentioned. And then suddenly you realize that the author has made himself so inextricably a part of each story that the seven men are the six and Max Beerbohm. There is his unrivaled use of the supernatural, also, to give the book an added fillip.

I liked the little blue English edition, but when I saw the book which Alfred A. Knopf made I lost all allegiance to it. The American edition will probably have a high premium value in later years. The English edition does not contain the—also incomparable—sketches, without which no book of Max Beerbohm is really complete. The American edition is limited to two thousand copies, numbered, and it is printed on good paper in type which wasn't intended by oculists for their own foul ends.

And, ere we part, just a word about Max Beerbohm's "A Christmas Garland," the esoteric gift de luxe, comparatively cheap so far as the gold of the market place goes, but—again incomparably—luxuriant in the gold of the intellect.

"The Bairnsfather Case" is another sort of autobiography—a really humorous tale of the life of one Bruce Bairnsfather of the late war. It is written in the form of a trial (partially). The creator of Alf and Bill and Bert is arraigned for being alive and creating a disturbance by his jokes. In a casual, jaunty way the entire ups and downs of that arraignment are recorded. Bruce Bairnsfather himself made the drawing for the jacket, which bears the sentence, "Five years' hard laughing at your own jokes," sternly pronounced by one of the mustached trio (I never can remember which is which). The book ends with the pleasant au revoir—"I must stop. The man's come about the next war."

For those who like the special brand of confectionery that Berta Ruck writes, there is her latest novel, "The Bridge of Kisses," and a little volume of "American Snap-Shots," made by a most sympathetic operator of an English literary camera. "American Snap-Shots," by the way, is dedicated to "the girl who combines all that is best of Ireland with all that is brightest of America, Mabel McElliott," our own Mabel, formerly a member of THE TRIBUNE staff and now on the New York Daily News.

Mary Roberts Rinehart has written, especially for Christmas, a romance of chivalric France. It's called "The Truce of God," and it has all of the sentiment and pretty pictures demanded by the Christmas best seller.

"Red Earth" is a group of desert songs by Alice Corbin, known and beloved by all lovers of poetry. They are peaceful songs of the power of the desert, powerful songs of the peace of great places. There are at times rich Spanish folk songs, at others Chippewa lays, and at others the fine poetic cries of Alice Corbin herself. They are at all times verses to own.

"The Prodigal Village" is another story especially for Christmas. It is Irving Bacheller's simple plea for the simple virtues. It isn't a preachment, just a nice gentle story sincerely written by a man who is himself a compendium of the simple virtues, an honest—though not blind—lover of mankind.

For the Adams adherents—and they are almost exactly the number of the readers of "The Education of Henry Adams"—there is much Adamsiana this year. First, in importance, there are the two volumes, "A Cycle of Adams Letters," containing the letters which Charles Francis Adams wrote to his two sons, Henry and Charles Francis Jr., and the letters they wrote to him during the years of the civil war. They have the added call of being intimate reactions to that feverish period of our national history, the reactions of some of the best minds of the day.

Then there is a delightfully unimportant volume of letters which Henry Adams wrote to his niece, Mabel La Farge, letters from the south seas when she was 15, rounded out by letters many years later to her children. Mrs. La Farge has written her memories of her uncle very tenderly.

She explains, for instance, the absolute absence of any mention of his wife by Henry Adams in the Education. He was so deeply devoted to her that he never could even mention her name after her death, and he shared his sorrow with no one. The volume also contains the "Prayer to the Virgin of Chartres."

"Tales of a Vanishing River" is the latest volume of sketches with words, fishers needle, and pencil to bear the imprint of Earl H. Reed. They are tales of the Kankakee, old legends, humorous anecdotes, and word pictures enhanced with pencil sketches of the picturesque old characters along the river, and with pictures of the swamp-duck and crane cradling marshes.

Two delightful travel books on the McBride lists are "Riviera Towns," by Herbert Adams Gibbons, with thirty-two of Lester Hornby's alluring sketches, and "South of Suez," by William Ashley Anderson, travels in Somaliland, where there is less garbing in peau de femme and peau d'homme than in the south seas, but no less thrilling adventure.

"High Society" is a picture book de luxe, a dashing volume of cartoons by Peter—the lady who makes her pen speak with the tongues of fashionable fiends, angels, and has not charity. It is subtitled "Hints on How to Attain, Retain, and Survive It." "A Pictorical Guide to Life in Our Upper Circles," with prose precepts by Dorothy Parker, George S. Chappell, and Frank Crowninshield. Which reminds me of that perfectly delightful little book called "Manners for the Metropolis," by Frank Crowninshield—one of the best books of its for the Metropolis," by Frank Crowninshield—one of the best books of its kind. American humor, neglected because it presupposes in the reader's mind a couple of convolutions of the brain.

"Hopalong Cassidy" has a prize pupil in "Johnny Nelson." Clarence E. Mulford has written another dashing western story under the title of his hero's name.

D. Appleton & Co. have brought out a special gift edition of "Uncle Remus," by Joel Chandler Harris, with an introduction by Thomas Nelson Page, and illustrations by A. B. Frost and A. W. Kemble.

Thomas Hamilton, whose latest novel is "The Blue Room," speaks with supervisory, he believes, when he says that he thinks Ireland should be free. So is, as you know, the brother of Sir Philip Gibbs, half English, half Irish, and lately a completely naturalized American.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

A Visit From St. Nicholas

by Clement Clark Moore

'Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the house
Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse;
The stockings were hung by the chimney with care
In hopes that St. Nicholas soon would be there;
The children were nestled all snug in their beds,
While visions of sugar-plums danced in their heads;
And mamma in her kerchief, and I in my cap,
Had just settled our brains for a long winter's nap,
When out on the lawn there arose such a clatter
I sprang from the bed to see what was the matter
Away to the window I flew like a flash,
Tore open the shutters and threw up the sash.
The moon on the breast of the new-fallen snow
Gave the luster of midday to objects below,
When what to my wondering eyes should appear
But a miniature sleigh and eight tiny reindeer,
With a little old driver, so lively and quick,
I knew in a moment it must be St. Nick.
More rapid than eagles his coursers they came,
And he whistled, and shouted, and called them by name:
"Now, Dasher! Now, Dancer! Now, Prancer and Vixen!
On, Comet! On, Cupid! On, Donder and Blitzen!
To the top of the porch! to the top of the wall!
Now dash away, dash away, dash away, all!"
As dry leaves that before the wild hurricane fly,
When they meet with an obstacle, mount to the sky,
So up to the housetop the coursers they flew,
With the sleigh full of toys, and St. Nicholas, too.
And then, in a twinkling, I heard on the roof
The prancing and pawing of each little hoof.
As I drew in my head, and was turning around,
Down the chimney St. Nicholas came with a bound.
He was dressed all in fur, from his head to his foot,
And his clothes were all tarnished with ashes and soot;

A bundle of toys he had flung on his back,
And he looked like a peddler just opening his pack.
His eyes—how they twinkled! his dimples how merry!
His cheeks were like roses, his nose like a cherry!
His droll little mouth was drawn up like a bow,
And the beard of his chin was as white as the snow;
The stump of a pipe he held tight in his teeth,
And the smoke it encircled his head like a wreath;
He had a broad face and a little round belly
That shook, when he laughed, like a bowlful of jelly.
He was chubby and plump, a right jolly old elf,
And I laughed when I saw him, in spite of myself;
A wink of his eye and a twist of his head
Soon gave me to know I had nothing to dread;
He spoke not a word, but went straight to his work,
And filled all the stockings; then turned with a jerk,
And laying his finger aside of his nose,
And giving a nod, up the chimney he rose;
He sprang to his sleigh, to his team gave a whistle,
And away they all flew like the down of a thistle.
But I heard him exclaim, ere he drove out of sight,
"Happy Christmas to all, and to all a good-night!"

Buchanon, officials of the Empire Wholesale Grocery company, 921 West Randolph street, were named in an indictment returned by the federal grand jury yesterday charging the company with profiteering in sugar. The bill was one of twenty-two returned. It is charged sugar bought for 11¼ cents was sold for 27 cents.

James J. Tierney, former teller of the Fort Dearborn National bank, who was arrested in San Francisco last month on charges of embezzling close to $50,000 of the bank's funds, was indicted. The true bill charged him with taking $10,000 from a national bank.

Tierney is the son of the late Dennis Tierney, special officer for the Illinois Central railroad, who was shot and killed in the fall of 1918 while defending $10,000 in railroad property at the Randolph street station. Bank officials blamed the bright lights for the teller's fall. He is said to have spent large sums cabareting on the north side.

New indictments naming many of the defendants in the Mike de Pike Heitler $200,000 whisky scandal were also returned. This was done, government officials said, because of the faulty construction of certain parts of the first bill.

Among those indicted for violation of the prohibition laws are Edwin Tancl, saloonkeeper and former pugilist, at 1659 Blue Island avenue; Stanley Hobas and Peter Seeleg, for selling three ounces of whisky, and John and William Dawson, for the sale of thirty-one quarts of whisky on Oct. 22. Others were Demetry Smernoff, Frank Svoboda, Liogrezio Consolmogno, and Nicholas Schonen.

HYDE PARK HIGH CLASS OF 1916 KEEPS PLEDGE TO HOLD A REUNION

MISS ALICE ROBERTS.

In the early part of 1916 members of an English class at the Hyde Park High school taught by Louis Martin Sears agreed they would hold a reunion at some future date. The class elected three members to act as secretaries and to write to the members every six months. The correspondents were Miss Alice Roberts, Sidney Frisch, and Ralph Epstein. They now announce that the reunion pledged four years ago will take place at the Chicago Beach hotel Dec. 23. Of the class of thirty-five only five cannot be present. Some of those attending will come long distances. Mr. Sears, who is now a professor at Purdue university, has given up a business trip to be present.

U. S. Probes Slaying of American Miner in Mexico

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—John Berens, 36 years old, an American citizen of San Francisco, was killed in Mexico about Nov. 29, according to information forwarded to the state department from the American embassy at Mexico City.

The American embassy has asked the Mexican foreign office to investigate, and, if the report is verified, to take steps toward punishing those responsible for the crime.

Berens was a miner at the time he was killed and was living in Temascaltepec, southwest of Mexico City. No details were received as to how he met his death.

RAIL AND WATER ROUTES SHOULD WORK TOGETHER

C. H. Markham Says the Public Must Profit.

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—That railroads and waterways are not necessarily or naturally competitors, but should work together, is the contention of Charles H. Markham, president, Illinois Central railroad.

Mr. Markham says that the public's welfare demands that transportation shall be given in any particular territory, or between any particular points, by that means which can give it most economically, due allowances being made for differences in the speed, regularity and other features of service.

"There are many parts of the country," he says, "in which water transportation cannot be provided. There are others in which it can be provided, but not under conditions that would make it desirable or even feasible to have the freight business transferred from the railways to the waterways.

"There are still other parts where transportation by water has such great advantages over transportation by rail that the railways stand no chance of getting any considerable part of the business.

"Take, for example, the supplying of coal to the northwest. The advantages of water transportation on the great lakes for bulky commodities moving in large volume are so great that the natural source of the northwest's coal supply is the mines in the Pittsburgh district, in Ohio and West Virginia, and the natural route for it is by rail from the mines to Lake Erie ports and by boat to the head of the lakes.

"However, the government should consider the policy adopted in relation to its effects on the public as a whole and not in relation to its effects on only part of the public."

JOHN L. LEWIS IS AGAIN CHIEF OF MINERS, CLAIM

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—It was announced at international headquarters of the United Mine Workers of America tonight that John L. Lewis will have the largest majority ever given to a candidate for international president as a result of the election held last Tuesday.

Unofficial returns received from every district indicate, it was said, that Lewis has overwhelmingly defeated the opposition, which backed Robert H. Harlin of Washington. Philip Murray, international vice president, was reelected by a large majority over Alexander Howat of Kansas.

The election was regarded as a fight between radical and conservative elements, and the latter won, reports indicate.

Detroit Faces Car Strike on Threat of Cut in Pay

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 18.—Detroit today faced a street car strike when the Detroit United Railways company announced it would cut wages. "The men won't stand for any cut in wages," according to W. D. Mahon, international president of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employés.

Christmas Issue

Fort Dearborn Magazine

Published by the Fort Dearborn Banks

THE contrast between the scenes of Christmas Eve in Chicago a hundred years ago and Christmas Eve 1920 are strikingly portrayed in this issue—the former by a beautiful two-page spread by Strayer, and the latter by a three color cover of busy La Salle Street by Bergston. The original paintings of these scenes, both made especially for the Fort Dearborn Magazine, are now on display in the lobby of the Fort Dearborn Banks.

NATIONALIZE OIL, DANIELS SAYS IN TIP ON STRATEGY

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—A plea for nationalization of oil for future protection of American interests on the sea was made here tonight by Secretary Daniels at the annual dinner of the American Society of Naval Engineers.

"Other nations are conserving their oil in the ground and buying American oil," he said. "We have been prodigal to the point of injury to American interests on the sea.

"This country should not put an absolute embargo upon oil, but there is trying need for such restrictions as will not jeopardize the future needs of the merchant marine and the navy.

Eye on Naval Strategy.

"In an emergency an adequate supply of oil for our fighting ships might turn the tide of battle."

Mr. Daniels said it had been necessary during his incumbency to fight continually to prevent exploitation of naval oil reserves "by trespassers who had no legal right to the oil set aside for naval use." Congress, he said, had "more than recognized every ...

...the time come when oil ... water power shall be nationalized?" the secretary asked. He added that he believed "the ownership of God-created essentials should belong to all the people."

Ought to Regulate Prices.

...s should be taken "by which wasteful production, large sale abroad to the injury of America, and profiteering upon private and industrial consumers shall be ended," he declared.

"Whether the government shall buy and carry on production of coal, oil, and water power," Mr. Daniels said, "or regulate their production, distribution, and price is a question of pressing importance."

He added that regulation of price should be as fixed a policy of the government "as regulation of railroad, express, and telegraph rates."

PRODUCE MARKETS

Egg prices dropped 1c to 67@68c for fresh and 56c to 57c for refrigerators. Buyers took hold moderately and supplies were ample for present requirements, although there is no surplus of strictly fresh. Receipts for the week were 6,855 cases, against 6,995 cases the previous week and 6,343 cases last year.

Rabbits are having good sale when in fine condition at $2.50 per dozen. Spring chickens were ½c higher for live at 22½c with fowls at 21c for the general run. Dressed turkeys were in good request at 51c, with chickens 20c to 25c, ducks 20c to 34c and geese 16c to 28c, depending upon condition and dressing.

PROVISION CONTRACTS CANCELED.

Foreign buyers have canceled many contracts for lard and meats with Chicago packers of late. Scandinavia has refused to accept previous contracts and has canceled many purchases of meats, while Rotterdam has laid down on its lard purchases. Notice has been received by a provision broker who has made sales abroad of late that the contracts would not be accepted except at current delivery values. One house is understood to have canceled contracts for 25,000 tons. The British government is understood to have 25,000,000 lbs of meats bought here six to nine months ago which have not been shipped.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The trustees of the Magnolia Petroleum company, one of the Standard Oil group, yesterday ordered paid on Dec. 28 a stock dividend of 100 per cent to stockholders of record Dec. 27. The stock dividend will utilize the increase of $60,000,000 in the capital stock recently authorized but heretofore unissued. The Detroit Steel Production company announced an increase in capitalization to $5,250,000 and a common stock dividend of 30 per cent.

Trade reviews recite improvement in buying and in the general outlook. The aggregate turnover is said to be large and farmers are reported to be selling wheat and showing more disposition to sell corn. Dun's says signs of betterment in business, if outnumbered by unsatisfactory features, are becoming more distinct, with a change in certain primary textile branches where the movement is freer and some buyers of leather showing renewed interest. Commercial failures last week numbered 360 compared with 326 in the preceding week and 131 in the corresponding week in 1919.

The Chicago federal reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ended Dec. 15 by 201 banks in twenty-four leading clearing house cities in the Seventh federal reserve district aggregate $1,116,222,000 compared with $1,022,142,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $1,116,222,000 compared with $1,228,465,000 reported by twenty-three clearing houses for the corresponding week of last year.

CHICAGO CURB STOCKS

The weekly review of F. M. Zeller & Co. follows:

Trading in local unlisted securities was confined largely to the Goodyear Tire and Rubber issues and Butler Brothers. Goodyear common declined to 19 in the early trading, but rallied to 27, closing at 25 bid, offered at 27. The preferred ranged between 42 and 57, closing at 50@53. Butler Brothers was steadier, sales ranging from 33 and 31½, closing at 31½ bid, offered at 32. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply improved to 39 bid, 41 asked on light trading. Several preferred issues were quoted at lower levels. Wahl preferred selling at 80, a loss of 3 points over prevous sales. Stock was wanted at this price at the close, with offerings at 82½. Moline Plow preferred was in supply at 62. Brunswick-Balke preferred was slightly easier at 88@92. Consumers preferred was steady at 75 bid, 79 asked. Creamery Package common showed a better tone at 104@106. Northwestern Yeast common advanced to sales at 268, ex-dividend; stock was wanted at this price, with sales at 275 at the close.

DRY GOODS MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Wide sheetings today were revised to a basis of 50 cents for 10-4 pepperell bleached. Cotton goods were steady with trading lighter. Yarns showed a slight increase in inquiries. Burlaps quiet and wool markets steady. The underwear trade still complained of little new business.

GRAIN BUYERS CHANGE TONE; WHEAT HIGHER

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Highest prices were made for all grains early in the day. Heavy selling and reactions were encountered, making the close irregular, with the near future of wheat and corn lower and the distant deliveries higher. There was a good class of buying, but advances met selling and wheat closed ½c lower to 1c higher, with May leading; corn was ½c lower to 1⅛c higher, the latter on May, while oats were ⅜@⅝c higher. Rye closed unchanged to ⅜c lower and barley 1c lower to unchanged. Provisions were heavy and finished at the bottom, with losses of 40c on pork, 33½@35c on lard, and 20@25c on short ribs.

Better Tone in Wheat.

Depressing financial and business conditions, lower prices for stocks, cotton and sugars have been offset by export buying of wheat and the close was 4@4½c higher than a week ago, while corn is ⅜@1¼c higher, oats ½c higher to ⅜c lower, rye up 2¼c and barley ½c higher. Provisions are lower with pork off 35c, lard 62½@85c and short ribs 67½@90c, January leading.

The British commission was out of the wheat market yesterday, but is expected to be in Monday. Export buying of wheat was 500,000 bu at the gulf at 31c over Chicago March. The market is beginning to show the effect of the purchase of nearly 10,000,000 bu per week for the last three weeks by the exporters, as trade sentiment is a little more bullish. The market had support on the weak spots from strong interests, who turned sellers on the bulges.

Free Buying in Corn.

Corn was bought by the same interest that led to buying on Friday. Their purchases were large, and nearly equal to those of the previous day. Switching from the short to the long side of the market by interests that have been influential offset the effect of the prospects of increased receipts and of heavy local selling. May was up to 73¼c, an advance of 5⅞ from the low point of Thursday, with the close ½c from the top.

Oats were well supported by the same interest as on Friday, and by others, while the selling was scattered. May was up 1c from the close of the previous day and closed ½c from the top.

Provisions were weak and closed around the bottom. Foreigners have canceled contracts for lard and meats and refused to accept deliveries. This was a bear factor. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

While there has been considerable change in sentiment among many traders who are now inclined to the buying side of all grains, there is as yet little confidence that prices are to work materially higher. Depressing economic conditions are still strongly in evidence and many traders, while bullish at heart, believe great caution should be used in getting long on the bulges.

Persistent buying of wheat for foreign account in the face of relatively low rates of exchange, depressing economic conditions, and the fact that the new Argentine crop is now moving is causing many in the trade to wonder what is the underlying cause of the insistent demand. Broomhall estimates the United Kingdom has sufficient wheat on hand and on passage to last until the middle of April, yet the British commission has been the largest buyer of wheat. In some quarters the belief is expressed that part of this buying is for other countries, presumably the central powers. It is expected the British commission will buy wheat Monday.

Primary receipts of wheat since July 1 aggregate 215,324,000 bu, compared with 283,649,000 bu last year. Arrivals of corn since Nov. 1 are 19,222,000 bu, against 29,520,000 bu last year. Receipts of oats of 97,532,000 bu since Aug. 1 are 5,000,000 bu more than last year.

A Board of Trade membership sold yesterday at $7,000 net to the buyer.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

The British commission was not in the market as a buyer of wheat, but a good business was done via the Gulf although every effort was made to keep it quiet. A local house sold 250,000 bu hard winter at 31c over March for January loading, and 70,000 bu No. 3 northern were sold at 20c over December, track Baltimore.

Domestic shipping sales at Chicago were 45,000 bu corn and 65,000 bu oats. Sales to go to store were 150,000 bu wheat, 50,000 bu corn, 15,000 bu oats, 23,000 bu rye, and 50,000 bu barley. Deliveries on December contracts were 15,000 bu wheat, 5,000 bu No. 2 white corn, 25,000 bu rye, and 45,000 bu barley.

Premiums on hard winter wheat at Chicago were 1c lower with No. 1 at 86@3c over December. Red winter was scarce and firm. Springs unchanged at 3@12c over December for No. 1 northern. Receipts, 28 cars. Outside markets were unchanged to 2c higher with the usual slow Saturday demand.

Demand for cash corn was not large. Prices were 1@1¼c higher early, but the close was unchanged to ½c lower with the cash off ¼@½c as compared with the December. No. 3 mixed 1@1¼c under; No. 4 mixed and white 2¼@4c under December; No. 3 yellow 4@4½c over; No. 4 yellow 1@2c over December. Receipts 118 cars. Outside markets were generally unchanged to 1c higher.

No. 2 white oats were ¼@½c lower as compared with May closing at ⅝c under the future. Sample values were ½c higher early and unchanged later. Receipts 78 cars.

Light hogs met with an active shipping demand at strong prices, while other kinds sold steady to 10c lower. Best light hogs reached $9.50, with the day's general average at $9.10, showing 5c loss. The week's average at $9.10 was lowest since February, 1916.

Receipts of hogs last week were the second largest since January at 214,600. Estimated average weight for the week was 229 lbs, against 230 previous week and 226 a year ago.

The week's average price of good beef cattle at $9.50 stood $1.⅝ lower than the previous week and lowest since September, 1916. Few cattle sold during the week above $13. Sheep and lambs closed 75c@$1.50 lower than a week ago, with lambs off most.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 18,000 cattle, 52,000 hogs and 20,000 sheep, against 15,340 cattle, 56,457 hogs and 23,145 sheep corresponding Monday a year ago. Two years ago only 3,260 hogs arrived, due to glutted conditions, and the placing of an embargo. Next week's estimated receipts 55,000 cattle, 180,000 hogs and 65,000 sheep.

Monday's probable receipts of hogs are placed from 44,000 to 60,000. G. M. Nicoll marked 60,000, R. W. Oake 57,000, F. R. Burrows, J. M. Waters and W. H. Overman 52,000, F. W. Waddell and Edward Morris 50,000, and E. R. Gentry 47,000.

MONEY SYSTEM UNDISTURBED BY HUGE U. S. DEALS

BY O. A. MATHER.

The fact that the country and its financial institutions have grown accustomed to large governmental financial operations was demonstrated by the ease with which last week's treasury operations passed off. The reports of the federal reserve banks showed that the government financing, involving a total of more than $1,400,000,000, caused little difficulty, while the fact that the money market remained comparatively steady attested that commercial credit needs were unaffected.

It is to be recognized, however, that the continued liquidation of securities and commodities contributed to the orderly manner in which the government collected $650,000,000 in taxes, paid off $700,000,000 in treasury certificates of indebtedness and $143,000,000 in interest on its war bonds, and floated new certificate issues aggregating $590,000,000. With these large operations out of the way and the meeting of year-end requirements in the next fortnight, it may be expected that the money market will show a somewhat easier tone not long after the turn of the year.

Banking Position Sound.

The outstanding feature of the week's situation was a contraction in loans, coupled with an increase in deposits, the latter rising for the first time in several weeks. This would appear to indicate liquidation of commodities and readjustment of business is making better progress. This is a working out of what financiers have urged as the initial step toward bringing about a resumption of industrial progress on a sounder basis.

It is noteworthy that the reserve system as a whole handled the huge transfers of credit and consequent shifting of balances with such smoothness that the reserve position was even stronger at the end of the week than in the preceding week. All the circumstances considered, the bank statements offer strong proof of an extremely sound banking position and give promise of a smooth passage through the fortnight of large trade settlements immediately ahead.

Twelve Banks' Loans Recede.

The consolidated statement of the twelve federal reserve banks showed a recession in loans of $120,090,000, those on commercial paper declining $109,820,000 and those on government obligations dropping $10,270,000. Bills purchased in the market receded $10,081,000, so that total bills on hand declined $130,171,000. Holdings of treasury certificates of indebtedness expanded $37,261,000, so that total earnings assets receded $92,908,000. The member banks reduced their reserve account $9,180,591.

Gross deposits expanded $115,830,000, including an increase in government deposits of $24,779,000. Federal reserve note circulation increased $32,490,000. Gold reserve increased $19,097,000 and total reserve expanded $22,061,000. The ratio of total reserves to net deposit and federal reserve note liabilities combined rose to 43 from 44.5 per cent in the preceding week, while the ratio of gold reserves to note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposits, rose to 45.1 from 43.2 per cent in the preceding week.

Clearing Banks' Reserve.

The report of the New York clearing house banks made an indifferent showing. The banks carried the load of furnishing credit where needed for tax payments, as evidenced in an increase in loans of $115,576,000. The excess reserve declined $3,052,710, now standing at the purely nominal figure of $3,222,200. This decrease was primarily the result of the member banks reducing their reserves at the federal reserve bank $2,865,000. Aggregate reserve declined $1,652,000. Cash in vaults declined $4,172,000. Net demand deposits increased $12,454,000, but net time deposits fell $8,416,000. United States deposits increased $179,656,000.

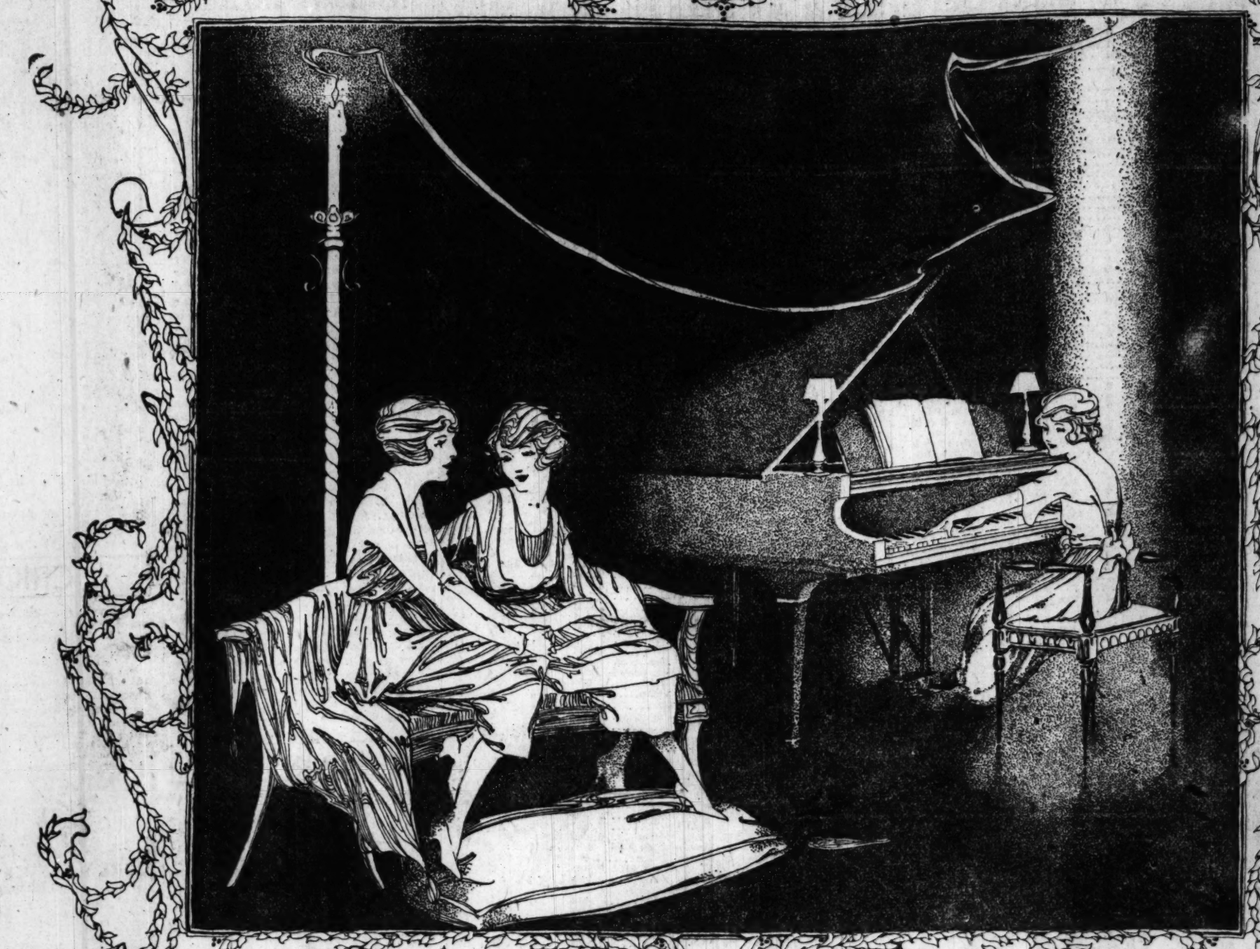
LYON & HEALY



What it means to select a piano in

LYON & HEALY'S

If You Want a Grand Piano

Your choice here ranges all the way from the popular small Brambach Grand, which is the least expensive of any good instrument, to the Steinway Grand and Lyon & Healy Apartment Grand. There are seven makes shown side by side. You are privileged to test them all. There is also an advantage in looking over the various styles of architecture. You may prefer the severe Colonial lines or you may decide that a Louis XVI. is better. The purchase of a Grand is usually the event of a lifetime, and we urge the wisdom of taking time for a complete and thorough investigation.

If You Want a Player Piano

It is often said that the Player Piano sells itself, for there is no one with the slightest music in his soul who would not enjoy the playing of the latest types of player. These are very different from the player pianos of a few years ago, some of which were set to play as loud as possible. Our Players are built for people of musical taste, and while they are capable of striking effects in popular jazzical music, they are at their best when playing popular classics. We display side by side nine makes, including, of course, the unrivaled Steinway Player Piano and the Lyon & Healy, the Pianola Piano and others. Prices begin at $595.

If You Want an Upright Piano

Here we have perhaps fourteen styles from which to select. There are charming little Steinways suitable for dainty rooms; and in Lyon & Healy Pianos alone there are three styles. Then we show the celebrated Weber and the always popular Washburn, Stroud, and Steck. We often hear visitors say they had no idea that there could be such a variety in Upright piano styles. Probably you will find several instruments here at the same price, one of which you would much prefer to the others. So the advantage of careful study of this type of instrument is apparent if you wish to feel always that you have made the wisest choice.

If You Want a Slightly Used Piano

Grand, Players, and Uprights of this type are shown here in extraordinary profusion. A great many of them are instruments of extremely high class traded in for Duo Arts or instruments of Period Designs. We find it to our advantage to move all these instruments as rapidly as possible. There is small thought of profit, because we need the space for strictly new goods. Come in and look through these scores of pianos, every one of which is marked in plain figures. You can easily find one which shows no trace of wear, and if it is really several years old, the price would be very reasonable.

Prices Reduced on Lyon & Healy Pianos and on Pianola Pianos

A PROCRASTINATED CHRISTMAS

by Walter Prichard Eaton

Wherein Santa Claus Tackles the Problem of Getting Down a Stovepipe and Into Two Elderly Hearts

ABEL and Benjamin Upton were more than brothers; they were the two interdependent halves of what seemed almost a single personality. Abel, who was the elder by two years, exercised none of the prerogatives of age. He never acted without consulting Ben, as Ben never acted without consulting Abel. If you brought a chair to be mended in the cabinetmaker's shop behind their house, and only one of them was there, it did you no good to ask when it would be done, because Ben (or Abel) would tell you that he couldn't rightly say till he'd asked his brother. If you were a stranger, this gave you the impression that the absent brother was the head of the firm.

How could you know the other one would have said exactly the same thing? As a matter of fact, though, you would have learned nothing if both brothers were present. To be sure each would have looked at the other, and then one of them would have told you that the chair would be done next week Wednesday; but only the most guileless ever would have believed it. The chair would be done after you had gone after it three or four times, and finally lost your temper and spoken sharply, or even employed profanity.

The Upton boys (as we all called them) were honest as the farmer's day is long; they never meant to make a false promise in their lives. But the Lord (with liberal assistance from their late lamented male parent, who had been the town cabinetmaker before them) had made them procrastinators. They had raised procrastination, indeed, almost to one of the fine arts. The only thing they didn't procrastinate about was getting up in the morning. They rose, like other farmers, with the sun, or before it; yet the day was never long enough. Always, even in summer, you could see their lantern bobbing out by the barn, and throwing vast shadows of Abel's thin legs on the wall, after their neighbors up and down the road had the cows all milked, the chores all done, and were sitting in stocking feet by the stove, reading the Rural New Yorker. They were generally plowing when others were planting, and their hay was never in till September, nor the oats thrashed till frost. In their crowded little shop, full of beautiful old individual pianes (now, alas, no longer procurable), were chairs, and bureaus, and tables waiting to be repaired, or done over, some of which had been there for two or three years. Indeed, it was said there was furniture up in the loft which had been there so long the owners had died, or forgotten it, or moved away from town. At any rate, they had not made enough fuss about getting their furniture back, so the boys had worked on the jobs of the fussy people. They hated fuss. Just outside of the shop were ten bundles of shingles, bought to mend the roof with. These shingles were now gray with the weather, and the roof was still patched with tar paper.

The boys had a sister once. Her orphan daughter now lived with them, kept their house, made butter for the market, and now and then attempted spasmodically to reform her uncles' habits in the matter of getting the evening milking done, being but 19 and of a hopeful disposition. In their rather inarticulate and bachelor fashion, they were fond of Susie, not alone because she kept house for them (in return for a none too gay and luxurious living) but because she was their sister's child and had come to them a helpless little girl of 12, who had cost them the wages of a housekeeper for three years, before her schooling was over and she was old enough to do the work herself. Those three years, during which they had hired a housekeeper and driven the tow-headed Susie to school, and tried to answer her questions as she studied by the stove at night, were firmly fixed in their memories. For three years their monthly deposits in the savings bank had to be given up, they had to endure the high hand of a strange female in the house, but in return they had watched dumbly the flowering of a girlhood, and wondered, and enjoyed their inarticulate tender moments.

But now, for four years, the deposits had been going into the bank again, there was no stranger in the house to bother them, and Susie made them comfortable. They couldn't ask for anything more ideal, nor did it occur to them that Susie could. Why, she even had the money from the butter she sold, as her own, and that surely must keep her in clothes and the finery girls like. It would have kept Ben and Abel in clothes for five years!

As a matter of fact, Susie didn't complain. She was not of the complaining sort. Her mother was an Upton, and hated a fuss as much as Ben or Abel. Besides, Susie understood her uncles, and with that good sense so rare in the young, unless, like her, they have been reared close to the hard realities of the daily struggle she realized that two oldish men, "set" in their ways as only Yankee bachelor farmers can be, are not the dogs who can learn new tricks. They had been good, and kind, and affectionate to her, according to their lights, and after all she owed them a return. She had put away, one bitter, lonely night in her little chamber, all hopes of going on in school, and ultimately graduating from Normal, and settled down on the farm, a wistful little slip of a girl, only 15 at first, to wash, and cook, and mend, to make her own frocks with the kindly aid of the neighbors' wives and daughters, and to save every drop of cream she could for butter, to satisfy her normal craving for a bit of luxury in hats, or shoes, or ribbons.

But neither Ben, nor Abel, nor Susie reckoned on a certain force of nature which generally has to be dealt with sooner or later. In a word, Susie was young, a female, with pretty golden hair and a certain shy charm when you came to know her well—and down the road a mile lived a youth of 21. A mile isn't much on foot—and Dan had a motorcycle.

Dan had the motorcycle because he clerked in the store, and the village was three miles away. His father had a farm, heavily mortgaged, but Dan felt no inclination to be a farmer. "Not for me!" he put it. "I seen too much of it!"

He longed for a mercantile career, and would have doubtless betaken himself to the nearest large town, had it not been that by living at home and paying generous board he was easing the load of the mortgage. Most of his wages, indeed, went into his mother's secret mortgage fund in the old teapot on the top shelf of the chimney cupboard. Dan adored his mother, and her worn frame and tired face filled him with an inarticulate hatred of farming.

Then, too, there was Susie. Every morning at 7:45 he passed the Upton house and slowed down to wave his hand, and every morning at that hour Susie was doing something that took her to the side porch or the front window. Every night, when he returned from work at 6:15, the motorcycle stopped by the gate (which had one broken hinge the boys had been "going to fix" for three years), and Dan brought in the county evening paper. The family were invariably at supper, and he entered the kitchen door with only a perfunctory knock, not waiting for an answer. Susie always rose to meet him and took the paper from him close to the door, so that her back was to her uncle, and they didn't see the greeting in her eyes. They thought Dan a good, kind, steady boy, who was thoughtful for them all. When the motorcycle came back of an evening and Dan and Susie went walking up the pasture to see the late sunset, or when he drove back with his father's buggy and took her occasionally to the village to a dance, it seemed natural enough, too. Dan and she had been playmates since they were children.

The revelation came to Ben one day in the late autumn. It happened because of Ben's fondness for kittens, a fondness he shared with Susie. He was out in the barn one Sunday afternoon and saw the face of the black and white cat peering at him from the mow. Thinking she might have a new family concealed up there, he climbed the ladder and worked his way back under the eaves. Sure enough, there were four kittens sprawling about in a warm nest of hay. Ben put out his large, toil knotted hand and gathered one of the fuzzy little bodies into it, and a smile appeared under his drooping gray mustache, as he stroked its head with the forefinger of his other hand. He was about to crawl back with it to the ladder and take it in to show to Susie, when he suddenly heard Susie's voice below, and the heavier voice of Dan. The man in the loft stopped in his tracks, for something they were saying startled his attention. His fingers closed instinctively around the kitten, which uttered a plaintive meow, so that he as suddenly put it down penitently.

Susie's voice was soothing. "It will be different as soon's we are married, dear," she said.

"When!" Dan answered, with a savage impatience. "If I only had $500—just measly $500—I could make it. That would take care of the old man's interest on the mortgage for a whole year, and buy us enough furniture and stuff to start housekeeping. But I ain't got $500, and it seems as if I never would have, not till the mortgage is paid off, anyhow. I guess you think maybe I ought to save for us, instead of helping the old man so much——"

"Why, Dan! Of course I don't. How can you say such things?"

"Well, a feller don't rightly know what to do sometimes," Dan mused. "The old man

The Night Before Christmas In Toy Boy Town

'Twas the night before Christmas,
And all through the house
The Toy Boys were having
A jolly carouse—
For Santa was coming
At midnight, 'twas said,
When all of the children
Were safely in bed.
And the tree must be trimmed
With the greatest of care,
So Santa could hang
All his presents up there.

So the Boys went out searching
For trimmings and things,
And they hurried so fast
That you'd think they had wings.
But before they got back,
On the roof came a patter
And whid-del-dy whack!
And clattery-clatter!
Down the chimney he scooted
As spry as a mouse;
Hurray! 'twas old Santa Claus
Safe in the house.

When he emptied his pack
At the foot of the tree,
For he knew what they wanted,
Exactly, did he:
Candies and balls, and some
Skates for the ice
And a jolly old case
Of some nice Edelweiss.
And then up the chimney
He scooted once more,
Just as the Toy Boys
Came back through the door;
And they saw all the presents
Piled up by the tree,
And they danced and they shouted
And sang in their glee.

Well, that tree was all dressed
In one-half of a trice,
And the Edelweiss bottles
Were all put on the ice.
The case made a stand
That supported the tree,
And it stood up as straight
And as proud as could be;
And next day was Christmas,
And oh, was it nice?
Turkey and stuffin'
And cool Edelweiss.
And happy the Toy Boys,
And jolly their call:
Merry Christmas, Merry Christmas,
Merry Christmas to all.

IN THE COLONEL'S SHOES

$50 old to learn anything but farming now, and help's so high he's got to have a tractor to get by at all, and Ma's worried all the time, and it makes me most cry to see her work so hard. And yet all the time there's you and me. Gosh, Sue, if you want me half as bad as I want you——"

He finished in inarticulateness, and Ben, in the loft above, knew that the silence meant he had taken Susie into his arms.

A moment later he heard Susie answer him softly, wistfully.

"O, Dan, if I only had $500, you know I'd give it to you, don't you?"

"I dunno 's I'd take it, though—your money, to pay my debts! That would be a fine thing to do, wouldn't it?"

"But it would be so's we could get married, dearest. I guess you don't realize how lonely I am for you, all day long."

Lonely—all day long! Ben turned uneasily on the hay. Why should she be lonely? She was busy all day, and he and Abel were around most of the time, somewhere on the premises. Of course, they were oldish men, and she was a girl. Still, lots of women——

"Well, you ain't got $500, so that don't have to be decided," Dan answered, with a bitter laugh. "And neither have I, so we got to wait. Maybe I can think o' some way to get to Springfield, or somewhere, and make more money, though I dunno 's I could save any more, with board so high."

"O, Dan! What would I do if you went away?" The words escaped Susie like a cry of pain and made Ben wince. "I just live all day till you bring the Record in at night! I'm saving money, Dan—my butter money. I made all my old dresses do this year, and I got $45 saved. It ain't much, is it?" She finished close to tears.

"There, there, Sue," Ben heard her lover say. "You stop crying. I ain't going to Springfield or anywhere without you. We'll find a way yet."

"I—I wish I had a father I could borrow of," Ben heard the girl sob.

"Your uncles?" Ben stiffened and leaned nearer the edge of the mow at the words. "Everybody says the old boys have soaked away a lot of money—and not giving you a cent 'cept what you rightly earn running that old churn. Everybody says——"

"I don't care what everybody says," Susie cut in loyally. "They've given me a home, ain't they? Besides, they haven't got a lot of money. They just put a little bit at a time in the bank, so's they'll have something to live on when they're old. I couldn't ask to borrow any of that. Besides, they—they wouldn't understand. They ain't mean, but just funny and—and sort of set, about money. Besides, they're never been in love, and they wouldn't see, anyway, why I couldn't keep right on being their housekeeper, and you live here, or me go live at your house. I—I just couldn't do that, Dan. I got to have a little place of my own, and just you! I got to! I can't rightly remember ever having anything of my very own."

Again Ben knew she was in tears. He heard Dan murmuring comfort, and then their retreating footsteps. Very cautiously he crept to the edge of the mow and peeped over. They were walking through the paddock toward the lane to the swamp woods, Dan's arm about her. Ben forgot the kittens, and sat very still in the hay, thinking.

From days far off and forgotten, memories came back to him. "They've never been in love," Susie had said, and so her uncles could not understand why she wanted a home of her own. How long ago it was that Ben had walked, scarce two miles from this spot, with a girl through the October dusk and asked her to come to this house as his wife. That was when his father and mother were both alive, and Susie's mother but just gone away. And the girl had put his arm from about her waist and told him she was willing to be his housekeeper, but not housekeeper for his family. When she married she wanted a home of her own. A girl of more spirit than Susie—too much spirit. He had always told himself he was lucky to be rid of her. But here was their Susie saying the same thing, and Dan seemed to understand it, accept it. Ben knit his brows with the perplexity of this unaccustomed introspection. Was he so different from other men? Had he ever loved Alice as Dan loved Susie? He tried to recall those ancient sensations of passion, but they were too nebulous.

He felt suddenly old, and climbed slowly and cautiously down the ladder. Susie and Dan had disappeared down the swamp wood road. How young they were, side of him, with their lives all before them, their hearts aching with the passions he had forgotten! Little Susie—with a man's arm about her, a woman's passions in her heart, a passion he had really never known! Ben plodded slowly across the road to the house, his brow still knit.

He didn't tell his brother a word of what he had learned.

It wasn't like Ben to have thoughts and secrets unshared with Abel. Indeed, it wasn't like Ben to have thoughts at all, save the routine speculations of existence. It surprised him that he could not tell his brother what was in his mind. Perhaps he did not quite know himself, for the idea, the preposterous idea, grew slowly, almost in his subconsciousness, as he pottered at the chores, or sat in the evening and watched Susie, at the lamp, busy with her sewing.

"What you working on?" he astonished her one night by asking.

She looked up quickly, and blushed. "It—it's a Christmas present," she said. "For Dan—he's been so kind bringing us the paper every night."

She held out a woolen sweater she was knitting, for her uncle's inspection.

"Nice an' warm," he said, feeling the yarn between thumb and forefinger. "Dan's a good boy. Guess he helps his father a lot, carryin' that mortgage."

Susie lowered her face quickly. "Yes, I guess he does," she said, in a low voice.

Ben had a sudden impulse. He put out his hand and stroked Susie's hair. As suddenly she burst into tears, and, choking them back, rose quickly and left the room.

Abel looked up, astonished, from his paper. "What in tarnation——?" he asked.

"I guess she's pretty fond o' Dan, and kind o' sorry to see him savin' to carry so much," Ben said.

"Well, that ain't no reason fer burstin' out cryin' is it? She ain't that sorry, is she?"

"Girls cry easy," said Ben, with a sage look.

"You oughter know, you've had so much experience," was Abel's reply.

But the irony was lost on his brother, who had resumed his seat on the haircloth sofa and was staring at his slippers.

Christmas! he thought. Once Alice had given him a knit tippet for Christmas. The touch of Susie's wool had suddenly opened a door of memory, and he could feel exactly the sensation of that tippet around his neck—yes, he could remember the thrill it had given him because it was from her. He remembered now that he had kissed it. This seemed incredible, but it was so. He had loved her. He had known what love is. It wasn't true that he couldn't feel, couldn't understand. Yet here he was, almost an old man, who had never felt a woman's love again since those far off years, nor—nor—— Ben hesitated at the conclusion of his thoughts. Yes, it was true, he had to confess it; nor had he loved anybody since—not really. Abel, of course, in a kind of way; he was terribly used to Abel, was how he put it to himself. But not even Susie, really. Why, if he'd loved her wouldn't she have told him about Dan, come to him for help, advice? He was just terribly used to her, too. He was just terribly used to everything! At this conclusion Ben got up wearily to go to bed.

On his way he tapped at Susie's door. "Abel's goin' to lock up," he said. "Good night, Susie."

Something in his tone brought the girl to her door. He saw she had been knitting, in her chilly, unheated room, with a wrap about her. He felt of her fingers, and they were cold.

"You go down by the stove, or go to bed," he said, still holding her hand in an awkward impulse of affection.

"I—I dunno what was the matter with me," Susie answered. "Just suddenly crying over nothing. Maybe because Christmas is coming, and I wish I could do more to help poor Dan."

"Yes, I guess that's it," said her uncle. "Well, don't you cry no more. Dan'll come out all right. Good night, girl."

"Good night, Uncle Ben."

He looked at her as she stood in the doorway, framed against the glow from her oil lamp within, and he suddenly realized how much she looked like his dead sister at the time she went away to be married. His eyes must have been tender, for suddenly Susie put up her hands to his face, pulled it down, and kissed him. He walked softly to his own room, filled with a strange sense of warmth.

Two days later, as he and Abel were at work in the shop, he abruptly put down his plane, and announced, "Susie and Dan want to get married."

Abel carefully stood his saw against the horse and sat down on the board he had been at work upon, while this news sank in.

"You guessin'?" he finally asked.

"No, I ain't guessin'. Some spell back I was up in the mow after them black and white kittens, and Susie and Dan come into the barn, talkin', and I couldn't rightly show myself without makin' 'em feel uncomfortable, and that's how I know."

Abel deliberated some time on this before he demanded, "Well, when they goin' to do it?"

"That's what's troublin' 'em; they don't rightly know, 'cause Dan's got to have five hundred dollars first, to carry the mortgage for a full year ahead, and buy furniture and stuff for their house."

Abel sighed in evident relief. "That's all right, then," he said. "It'll be some time before Dan saves five hundred dollars, I guess."

"I ain't so sure it's all right," Ben replied. "What do you mean? He ain't got it, has he?"

"No, 'course he ain't. I mean it ain't all right he ain't got it. You're thinkin' of how we'll keep Susie with us a spell longer. I'm thinkin' if Susie wants to get married and have a home of her own, she ought to have it. I'm thinkin' maybe we ought to help 'em."

Abel looked at his brother a long moment, as if doubting what he had heard.

"You're thinkin' we ought to help Jim Thomas pay the mortgage on his farm, and his son Dan buy furniture and stuff for a house to put Susie in, when he's takin' her away from us, and maybe makin' us hire a housekeeper again?"

"That's just what I'm thinkin', if you want to put it that way," Ben answered defiantly. "I'm thinkin' we ought to do it this coming week, Christmas, too."

"Well, we ain't a-goin' to," Abel replied, his thin lips shutting tight. "Payin' off another man's mortgage is plumb, crazy nonsense. 'Sides, if Dan and she want to get married, why can't they get married? We got room enough here, an' to spare. You tell her that."

"I won't tell her no such thing," Ben retorted. "I see how she felt about it—about not havin' her own house, I mean. I—I know somethin' about how women feel that way, maybe you don't know. Leastways, Susie's a good girl, and our own flesh and blood, and she's entitled to keep house for her man when she gets him."

"Well, then, it's up to Dan," Abel answered, picking up his saw again.

"Hold on a minute," Ben said. "I ain't done. You 'n' me 've been more than brothers for many years. We own this shop and this place together, havin' bought out sister Jane's share fair enough when her husband died, so's she could pay off his debts. We ain't never quarreled, and we ain't goin' to now—leastways, I ain't. But I got a right to make a damn fool of myself still, so long's I don't hurt you none. Now, we got some money in the bank, to our joint account, and you know we got an agreement, drawn up by Lawyer Evans, sayin' each can have his half share when he wants it. We didn't think neither of us would ever want it; but there's the agreement, and I guess it's good. I want my share transferred over to my own account, and I want it before Christmas."

"I ain't goin' to let you pay Jim Thomas' mortgage!" Abel retorted grimly.

"And I ain't goin' to," Ben replied. "I'm a-goin' to give Susie a weddin' gift, and what she does with it ain't my business, nor yours—it's her'n."

"'S if you didn't know what she'd do with it, if it means her gettin' married! I ain't goin' to have Susie payin' Jim Thomas' debts for him. Let him save and pay his own! Look at him, now, talkin' about spendin' seven hundred and fifty dollars for a tractor!"

"You're goin' to give me my half share," Ben answered. "That's all I got to say. Only I ask you to try to remember Susie's your own sister's child, and powerful like her. Remember how Jane used to——"

"I guess I know she's my sister's child. Ain't we made a good home for her all these years."

"Maybe we have—I dunno. Then again, maybe we haven't. She's a girl, and we're a couple of cranky old men, Abel."

"Speak for yourself," Abel retorted.

"That's just what I been a-doin'," said Ben. "I guess it's about the first time I ever did."

The two brothers faced each other a long moment, while the elder, more puzzled, almost, than angry, read the determination on the younger's face. Finally he picked up his saw.

"I'll tend to that bank book tomorrow," he said. "We can go over to Lawyer Evans, and he'll swear us. Better get busy on this bureau. We promised it last month, and Mrs. Short's gettin' peeved."

There was complete silence in the shop, save for the noise of plane and saw.

The next day Ben had not forgotten his purpose, but Abel made no preparation to go to town.

"Be'n't you comin' over to Lawyer Evans'?" Ben asked him.

"Looks like snow," said Abel. "Tomorrow'll do. Besides, we got that bureau to give another 'lick'."

Through the crusted habits of years, a light broke on Ben.

"We might 'a' had twice as much money in the bank if we hadn't always been puttin' things off," he said. "You go get your good clothes on, and I'll hitch up."

"Tomorrow'll do," Abel reiterated.

"No, it won't. You agreed you'd go today. A promise is a promise."

"But the bureau——" Abel was almost plaintive now.

"I'll lie the bureau myself, this evenin'," snapped Ben. "You come on."

When they returned from town, Abel looked troubled and glum. Ben was smiling. He went at once to his room, and Susie, in hers, heard him poking around in the old chest in his closet. She wondered vaguely if he had been buying and was now concealing Christmas presents. Something had come over him, surely.

Dan didn't come with the paper Christmas Eve, because he had to work late in the store that night. It was snowing hard, too, so that he would have to walk home. Susie took his sweater down to his mother before dark, and Ben remarked she'd better send it in to him right then—he'd need it. Uncle Ben had shown great interest in every stage of the sweater's growth, and had even been used as a model to see if it was long enough. After supper that night he sat back on the haircloth sofa, watching Susie clear the table, and puffing slowly at his pipe.

"Well," he finally said, "we goin' to hang up our stockings tonight? You still believe in Santie Claus, Abel?"

Abel grunted, contemptuously.

"O, let's!" Susie cried. "We ain't hung up our stockings for a long time, not since I was a little girl."

"How's Santie Claus goin' to get down a stovepipe?" Ben chuckled, looking at the boarded up fireplace, with a hideously ornamented oak burner stood under the mantel.

"I guess he can manage," Susie laughed. "Let's try, anyhow."

"What you expectin', Abel?" Ben asked.

Abel grunted again, and retreated into yesterday's paper.

But Susie got one of his socks from her darning bag and pinned it up with the others on the mantel behind the stove. She was sure now Uncle Ben had brought presents when he went to town, and she flushed from the strange happiness that had come into her life with this change in him.

It was Susie who insisted on locking up that night. Abel banked the kitchen fire and filled the wood box, and put off going to bed as long as he could, but Susie still sat by the lamp, and at last he went off upstairs. Ben, about to follow him, took a last look at the stockings.

"I s'pose Dan ain't been by yet?" he hazarded innocently.

"I—I ain't heard him whistle," Susie answered, her face averted.

"Hard footin' tonight," said Ben, peering out into the white darkness. "Well, 'night, Susie. Don't scare Santie away."

"Good night, Uncle Ben," she answered.

Ben went up to his room, unlocked his wooden chest, and took out of it a necktie for Abel, a gay red one, wrapped in fancy tissue paper. He gave a silent chuckle, and then extracted an old leather wallet containing ten $50 bills. Vaguely Ben felt he ought to have some paper and a ribbon to wrap the money up in. He could get the paper all right, but where was there a ribbon, except in Susie's room? Ben, however, was nothing, if not inventive. He took from his bureau drawer a necktie—not an old one, but his second best, no less!—stretched it on the floor, and with his knife carefully slit out a strip of silk half an inch wide. Then he started downstairs for paper. But even as he opened his door he heard a whistle outside, and the sound of Susie's steps below. Tiptoeing to the head of the stairs, he felt a breath of cold air from the open door, and heard whispers. The door was closed, but the whispers continued inside.

"O, Dan! You are all over snow! Ain't you froze?"

"Not now!"

"But you mustn't stay—uncles are abed. No—no—please."

"Just one—I got to, Sue. It's Christmas eve."

Silence, and then a whispered good night, the gust of air once more, and the sound of the bolt shot. Ben tiptoed back into his room, and waited. He heard Susie come upstairs immediately, and then go down again. At length she came up and shut her door for the night. Ben took his lamp and stole down to find a piece of paper. Returning with it, he wrapped the bills and tied them with the piece of silk. At least, the bundle was gay! Then he wrote with a pencil, "For Susie. Merry Christmas from Uncle Ben," and took his two parcels down.

Both his sock and Abel's were already bulging, and he felt of the bulges curiously, like a boy. Then he stuffed his two packages in their proper places and stole upstairs to bed.

Ben was the first awake. He went down and started up the fire in the range and in the sitting room stove. Outside the blown snow was banked against the windows, and the rooms, without the morning sun yet risen, were filled with a curious white dimness. Ben threw in wood prodigally, and the stoves were roaring when Susie appeared.

"Merry Christmas!" he shouted. "I said it first!"

Then he gestured toward the stuffed stockings. "Santie scrooged through all right," he said.

"So he did!" laughed the girl. "Soon 's Uncle Abel comes we'll see what he brought!"

The bacon was crisping, and there was the smell of coffee before Abel appeared.

"Now we can see what Santie's brought us," cried Ben. "Merry Christmas, Abel."

Abel grunted. He knew too well what Santa had brought. "Ain't no need till we've had some food," he said.

"O, no, you look right off, first thing," said Ben. "That's al'ays the way."

Susie, however, turned to the stove to hide her disappointment. "No—let's have our breakfast first," she said.

"O, all right. Maybe Abel will feel more chipper then."

They sat down, and ate in a constrained silence, each busy with private thoughts, and the face of Abel glum and brooding. Susie, with a sudden stubbornness of her own, now insisted on doing the dishes before the stockings were taken down. The sun was up, and the snow beginning to drop away from the window panes, letting in the warm golden light, before she and Ben went to the mantel and took the stockings down. Each retired to a corner, and drew out the contents.

"Hello!" cried Ben, holding up a warm knit waistcoat. "Guess Santie's brought me something pretty nice!"

Abel was looking at his carefully knit, thick woolen socks and at the necktie from Ben.

"Humph!" he said. "Think you're goin' to make a dude of me, eh?"

And then both men were aware of the sobs from the corner where Susie sat, and turned toward her. There was no use—she couldn't choke back the tears.

"Now—Susie——" Ben began, but before he could say more she was beside him, against him, her face buried on his breast—and his arms about her. Abel stood looking on, dumb, shuffling his feet a little.

Neither did Ben say anything, but only patted her shoulder clumsily till she raised her tear stained face, on which a smile was breaking, and half whispered, "Did you know?"

Poor Ben was so close to tears himself at the sight of the radiance of her smile that he could only nod his head.

The girl sank her head against his shoulder again.

"I'm so ashamed," she said, "that you had to find it out without me telling you. I ought to have told you. But I—I——"

"You didn't want to make no fuss till you was sure—I know," Ben nodded sagely.

"Sort of," she said. "I didn't want you—you both—to have any of my troubles on your mind. And now—you found out! How did you find out?"

"Little bird," said Ben.

"No? How?" Still in his arms, she was pulling like a petted child at a button on his coat, her face upturned.

"Remember one Sunday you came into the barn?"

Susie straightened up. "You heard? Me and Dan—that day? You know everything—about the mortgage, and all?" she cried.

Ben nodded.

"And you're just as good as giving this to Dan, so's we can get married?"

"I'm giving it to you, if that's the same thing."

"O, you dear, darling old Santa Claus!" she cried, throwing her arms around his neck and kissing him.

Then suddenly she remembered Abel.

"O, dear Uncle Able!" she exclaimed penitently, "here I'm just thanking Uncle Ben, 'cause his name was on the package, and it's your present, too, 'cause the money, I know, belonged to both of you."

More slowly she moved toward Abel, as if to kiss him.

He stood rigid and motioned her away. "No, it ain't, it's Ben's money," he said, very slowly. "I ain't claimin' no thanks I don't deserve. We divided up last week. I—I'm much obliged for them nice socks."

Then he sat down heavily in a chair.

Susie stood between the two men, in wonder and perplexity. "I—I don't understand——" she began, when the door suddenly shook with a blow, and then burst open, letting in a rush of snow, and Dan.

"Merry Christmas!" he shouted, stamping his feet. "Gee, Sue, that's a swell sweater. And here, Santa Claus has sent some stuff by me." He handed each of them a package—tobacco for the men, a cheap fur neckpiece for Susie, who opened it with trembling fingers and held it up with a little cry of pleasure, and then put it as a frame below her happy face, which, Ben saw, had never looked so pretty before.

"Thank you, Dan," she said, coming close to him.

"Abel," said Ben, "it's time you'n me got them cows milked and the paths shoveled."

Abel rose slowly from his chair. He spoke with obvious effort, almost as if the words were wrenched from him.

"Jest a minute," he said. "Strikes me I ain't givin' nothin'. I kinder put off gettin' anybody presents too long, I guess. I—I got a present I want to give to Dan."

There was a pause, and everybody regarded him with astonishment in the silence.

"I ain't got it handy, by me," he went on, even more slowly. "But I guess my word's good. I wanter give Dan—five hundred dollars."

Susie uttered a smothered cry. Dan was stunned to silence. Ben sat down so abruptly on the sofa that a tack flew out of the webbing under the springs. "Well, I'm darned!" he said.

The girl was the first to recover, and rushed to her uncle, to kiss him. Then Dan grasped him by the hand. He put an arm clumsily around Susie, and mumbled, "There, there, that's all right." And then he wheeled on Ben, with a "Well, how about them cows?"

The two men went from the room, as Dan and Susie, their eyes full of joy and wonder, slipped into each other's arms.

In silence, the two figures bent to the drifts, and cleared a way to the barn. Once inside, Ben shook down the food for the cattle and the horse, and came over where Abel was already seated, milking Jersey Bess.

"Do you mind tellin' me what made you act like a darn fool, too?" he demanded.

The ring of the milk in the pail ceased.

"I seen her kissin' you," Abel answered slowly, thoughtfully. "Yes, that was it, I seen her kissin' you."

"Well, she's kissed you now, too. I suppose some day we can go over to Lawyer Evans and have them accounts merged again. I don't feel quite easy with so much all my own. I might get reckless."

"No hurry," said Abel. "We got to get them three chairs mended for old Mrs. Shook."

"That's right," said Ben, as the alternate streams began to sing on his pail bottom, too. "Well, some day we'll fix it up."

all the battalion was going to hell and as if the war was hopeless. And as if the officers of the battalion were not as much to be trusted as they had been six months ago, and as if the men of the battalion were growing stubborn. Something must be done about A company. But what? And that dreadful bounder, Gotch, with his debts and the contempt of the men! How was he to get rid of him? A company junior officers would shield Gotch. They were good boys. And he was tired. And all his bones ached. And his nephew, Hugh——

"And, suddenly, Hugh said he knew that it was his uncle's worries he was feeling. And he wanted to go to his uncle. But he couldn't move. And, of course, he couldn't have gone to the C. O. in orderly room if he could have moved.

"Gotch was banging on the piano, but suddenly Hugh heard his uncle's voice say in his ear: 'I can't keep . . . O, God, I can't keep . . . I'm falling . . . falling . . .' And then he himself, he Hugh himself, was sitting on the hard wooden chair at the C. O.'s table. He felt older, older, and wiser and wiser, and surer of himself than he had ever felt sure. But his hand on the blanket table cover was heavy and white and hairy. And he said: 'Call in the prisoners.' And the provost sergeant roared: 'Escort and company Sergeant Major Wilson!'

"And he reached his heavy hand distastefully for the buff 252 which was pinned to the field conduct sheet and had on top of it a piece of scrawled writing paper. And he read a number and the name Wilson and the rank, company sergeant major, and the offense: 'Highly irregular conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline. Using disrespectful language with regard to an officer.' And to himself he said: 'That swine, Forty, is trying to do in Wilson for not having given false evidence against those two men the day before yesterday.' But he said aloud and heavily to the adjutant at his side: 'Ask A company if they can't make out better charges than that!' And he snorted with contempt over his heavy gray mustaches: 'Highly irregular conduct to the prejudice——'

"He leant back in his chair and looked composedly at the always worried face of the company sergeant major. And he knew that the sergeant major, with his brown face, black eyes, and waxed mustaches was the best man in the battalion. A time serving man, an old guardsman with twenty-three years' service and never a mark on his conduct sheet—except that six years before when he had been regimental quartermaster sergeant he had gone mad over a woman called Hurlett and broken his leave and been reduced to sergeant—as will happen to the best of men. But for that he would surely have been a guards regimental sergeant major. A good, honest man!

"And 'Old Forty,' 'forty foot down and still digging,' the men called him because he never left the bottom of the deepest dugout, was trying to do Wilson in! Well, they would see.

"He said: 'Company Sergeant Major Wilson, you have heard the charge. The first witness is your company commander, Captain Gotch. He writes: "On the 17-4-17 A company were balloting for leave in my orderly room. The company quartermaster sergeant was drawing names from a hat in my presence and the company sergeant major was writing down the names. There were seven names to be drawn out of twenty-four. When six had been drawn I said: 'Company sergeant major, put down the name of Lance Corporal Howells, 579756.' The company sergeant major demurred. I said: 'The O. C. company has always the right to nominate a man for special services.' The company sergeant major said: 'It isn't done in this battalion, sir.' I said: 'Those are my orders.' The company sergeant major wrote down the name of Lance Corporal Howells. As I was leaving the room I heard the company sergeant major say to the company quartermaster sergeant: 'Gotch will miss fifty-six Howells in the next ten days.' I ordered him to be put under arrest. Next witness!

"The provost sergeant roared: '46721 Company Quartermaster Sergeant Reynolds.'

"Hugh said he could see that originally Captain Gotch had written: 'Company Sergeant Major Wilson said: "Lance Corporal Howells has only been a short time with the company—since you came, sir! And all the men whose names are down have been a minimum of eighteen months without leave. And leave only just open after three months." He had then struck out those words and substituted: "The company sergeant major demurred." He might have saved himself the trouble, for the quartermaster sergeant reported the words in full.

"'And what happened then?'

"'As Captain Gotch was going out of the room, sir, the company sergeant major said to me: "Brother Boche will miss Lance Corporal Howell in the next ten days." Captain Gotch ordered me to put the company sergeant major in the clink.'

"Hugh said that he reached across—the heavy white hand—and took the charge sheet from the adjutant, who had in the meantime resumed possession of it. He was taking up a pen and writing heavily himself the word 'Case . . . .' while he said:

"'Company Sergeant Major Wilson.'

"Wilson cleared his throat; he was always husky. A good man, Hugh said! And it was a pleasure for him to hear Wilson say:

"'I beg of you, sir, for leave to speak'—the time honored guards' formula.

"He said that he agreed to the evidence given by Company Quartermaster Reynolds.

"And Hugh said that, while he was heavily writing the word 'Dismissed' after the word 'Case' on the charge sheet—(You must understand that a commanding officer does not usually write these things in ink himself, but leaves it to the adjutant)—he was saying dryly:

"'Company sergeant major, it is never a good thing for an N. C. O. even to seem to comment on his company officers' orders. Captain Gotch is a little hard of hearing,' he added; 'case dismissed.'

"Hugh said that the roaring of the provost sergeant getting in the next case, and the men stamping as they marched out, suddenly became the voice of Captain Gotch, who had swung round on the piano stool and was saying:

"'You, Hugh,' and then, 'By God, if the C. O. gives Wilson "Case explained" I shall go before the brigadier.'

"Hugh said he answered:

"'I should, Gotch. I should go before division. Because if I were in the colonel's shoes I should make it "Case Dismissed."'

"Gotch said:

"'By God, what do you mean, Hugh?'

"'I mean,' Hugh said, 'that division are asking for a junior officer to look after divisional follies.'

"Gotch's jaw fell down, and he clenched his right fist. But suddenly he stiffened to attention. The door had opened behind Hugh, but he knew of course that the colonel had come in. There had been only two cases at orderly room.

"The colonel had a slip of paper in his hand and was looking at it with his brows knitted. It was a 252.

"'Hugh,' he said, 'I'm getting to write deucedly like you.' And then:

"'Ah, Gotch. The adjutant says the baths are open. See that A company parades in good time.'

"Hugh said he drew himself together and looked at his uncle.

"'I was just recommending Capt. Gotch, sir,' he uttered slowly and deliberately, 'to apply for the job of the divisional follies. It's going begging.'

"The colonel nodded at Gotch.

"'I should, Gotch,' he said. 'I could recommend you cordially.' Gotch gathered up his hat, and gloves, and stick, and left the room. The old man fell into the chair by the fire.

"'Hugh,' he said, 'get me a drink. Hugh, were you in orderly room just now?'

"'I don't know,' Hugh said. 'Yes, yes. I think I was.'

"The C. O. imagined he was confused because he thought he would be strafed for having been here.

"'That accounts for your handwriting on this 252. I suppose the adjutant was too busy,' he said. 'I didn't really notice who was there. And then he lifted his tired eyes and looked at Hugh with an awful apprehension:

"'Was I—was it—all right?' he asked.

"'You were splendid, sir,' Hugh answered. 'You looked tired—ill. But you were splendid.'

"He was mixing a whisky, and as he handed it to his uncle he said:

"'I hope to God that swine Gotch goes to the division.'

"The colonel drank down his whisky.

"'Thank God, Hugh, my dear,' he said. 'I thought I was asleep in my own orderly room.'"

A Tale of "the Heaviest Tiredness in All the World"—the Tiredness of the War in France

ON Sept. 27, 1919, four men were held up at midnight between York and Darlington in a first class carriage. One was an architect, aged 50; two were country gentlemen from the neighborhood of Aysgarth, in the late '40s, and the last was the M. O. of a service battalion returning on demobilization. He also came from near Aysgarth, where he had a practice. They had been a long time in the train; it seemed longer and there was a dead silence all down the line. The architect, who had a gray beard, stretched out his legs and yawned:

"Eh, but I'm tired!" he said. "As tired as the old priest, Peter Monagham."

One of the country gentlemen asked who was the old priest, Peter Monagham. The architect said he was a good old priest who, on a night when he was dog tired, received a summons to administer extreme unction. But he fell asleep, being so very tired, and only waked in the morning light in great shame and tribulation. So he rode very fast to the house of his penitent and was told the man had died.

"But, father," said his informant, "he died easy and in the peace of God. He was very troubled in the early hours, but after you came and administered the blessed sacraments he grew calm, and so he made a good end." According to the legend, an angel, or it may have been the priest's own soul, had come to confess the dying man while the old priest slept. So the old priest was saved from great shame.

"Ah," one of the country gentlemen said, "that would be in the old days, and in Ireland."

"You won't find the like," the other agreed, "in the north of England today. The more's the pity for us that are getting on in years." The three of them agreed. But the M. O. happened to be an Irishman.

"I'll tell you a story if you like," he said. And though none of them were very cordial at first, off he went. The story he told was something like this: It was, he said, in the middle days of the war, and in France. And if you wanted, he emphasized, to know the heaviest tiredness of all the world you must know the tiredness of the war in France in the winters of '16 and '17, when the Somme push was stopped and the heavy other work began to be felt in battalion headquarters and such places. Heavy, hard work, endless papers, endless responsibilities, bitter hard weather—and danger that seldom ceased. It was hard on the young, but it was bitter, bitter hard on those that were aging at all. Some knew it less than others, but the M. O. would know better than any, for he would have a bird's-eye view of a whole battalion, and its nerves, and its illnesses, and its tiredness.

"I didn't know," the architect said, "that it was really like that. I thought it was all fine and high spirits, really, and things going with a dash until your—what's the word?—stopped one!"

"Ah, don't ye believe it," the Irish M. O. said. "It wasn't so in the battalion that I had the honor to be attached to and it wasn't so in any of the other battalions that I had the honor to see, and they were many. Did you ever hear of the colonel of a regular battalion who went mad, and walked out of his own lines straight over to the Germans, and went walking on and on, stark mad, till the Germans took him, three miles behind their lines. Or of the next colonel of the same battalion, who went home sick and shot himself in his flat in South Audley street, or of the next who—well, there were many! There were many who went over the edge of unreason—but there were many and many who stayed by the grace of God just on this side of the edge. By the grace of God—as in the case of the old priest, Peter Monagham. It was like that with Lieutenant Colonel Leslie Arkwright—and it was very nearly like it with his nephew, Lieutenant Hugh, both of my battalion. And they, mind you, were two of the best men that ever wrote 'Please' at the end of a memorandum about the number of time passes issued to their battalion. He was a fine, good, kindly, warm hearted old fellow—the colonel commanding—and the boy was a good boy. He had gayety and sense of responsibility, and youth, and great physical strength. And they say that never in his life did he sign a memorandum without looking it through to be sure that truth was in it—and commas. Who of us is there of which the like could be said, heaven help us?

"Well, uncle and nephew were the best of pals. They thought alike, in a way that was strange for the old and the young. Why, it was queer how, after dinner in the headquarters mess, one would begin a sentence and stop for a word and the other finish it. Of course, it was the same blood in them—very old blood, and no doubt inbred, too. And their voices were alike. Why, if you were at C. O.'s orderly room and had your back to the table you could not tell, supposing the C. O. said, 'Six days' field punishment, No. 11,' and the boy repeated it for the purpose of getting it surely correct on the —252—you couldn't tell which voice was which.

"So their friendship was, till there came the winter of '16-'17, and Captain Gotch (that isn't his name; he is still alive—he would be). This was one of those men as to whom there is a black mark against their names in the high books. There are such men and there are such books in the world. (I don't mean the confidential records of a battalion orderly room, but books kept higher still.) They are men who appear four-square, able, intelligent, they generally have flashing teeth—and they are unsound. They get on, but they don't get on as well as you expect them to. The inexperienced like them enormously; the experienced hold their tongues about them.

"So Hugh Arkwright liked Captain Gotch immensely. The fellow had the usual fine teeth and fine, rather thin legs and a well kept mustache and brown eyes that did not always look at you, and fine breeches, but he did not come out till the winter of 1916, and he came out as a captain of some seniority.

"It isn't what you look for, but no doubt he could give some reason for it. There was a good deal of gossip about him. He came from a reserve battalion that wasn't popular in the regiment. So things were said about him—they were probably untrue. They ranged from nasty, very nasty things about him and women and the colonel of his reserve battalion, to the allegation that a firm in which he had been junior partner before the war had been fined heavily for trading with the enemy. But no doubt they were not true, as I said before. I don't know what was the matter with him. I dare say I am unjust to him, but then I didn't like him.

"But if I didn't there were plenty did. The young fellows in the mess when the battalion was in support and they could get leave to go into the big towns and cut a little splash for a night—they'd swear by Gotch. He was their leader, then. And Hugh Arkwright went with the rest of his age.

"That was how it came to sad disagreement between him and the old C. O. Hugh thought that his uncle was unjust to Gotch. There would be recommendations going for jobs at divisional headquarters and higher up. Circulars came in, you know, asking for junior officers who have knowledge of Flemish, Japanese, Maregasque, Basque, bayonet fighting as practiced in Pushtu, or for senior officers who have expert knowledge of pig breeding, the growing of Jerusalem artichokes, the extraction of solder from old tins, the unraveling of gold lace—God knows what!

"And Captain Gotch would send his name in for all these things and the C. O. would send the name on, but without any recommendation. Young Hugh would see the memos and his eyes would be troubled. He was very intimate with Gotch by March—when the weather was frightful. I forgot to say that Captain Gotch had a fine baritone voice. It has an important bearing on the last words of my story. He would sing the popular sentimental songs of the day and put in nasty meanings and raise one brown eyebrow when he came to them. It made him popular with the men of the battalion who were not in his company when he sang to them at smoking concerts, improvised in old barns and tents and pigsties. But his own company was nasty.

"One day the colonel came to me as M. O.

"'Pat,' he said, 'I don't believe I can stick it. Good God, that I should have to say I don't believe I can stick it!'

"I asked him what was the matter, but it wasn't necessary to ask him what was the matter. His mind was overloaded. You see, like his nephew, he was indefatigable and he didn't leave as much as he might have to his subordinates. And he knew the name and regimental number of every Tommy in his battalion, and a little bit about each man, too. He was a Yorkshireman and they came from the west country. But I remember walking with him along the main street in Amiens in the twilight, and there was a Tommy looking into a picture postcard shop.

"'Hullo 09 Phillips,' the colonel said to him. 'Going to buy a blood stained souvenir for the little girl in Cairleon-on-Usk?' And he knew all his men like that.

"But latterly it was patent that he was feeling the strain. It took the form of falling asleep. He'd fall asleep at table, in between two words of a sentence. (That was how we knew that Hugh could complete his sentences for him!) His silver head would drop forward and his eyes close, or the same midway in dealing at a rubber of bridge. And the officers would wait silent and worried.

"On the morning he came to me he'd fallen asleep whilst taking his orderly room for ten seconds. He said he didn't believe they'd noticed it, and I don't believe they had. But he had dozed in his chair at a table covered with a blanket, with the assistant adjutant beside him, and the prisoner, and escort, and provost sergeant, and regimental sergeant major, and all in front of him—and Captain Gotch. In the schoolroom of a little town in Flanders, it was. I forget the name. It made it better—or perhaps it made it worse—that the sleeping fits only came on when we were out of the trenches proper.

"'And the devil of it is,' he said, 'I woke up to hear myself saying like a bally rifle shot: "Case explained!" And the charge was a hell of a serious charge of refusing to obey orders brought by that fellow Gotch.

"'Apparently on a beastly, cold wet night Gotch had stormed down like a madman on his company, who were on some sort of fatigue, carrying stones, or boxes, or cases of dumbbells, or something. And two of the men had said they couldn't—or wouldn't—lift something wet and heavy. It was a case that was open to doubt. Gotch swore the men said they wouldn't. The company sergeant major, who was a time serving man with twenty-three years' service—he was the only witness—was not ready to swear what the word used had been. It might have been "couldn't" or it might have been "wouldn't."'

"So that the 'case explained' verdict, rendered actually in the C. O.'s sleep, hadn't been outrageous. Whatever the object was that they had been required to lift might, on a dark, wet night, have seemed beyond two men's lifting power. The C. O. said, with a trick of his old, gentle jauntiness, that he had got out of it all right, though Old Forty had not liked it.

"'And I could see that my young cub of a nephew didn't like it, either,' he said. Young Hugh had been recording the awards on the 252—the charge sheet.

"'I strafed the two men well,' the C. O. said, 'before the provost sergeant could march them out. I said that it was for the company officer and not for the men to judge what men could do. And so on.'

"Then he had cleared the room of the other ranks—the men and N. C. O.'s—'And I said to Mr. Forty that I wished that in future all officers giving evidence against other ranks should do it in writing whenever possible, as is provided in king's regulations, though it's apt to drop out of observance here.'

"'And I expect Mr. Forty did not like that much, either, sir,' I said to myself softly.

"The C. O. started a little.

"'Did I call Captain Gotch "Old Forty"?' he asked rather guiltily. 'It slipped out. You know, the men call him that, too.'

"'Bless you, sir,' I said, 'I hear it from every one of the sick I get from A company. And they've been many latterly.'

"'I wish to God,' the C. O. said, 'the fellow had never—but that's between you and me and that gatepost.' He sighed. And I knew he was thinking of the estrangement that was growing between him and his nephew. He knew, you see, what his nephew thought without his nephew having to say what it was, and he knew that his nephew thought he had unjustly insulted Captain Gotch by that verdict. I gave him a nux vomica tonic and said I'd certify him as fit for six months at the base. But he wouldn't have that.

"It was only two nights later that the nephew came to me—just before driving to some town or other—Steenenierch, I think—with a brakeload of young fellows, in search of diversion and, maybe, the young ladies. I pray God that one of them was kind to Hugh that night—for he was killed, driving back, by a stray shell that dropped through the bottom of the wagonette the young boys were in, on a clear, still moonlight night. But when he came to me was before he started.

"He was terribly depressed about his health—and extraordinarily glad about something else—and he wanted me to give him drugs to keep him from breaking down. He was a fine young fellow, 24, over 6 feet, with corrugated brows like his uncle, and a normal frown just like his uncle's—only they both used to break into bashful smiles, if you understand what I mean, as if they both were ashamed of smiling and the softer emotions, as being effeminate during the war, but they couldn't help liking the queer world and the queer people in it. So there he was, miserable about his health and happier than you ever saw anybody about his uncle, the C. O. He said he'd been having illusions. And when I asked him what illusions did he think he saw pink and red or bottle green blackbirds, he said no; it was queerer than that, but he couldn't tell me without telling a long story. So I told him to take some hooch and fire away.

"He told me a good deal that I knew, about his coolness towards his uncle, and then he came to that morning. He said that just before the orderly room the C. O. had said to him that he wanted Captain Wilkins, the adjutant, to help at orderly room that morning—marking down the cases, instead of Hugh, you know. And that worried him, so that instead of going to his papers after breakfast he sat down in an armchair by the fire in the A2 mess dining room. It was a large French house, the battalion headquarters at that time, the village school just behind it being the orderly room.

"So he sat by the fire, worrying.

"And then Gotch burst into the room and rushed to a writing table at the far end, beside the piano. He snatched at a piece of paper and cursed, and he began writing with a scratchy pen—and cursing—and scratching out and rewriting and gnawing his beautiful mustache. He said to himself: 'A d——d pass it's coming to if officers can't . . .' Then he roared out for a mess waiter and cursed him for having a codfish's face and told him to take the paper to the adjutant at the double and curse him. And then he got up with his back still to Hugh and sat down at the piano and began to dash off tinkling songs as hard as he could hit the ivories.

"And then, Hugh said, in the midst of his own worries suddenly he began to feel another worry—a heavy, dreadful worry, as if look House by the west door. Lester Hilton also had a mind full. Time was when his only feeling toward young Pennell had been one of friendly indulgence. But it seemed he could no longer feel that way toward any one. It was always in the back of his mind that this brutal trouble which had him in its grip was a sort of monstrous injustice, because he had the ability which entitled a man to some luck and luck had hit him one blow after another while showering favors on people who didn't deserve them at all. In that way he had come around to hating his senior partner—Ted's father—quite cordially, and now that he thought of it he quite hated Ted also, as another blockhead on whom fortune persisted in smiling. It was fairly like seeing the woman one loved lavish her favors on an altogether inferior rival.

But the strange story he had just heard in such convincing detail might in some sort redress the balance. A man who is pelted from all sides must throw up such defense as he can find. He found his wife and straightened out the thoughtful furrow in his brows to assume a light and casual air.

"I hear that pretty maid—Katey, I think her name is—has gone away," he remarked, smiling.

"So Anne said," his wife replied, mildly surprised at such an observation from him. "Why?"

Hilton laughed. "Afraid I spoiled the third act of a thrilling drama. A couple of chaps out here—hostlers or gardeners, I suppose—seemed to be on the point of going to the mat over Katey's charms when I blundered up and ruined the scene. I think one was accusing the other of sequestrating Katey—Svengali to her Trilby, maybe. When did the girl go away?"

"Why, Anne said something about it yesterday," Mrs. Hilton replied. "It seems she telephoned to Benjamin the day before that she wasn't coming back, and asked him to keep her clothes until she sent for them. Anne was disturbed about it, and vexed at Benjamin for not finding out where the girl was when she telephoned. Anne's rather afraid the girl may have done something foolish; but I told her I didn't know what she could do about it if the girl had decided to leave—foolish or not."

Hilton smiled as though the scene he had just witnessed still amused him, and with that amused air said, "Find out what time it was that she telephoned, will you? Ask Benjamin. I want to know."

"Why, yes, I can ask him," his wife replied—not seeing why her husband's amusement should lead him to that length, but not caring.

Hilton dropped the subject then and soon took himself away; for there was another subject that his wife wanted to talk about and he did not. Momentous as that subject was, there was no use talking it over with her, for she really couldn't understand.

But he wanted to be sure when Katey telephoned that she wasn't coming back, or when Benjamin said that she had telephoned. If Benjamin said that it was about 3 o'clock and Katey lay in the laundry, drunk or drugged, with Ted Pennell's coat over her, more than two hours later, that would quite likely mean something of rather larger proportions. A man pelted from all sides must throw up what defenses he finds.

He had never heard anything specific about Ted Pennell which pointed in the same direction as this shadowy finger, but the general pointings were in that direction. Ted Pennell had not finished college—for reasons that could give little satisfaction to a judicious guardian, although the young man himself frankly laughed over them. After that failure he had been sent to California to learn the oil business. Hilton didn't know how much oil business he had learned, but surmised it was not much. Out there he had discovered compelling reasons why a trip to the orient was indispensable to a proper understanding of the oil business, and those reasons had been imposed upon a fatuous father sufficiently, at least, to win his consent. Hilton learned afterwards that Mrs. Loughman and her daughter Peggy had taken a trip to the orient at the same time.

In April young Pennell had come on to New York to learn the investment business in the office of Pennell, Hilton & Co., and Hilton had a quite exact idea as to how much investment business he had really learned. In June Mrs. Loughman and her daughter came up here to the seashore for the summer. After suffering two weeks' separation, young Pennell had decided to take his hard earned vacation early in the season and had come to Overlook with his aunt and her husband, Judge Crane.

So there was a record of laziness, aimlessness, and self-indulgence—all tolerated by a foolish father. With that record—gi .n an astonishingly pretty and careless maid named Katey—Hilton considered that the matter fairly explained itself, taking for granted that it was as scandalous as Samuel Thorp's story had suggested.

And not long after that young Pennell took a foremost place in the mind of another person—namely, Danforth Crane. He and Lester Hilton had left Overlook house almost together, but at once separated by mutual inclination, Danforth Crane turning southward and toward the woods. This only child of the master of Overlook was then 36 years old and two or three inches shorter than his father, but carrying more flesh, his fuller face bearing no strongly marked wrinkles. It was rugged and big featured like the judge's face, yet the resemblance between them was by no means close. Danforth was swarthy, the skin on the hairless areas of his face as dark as that beneath which lay the roots of his shaven beard. He wore a thick mustach, trimmed close, and his almost black hair looked stiff and intractable.

Strolling, enjoying the genial sun and salt air, he struck off toward the garage and stables—a group of long, low gray structures in which a company of cavalry might have found accommodation. He shared his father's taste for distinguished horseflesh, but, although the ample Crane fortune would presumably one day be his, he had by no means reached the stage where he was content, like his father, to indulge a taste for horses and leisure as a major occupation. His ambition started where his father's left off and he was as deeply immersed in affairs as his father had been at 36. Not that he cared a great deal about having much more money; but he saw vast industrial regions—pretty nearly a whole industrial world—still to be conquered for oil; that sublimated coal, so convenient to handle, capable of such endless uses; all the ships and wheels ought to be driven by it finally. He was enlisted as a member of the great general staff for that conquest. Horses and Overlook could come later.

All the same he strolled around by the stables to take a look at the shiny beasts—every one a peer or peeress of the realm, with the stamp of noble breeding in their sleek nervous limbs and bright eyes. Ownership of them gave one an agreeable sensation. So Danforth took a turn through the stables, listening to the sage comments of the grooms.

Leaving the last stable he encountered Louis, the gardener—meeting face to face on the cinder path. He noted casually that Louis looked ill; but as their eyes met the gardener's appearance became even more remarkable. The man's hands clenched and something that Danforth couldn't make out—a kind of convulsive twist—appeared on his face. It made only the most fleeting of impressions on Danforth's mind and he strolled leisurely on—having another call to make that morning. His course still led southward and he struck off through the woods, going down a steep, sweet, ferny little valley and ponderously up the other side. The brief climb reminded him that he wasn't keeping as fit as he should, for it made his breath come short.

He paused at the top of the ascent and turned to look back in order to get a better measure of the climb. Then he saw that Louis the gardener was following him—at least it looked like following him; stalking him through the woods as a hunter stalks game. Now if anybody were stalking him anywhere Danforth's instincts immediately told him what to do—namely, just stand still and let the stalker come up with him. Dodging was never his way. So he stood in his tracks, wondering a little. He and Louis were old friends in a way.

There was no finesse about Danforth. They said down in Wall street that he was a man to be taken carefully into account, always; but he left finesse to those who might need it. There was a sort of law of gravitation, lighter objects in the neighborhood helplessly falling toward his mass. So now the distraught gardener gravitated to him—his mind in a tumult and only half understanding why he was going. Gaining the top of the ascent, level with Danforth, he could only gape at the dark man in a dumb, tormented appeal.

"Something on your mind, Louis?" Danforth inquired coolly.

Louis's brawny hand began mechanically picking at the bark of a tree. He couldn't get his eyes up to Danforth's face, as he muttered, "Men with no money and pull will have plenty on their minds." But the mass drew him.

"Somebody not been using you right?" Danforth suggested, tolerantly.

"Somebody ain't been using somebody else right," said Louis in an uncertain voice, picking at the bark. Still the man's mass drew him; the jealousy and sense of outrage in his breast boiled forth:

"There's a maid here, Mr. Danforth—a Polish maid—Katey. She's gone away!"

There was poignancy in that exclamation like a cry from the dead. Obscurely he had faith in the heavy man opposite him, and in a mechanical token of fealty took off his cap.

"Nobody seen her at the house since Thursday. Benjamin has locked up her room. He says she telephoned she was going away. At 3 o'clock he says she telephoned."

Glaring palely he rushed on. "Five o'clock she was in the laundry lying on some clothes. Drunk, that Sam Thorp says she was. Katey don't drink, ever. Sometimes when there's beer she takes a sip—half a glass. She don't drink, ever!" He struck his breast with a mighty fist. "It is not drink, Mr. Danforth. Rich people, with a pull, they do anything they please. It is Mr. Ted. He knows. He had her somewhere with him in his car. He brought her back to the house. It is not drink. It is drugs."

In his mind he saw Katey lying senseless—a sweet figure—with the great house sitting above her, forbidding. "A poor little maid—what does he care?" A sudden spurt of tears dimmed his glaring eyes and his voice broke.

"I take it up myself! I take him by the throat! But what do I know? How can I find out anything? Where is she? What did they do with her? I come to you! You are a square man! I want to know what is become of Katey."

Danforth had listened to this tempestuous and disconnected statement with astonishment. He remembered the maid Louis was speaking of.

"Why do you think Ted had a hand in it?" he asked, after a moment. In that moment he seemed to be telling Louis to compose himself—like a restraining hand on an excited person's arm.

"He is rich," Louis replied, as though that explained much. "He has money to spend. He's been meeting her at dances—he takes her riding." Louis had heard all about the dance; Lena had taken care that he should hear. "He had her somewhere in his car that morning. Katey never drinks!" he affirmed again, in a passionate outburst. "It's something bad! In the laundry there—when she was senseless—his coat was over her. Sam Thorp saw it."

It was Danforth's habit to permit himself a little pause before speaking. He followed the habit now, and asked: "Who is Sam Thorp?"

"He's a cousin of the furnace man, Jim Thorp," Louis replied, adding: "A loafer. But he says he saw her there—he pointed out the place. He peeked through the transom." He choked up a bit. "It sounds true, Mr. Danforth. Where would Katey be? She promised to go with me that Thursday evening. We're going to the theater at Windham. I had the tickets. I waited for her where she said, but she didn't come. Always Katey comes when she promises. Where would she be? Benjamin says she telephoned, but she didn't take her clothes."

His emotion, quelled by Danforth's mass, was rising again. "It's something bad, Mr. Danforth! I come to you first. I think you do right by a poor man—and a poor maid! Somebody is got to do right! I don't think you like such things of using a maid that way. Let him take one of his own girls, that's rich, too, and got strong friends! I can't stand hurting Katey, Mr. Danforth! Me—I don't want to kill nobody! I don't want to make trouble in the house where I work."

He couldn't very well express the powerful conflict of emotions and reasons that had been pulling him of late.

"I decide I come to you first. I have confidence in you. You do right by us, Mr. Danforth. I must know where Katey is gone—what is happened to her. She don't ever drink. If you do right by us I wait for you."

Danforth perceived that it was an honorable and loyal offer. He was even pleased by Louis' trust in him.

"This is all news to me, Louis," he said. "I will look into it. Certainly I don't want Katey misused in my father's house—or anywhere else. But this man who told you—what did you say his name is?"

"Sam Thorp," Louis repeated. "He is a cousin of the furnace man. He comes around here all the time."

"He may have been just lying," Danforth replied. "Or he may have been mistaken. I will find out. And there's no use talking about it to anybody until we know what's happened."

"No," Louis assented.

"Talking wouldn't do Katey any good if there's nothing in it—or anybody else," Danforth reminded him. "So say no more about it. Leave it to me."

That implied a promise, and Louis muttered: "Thank you, Mr. Danforth. I leave it to you."

"No more talking, then, until we find out," Danforth repeated, coolly, and waited for the gardener to take himself away.

Louis understood that, and said again, "I wait for you." Putting on his cap, he went down into the ravine, returning to the garage by the way he had come.

Danforth watched his descending figure for a moment, and turned away, his mind occupied by the strange story he had just heard. He had more or less an open mind about it. The fellow who told—Sam Thorp; he must remember that name—might have been lying or mistaken. And Louis, with the delusion common to lovers, might be mistaken about Katey's familiarity with alcoholic beverages. But in that case, why the statement from Benjamin that she had telephoned around 3 o'clock that she wasn't coming back? In any event it was something to be looked into.

He was hardly prepared to believe Louis' suggestion of a drug; but short of that he was ready enough to believe almost anything, for his confidence in Ted Pennell was slight. Lazy, self-indulgent, undisciplined, spoiled, with no notable intellectual powers—about so Ted Pennell stood in Danforth's mind. When a man past 23, or nearing 24, so stands in one's mind, one is prepared to believe many things.

Pondering, he moved on leisurely in the direction which he had had in mind when he left the stables—that is, southerly—until he came to another height at the edge of the woods, from which he looked down on three or four acres of lawn, shrubbery, and garden, with a dwelling in the midst. The dwelling was, perhaps, a quarter the prodigal size of Overlook house, with a red tile roof, the arched doors and windows in its gray stucco walls outlined in vermilion; altogether a smarter and gayer structure than Overlook, one on which the architect had exercised his fancy more freely than the high style of the judge's house permitted. Here lived Mrs. Judith Loughman and her daughter Elizabeth, or Peggy. There was Mrs. Loughman now, puttering in the flower garden—or, rather, supervising the puttering of a gardener. That, along with automobile rides, constituted her idea of out of door country life.

Danforth had meant to call at Mrs. Loughman's that morning. He saw her comfortable figure in the garden. But the view from that point dropped downward across the open to the sea, and a moment after seeing Mrs. Loughman he saw two bareheaded figures strolling along the rock rim of the shore in the direction of the coffee pot. One wore a blue silk sweater over a white dress and showed a crown of tawny hair. The other wore a brown flannel shirt, open at the neck, with tumbled hair only two shades darker than the girl's. They walked slowly and were evidently engaged in conversation. It struck Danforth, from that distance, that Peggy was doing most of the talking.

Two figures of youth—one of them, to Danforth, like a chord of music or the fragrance of a rose; the other one quite otherwise. While Peggy talked—as it seemed to Danforth—Ted Pennell stooped lithely down and picked up a round stone the size of a baseball. With a little toss he adjusted it in the palm of his hand, then drew himself up, with coiled muscles, and hurled the stone far into the sea. It was a splendid throw; any baseball captain would have admired it. And having seen how far out it lit, Ted thrust his hands in his trousers' pockets and continued to walk, listening to Peggy with bent head. That struck Danforth as finely typical; the young man down there possessed admirable strength and agility—to throw stones into the sea. More or less that struck Danforth as about what he was good for.

All the same they were both figures of youth. Their smooth cheeks flew the same flag. Their nervous limbs moved in a certain unison; one could catch a rhythm that was always breaking out. Danforth understood that very well—having often noted it of late. Foregoing the intended call, he turned his own dark and heavy figure right about in its tracks and plodded back toward the stables. That springy rhythm was no longer in his ponderous limbs; but he was making an industrial empire; he had practiced strength which was otherwise engaged than in throwing stones into the sea. Could a girl understand that?

. . . Especially if it should turn out that the stone thrower had played the dog to a helpless little parlor maid?

Pondering that, Danforth strolled back through the woods.

THE TEENIE WEENIES

THE LITTLE FOLKS GIVE A CHRISTMAS PRESENT. BY WM. DONAHEY.

AS Christmas drew near there were many mysterious bundles hidden away in the tiny houses beneath the rose bush where the Teenie Weenie village stood.

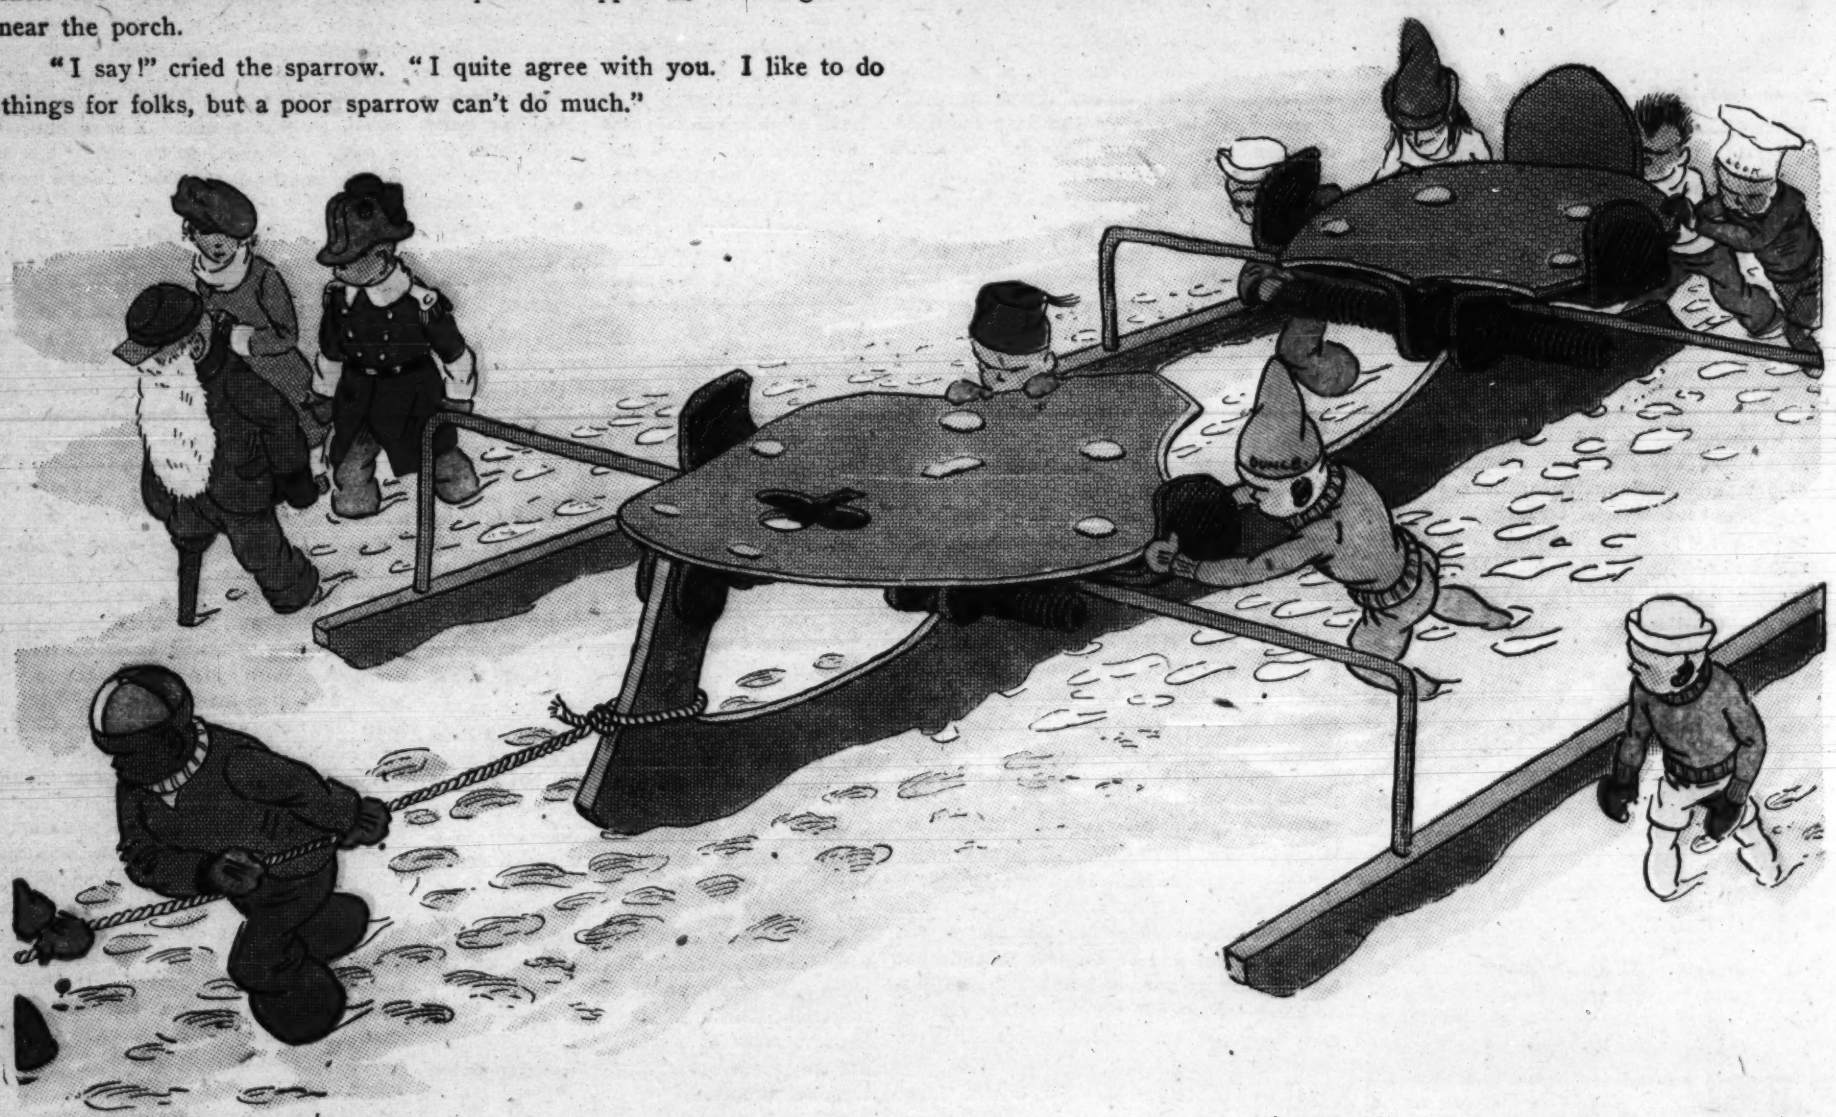
The little folks always gave presents to each other, and they usually made them with their own tiny hands.

The Cook, Gogo, and the Lady of Fashion usually looked after the Christmas candy, and this year they made three thimbles full of various kinds of delicious sweets.

"I wish we could make candy for every boy and girl in the world," said the kind hearted little Lady of Fashion as she scraped one of the tiny candy pans which had been set out on the back porch to cool. "Christmas is the time when folks ought to be doing something nice for each other."

Tilly Titter, the English sparrow, who sat on a bush near by, listened to the Lady of Fashion with all her ears, and as the little lady turned to enter the Teenie Weenie kitchen the sparrow hopped on to the ground near the porch.

"I say!" cried the sparrow. "I quite agree with you. I like to do things for folks, but a poor sparrow can't do much."



"Why, Tillie!" exclaimed the Lady of Fashion. "You are always doing nice things for folks."

"Well, there is one thing I'd like to do," said the bird. "Maybe you folks could do hit, for hit's something I couldn't possibly do if I had twenty bills and wings."

"Tell us," shouted several of the Teenie Weenies who had gathered around the bird.

"Well, hit's this," said the bird. "There's a family that lives down in that old box car beside the railroad track. They are 'aving a 'ard time to get along. The father is sick, and the mother is not able to work all the time, so I think the little boy of the family is not going to 'ave much of a Christmas if some kind person don't help."

"O, dear!" cried the Lady of Fashion. "Can't we do something?"

"Of c-o-u-r-s-e," answered the bird. "I was just coming to that. The other day I was sitting on the clothes line right near the door, and I heard the little boy ask 'is father if 'e could 'ave a pair of ice skates for Christmas. The little boy's father told him that they couldn't afford them, and the look of disappointment on the child's face nearly broke my 'eart."

"Me know where skates!" cried Zipp, who had been listening to the bird's story. "Me know where we can get skates. Skates much too little for boy who owns them. He gottie new pair, and we can get old skates and give to poor little boy.

"You'd be doin' a 'eap of good if you could get those skates over to the little boy," cried Tillie.

All the Teenie Weenies were greatly excited about getting the skates for the poor little boy, and several of the little people went over to the house where the skates were to see what could be done.

The skates were in good condition, and except for a little rust they were almost as good as new ones.

"It will be an awful job to move them," said the General. "They must weigh nearly fifty Teenie Weenie tons."

"It won't be so hard to move the skates," said the Old Soldier. "We can rig up some out runners and move the skate on its own runner."

"What's an out runner?" asked the Dunce.

"Why, an out runner is a piece of board attached to the skate, which runs along the ground on each side of the skate runner, and keeps the skate from falling over on its side," answered the Old Soldier.

The Teenie Weenies hurried back to the shoe house where they set to work making the runners so the skates could be moved.

The little fellows cut two long runners out of an old ruler, and collecting several pieces of wire, pulleys, and ropes they set out to move the skates.

First, the skates had to be pulled out of the wood house where they lay, and this took a great deal of pulling and lifting, but after several hours of hard work the task was finally accomplished.

The runners were next fixed to one of the skates with the wire, and in a little time the Teenie Weenies started the heavy skate sliding over the soft snow.

Several of the little men pulled at a long rope, which was fastened to the front end of the skate, while the rest pushed.

It was slow work, for the skate was mighty heavy, but just before dark on Christmas eve the little Chaps brought the skate to the box car where the little boy lived.

The little fellows spent almost the whole night in bringing up the other skate, in fact, it was just getting light on Christmas morning when they pulled the skates up on the step before the box car door.

The Teenie Weenies were too tired and cold to wait and see the little boy find his skates, but Tilly Titter was sitting on a tree near by and she saw it all.

"My dears!" cried the sparrow as she sat on the toe of the shoe house telling the Teenie Weenies how much joy their gift had brought to the little boy. "It would 'ave done your 'earts good to see that little fellow when 'e saw those skates on the door step. He just let out one yell and 'e gathered the skates up and ran into the house with 'em. I flew up on the window sill and there the little chap sat before the stove, huggin' those skates to his breast and cryin' and laughin' at the same time. 'Is face sort of looked like the flowers when they 'ave the dew and the sunshine on 'em in the early morning."

OVERLOOK HOUSE

Bigelow Ribbon Action

by Will Payne

THE STORY THUS FAR—Overlook House is the home of Judge Tillman Crane, a wealthy owner of oil lands, and his invalid wife. As the story opens the Cranes are entertaining as their guest Mrs. Edith Hilton, whose husband, a broker, has been handling the judge's financial interests. One afternoon Hilton summons his wife to a secret meeting at a nearby town and confesses that he has been misappropriating the Crane securities. A letter is on its way to Judge Crane which would reveal this, and Mrs. Hilton reluctantly agrees to intercept it and substitute another, which her husband gives her. To avoid recognition on her trip to town, Mrs. Hilton has borrowed the hat and cloak of Katey, a pretty maid employed at Overlook House. On her way back she is overtaken by Ted Pennell, son of her husband's partner, who mistakes her at first for the maid and then, discovering the masquerade, gives her a lift in his car. Ted promises secrecy and treats the little adventure as a joke, but several persons have seen the supposed maid in his car—a fact which paves the way for certain future misunderstandings. Back at Overlook House, Mrs. Hilton's task of tampering with the judge's mail is made easy by the fact that Katey, who usually receives it, has disappeared. The first to admit any knowledge of her whereabouts is Samuel Thorp, a town loafer, who has seen the girl lying on a pile of clothes in the laundry. After pondering his secret for a time he discusses it in a roundabout way with Louis, the gardener pretending to believe that Katey was merely recovering from the effects of a too hilarious party.

FOURTH INSTALLMENT.

Danforth Crane.

LOUIS obscurely knew that this man was torturing him. But he had no time to think about that aspect of it. He had inquired, as well as he could, about Katey's abrupt disappearance from Overlook House. As it was repeated to him, Mr. Benjamin had said that Katey telephoned about 3 o'clock to say that she was not coming back. Samuel Thorp was talking about 5 o'clock or something after. Mechanically Louis' tortured eyes traveled upward along the great gray wall of Overlook House. It loomed overhead, massively inclosing its secrets, impregnable with wealth and power, forbidding him even to question it. His heart was bursting.

The well known excitement of hooking a fish had led Samuel Thorp somewhat further than he meant to go. The excitement was still influencing him, and he added again:

"I thought maybe you had a little hand in that party, Louis. She was covered up with a man's coat. I thought maybe it was your coat; but I sort of remember now that it was Ted Pennell's."

The effect was startling to Cousin Sam. Louis whirled to face him, snatched the cap from his head, flung it furiously to the ground, and clutched a hand in his tow hair. He was glaring, and it struck Sam—the impact jarring his nervous system like a blow from a hammer—that he was on the point of committing a murderous assault. Cousin Sam's mouth opened, his under lip hanging pendulously. But just then he saw Mr. Lester Hilton up on the roadway and a prompt instinct of self-preservation moved him to call out, "Good morning, Mr. Hilton."

Whereupon Louis snatched up his cap and ran away.

Samuel Thorp suffered a strong shock of fear in the moment when it seemed that Louis might be about to commit an assault upon him. His mind was agitated by that shock as he looked up, loose lipped, at Lester Hilton on the roadway above. But the cause of his fear—Louis— had rapidly disappeared, and his self-respect began taking revenge for the injury that had been done it, as he walked up the incline toward Hilton, who seemed to be rather waiting for some explanation of the scene he had witnessed.

In his quality of American citizen with independent means—and a reckless blade, too—Sam held Louis in considerable contempt, both as a servant and a foreigner. Foreigners, whom he classified as Dutch, Dagoes, Pollocks, Hunkies, and Yuts, suffered a common inferiority in Sam's estimation.

"That sure jarred him," Sam observed, as through the jarring reflected some merit on himself. "Sort of give him the gaff right under the fifth rib."

He was somewhat uneasy in the presence of this other independent American citizen, whose trig clothing and residence in New York suggested that he might be even a more reckless blade and gayer sport than Sam himself. He wasn't sure just how far Hilton would accept the true quality between them, and he moderated his humorous eccentricities of speech somewhat.

"I was tellin' him," Sam continued, with a sociable grin, "that his girl was stewed down there in the laundry. It sure jarred him." Naturally, he wanted Hilton to accept him in true equality; this was an opportunity to make an impression in a desirable quarter, so he continued:

"It was Katey, a Polock, I guess—a maid here—and a very likely looking piece of calico. Maybe you remember her."

"Yes, I remember her," said Hilton—partly just amused at this native specimen.

That encouraged Sam to go on: "Right good to look upon was Katey. I guess by all accounts Louis was some stuck on her. The word was that Katey quit—telephoned or something, 'long about 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon. But along about 5 or 5:30 I happened to see her laid out in the laundry."

His pale eyes, one with a cast in it, examined Hilton's face uneasily a moment. He was uncertain as to just how far he should go, so he added:

"Stewed, I guess—or maybe doped. I was tellin' Louis about it. It sure jarred him. . . . I was tellin' him there was a man's coat thrown over her."

Hilton found himself interested otherwise than by way of amusement, and asked: "Whose coat was it?"

Sam gave him a very wise grin and this cryptic answer: "I'm guessin' that probably a young man who answers to the name of Pennell could tell you whose coat that was if he put his mind to it."

Hilton had the measure of the man who was talking to him—a measure easily taken. Also he had an idea of himself as a gentleman who should hardly be talking household scandal with such a person. But he was very decidedly interested, and asked:

"Did you see the coat?"

And Sam Thorp then perceived that his uneasiness had been without cause; this sport from New York was taking him as an equal. So he expanded and replied promptly:

"Sure I saw it. It was young Pennell's. He had the girl out with him the night before. Anyway," he corrected, with an unwonted scruple, "I saw him fetchin' her back here to the house in his car that morning." He grinned broadly and wisely as he added, "Colts will be colts—and fillies will be fillies."

The grin somehow embraced Lester Hilton in a fellowship which he resented—perhaps without due cause. So to speak, he resumed his state, gave Citizen Thorp a cool look, and walked away toward the house.

With a touch of natural indignation Citizen Thorp took his revenge by thinking, "Wonder if that stiff's got as much money as he lets on to have?" It comforted him to doubt it. All the same he was disturbed, for it then occurred to him that very likely he had been talking imprudently. He affected a complete indifference to and independence of the master of Overlook. Several times he had given Cousin Jim this patriotic advice: "If Judge Crane don't like it, tell him to go to hell." But he really had a rather lively sense of the power which that name connoted. It struck him now that he had been talking imprudently and with that idea in mind he immediately left the seat of power which he might have offended—not really hurrying, but just walking straight along until he gained the public road on the western confines of the judge's grounds, where he took the trolley to Windham.

That village of 3,000 or 4,000 inhabitants was his native place, in which nearly his whole life had been spent, and familiar to him as his own hand. Its main street, stragglingly lined on either side with modest shops of all sorts, wound in an irregular curve, hugging the northerly and westerly shore of the bay. The buildings were mainly of wood, one or two stories high—here and there with a marked colonial touch—but the brick structure of the First National bank towered four stories above the basement.

Sam could have told off the history of most of the shops and shopkeepers. Although many summer residents came to Windham to trade and a procession of foreign cars rolled along Main street, nearly every third person he met on the thoroughfare was a neighbor. To some of the less fortunate of these neighbors Samuel Thorp, as a young man of independent means and sporty character, was an object of admiration and envy. In that secure, familiar atmosphere Sam rapidly expanded and figuratively defied Judge Crane to browbeat him.

But he had said a good deal—more, really, than he had intended to, although what he said had stopped far short of the whole story. Both defiance and self-protection urged him to a further step in this affair which was so strange that he could hardly talk about it. Besides, he still had his consuming curiosity. Presently, therefore, he strolled on down Main street, his straw hat to one side and swinging a bamboo stick, until he came opposite a one story brick shop of no architectural pretensions, with a wooden awning extending over the worn and narrow stone sidewalk in front. The winding street was narrow also, and from his station on the other side Sam had a very good view of the premises. Each broad plate glass window bore the simple sign "Bloomfield, Undertaker." In one window a small white coffin was displayed for the attraction of the trade; the other held some potted plants.

"Layin' many of 'em away now, William—at so much per lay?" Sam asked, sociably.

So far as Sam could make out, there were no customers in the shop. Feeling satisfied as to that he crossed the street, but just as he gained the opposite sidewalk Mr. Bloomfield appeared in the doorway, glancing out—a small, lean man with a thin red beard and very red face. In view of his leanness, his dryness, and—perhaps—of his occupation, that redness always struck strangers as something unexpected and mysteriously out of place. It struck Sam forbiddingly now—familiar as he was with it.

"Howdy, neighbor!" he said genially.

Mr. Bloomfield turned a fishy eye upon him, nodded curtly, and retired into the shop, and Sam walked away—disappointed. He had meant to engage Mr. Bloomfield in conversation and perhaps extract some valuable information from him, but he felt that the crusty undertaker would be a difficult subject, so he had been somewhat prepared for a disappointment.

There was another chance, however. From Main street several narrow thoroughfares—unpopular with chauffeurs—led steeply up to Hill street, which was second class in a business way and, indeed, in good part given over to residences. Up there Sam turned to a ramshackle establishment whose sign announced William Furness & Son, Furniture and Undertaking. In one way it was much less promising than Mr. Bloomfield's more fashionable concern, but in another way more promising because Sam, so to speak, was quite at home in it.

It was the furniture which was in evidence as one stepped in, the undertaking wares being relegated to the rear. William Furness Sr. was industriously exhibiting bedsteads to two women; but William Furness Jr. was at leisure at the moment and Sam at once disclosed their relationship by inquiring:

"How's your corporosity segashiatin' today, William?" Calling him by his full name instead of by a nickname was part of the joke.

"I'm first rate," the young man replied, accepting the joke, but lacking Sam Thorp's gift of humor for a proper reply.

"Layin' many of 'em away now, William—at so much per lay?" Sam asked, sociably.

Furness confessed that trade in that line was dull at the moment, but Sam humorously stuck to the subject and in a moment Furness was recalling an incident which a humorous man might appreciate:

"A guy bought a coffin in here yesterday. He's somebody that lives around here. I've seen him, but I don't know who he is. He said never mind his name. He said a maid had died at his house and he was going to bury her himself to save expense. He picked out a cheap coffin, too. All we got out of it was $9 profit on the coffin. Took it away with him in a truck. Looked to me like Judge Crane's truck—maroon color, you know. Probably he borrowed it of the judge. He was a tightwad, all right."

"What sort of a lookin' guy was he?" Sam asked, his pale eyes popping with interest.

"Sort of dish faced man," Furness replied, "nose like a nubbin, with red and gray whiskers parted this way." He thrust the fingers of both hands against his chin and jerked them outward as though he were combing a beard that was parted in the middle. "I've seen him round here, but I don't know who he is."

Sam had time to ask several more questions regarding the bearded guy's behavior when the intrusion of a prospective customer cut short the conversation. But at that Sam went out enormously satisfied, for he knew—by name and appearance, at least—a dish faced man with a nubbin nose whose red and gray whiskers were parted in the middle. For Samuel Thorp it had been some day's work! Moving away from the modest furniture and undertaking shop he was fairly astonished at his own stature—as though he had looked up and discovered himself to be twenty feet high. He paused to get a cigaret from the treasured case and light it, and then, in a large self-possession, strolled down to Main street.

On turning away from loquacious Citizen Thorp, with a cool look, and entering Over-

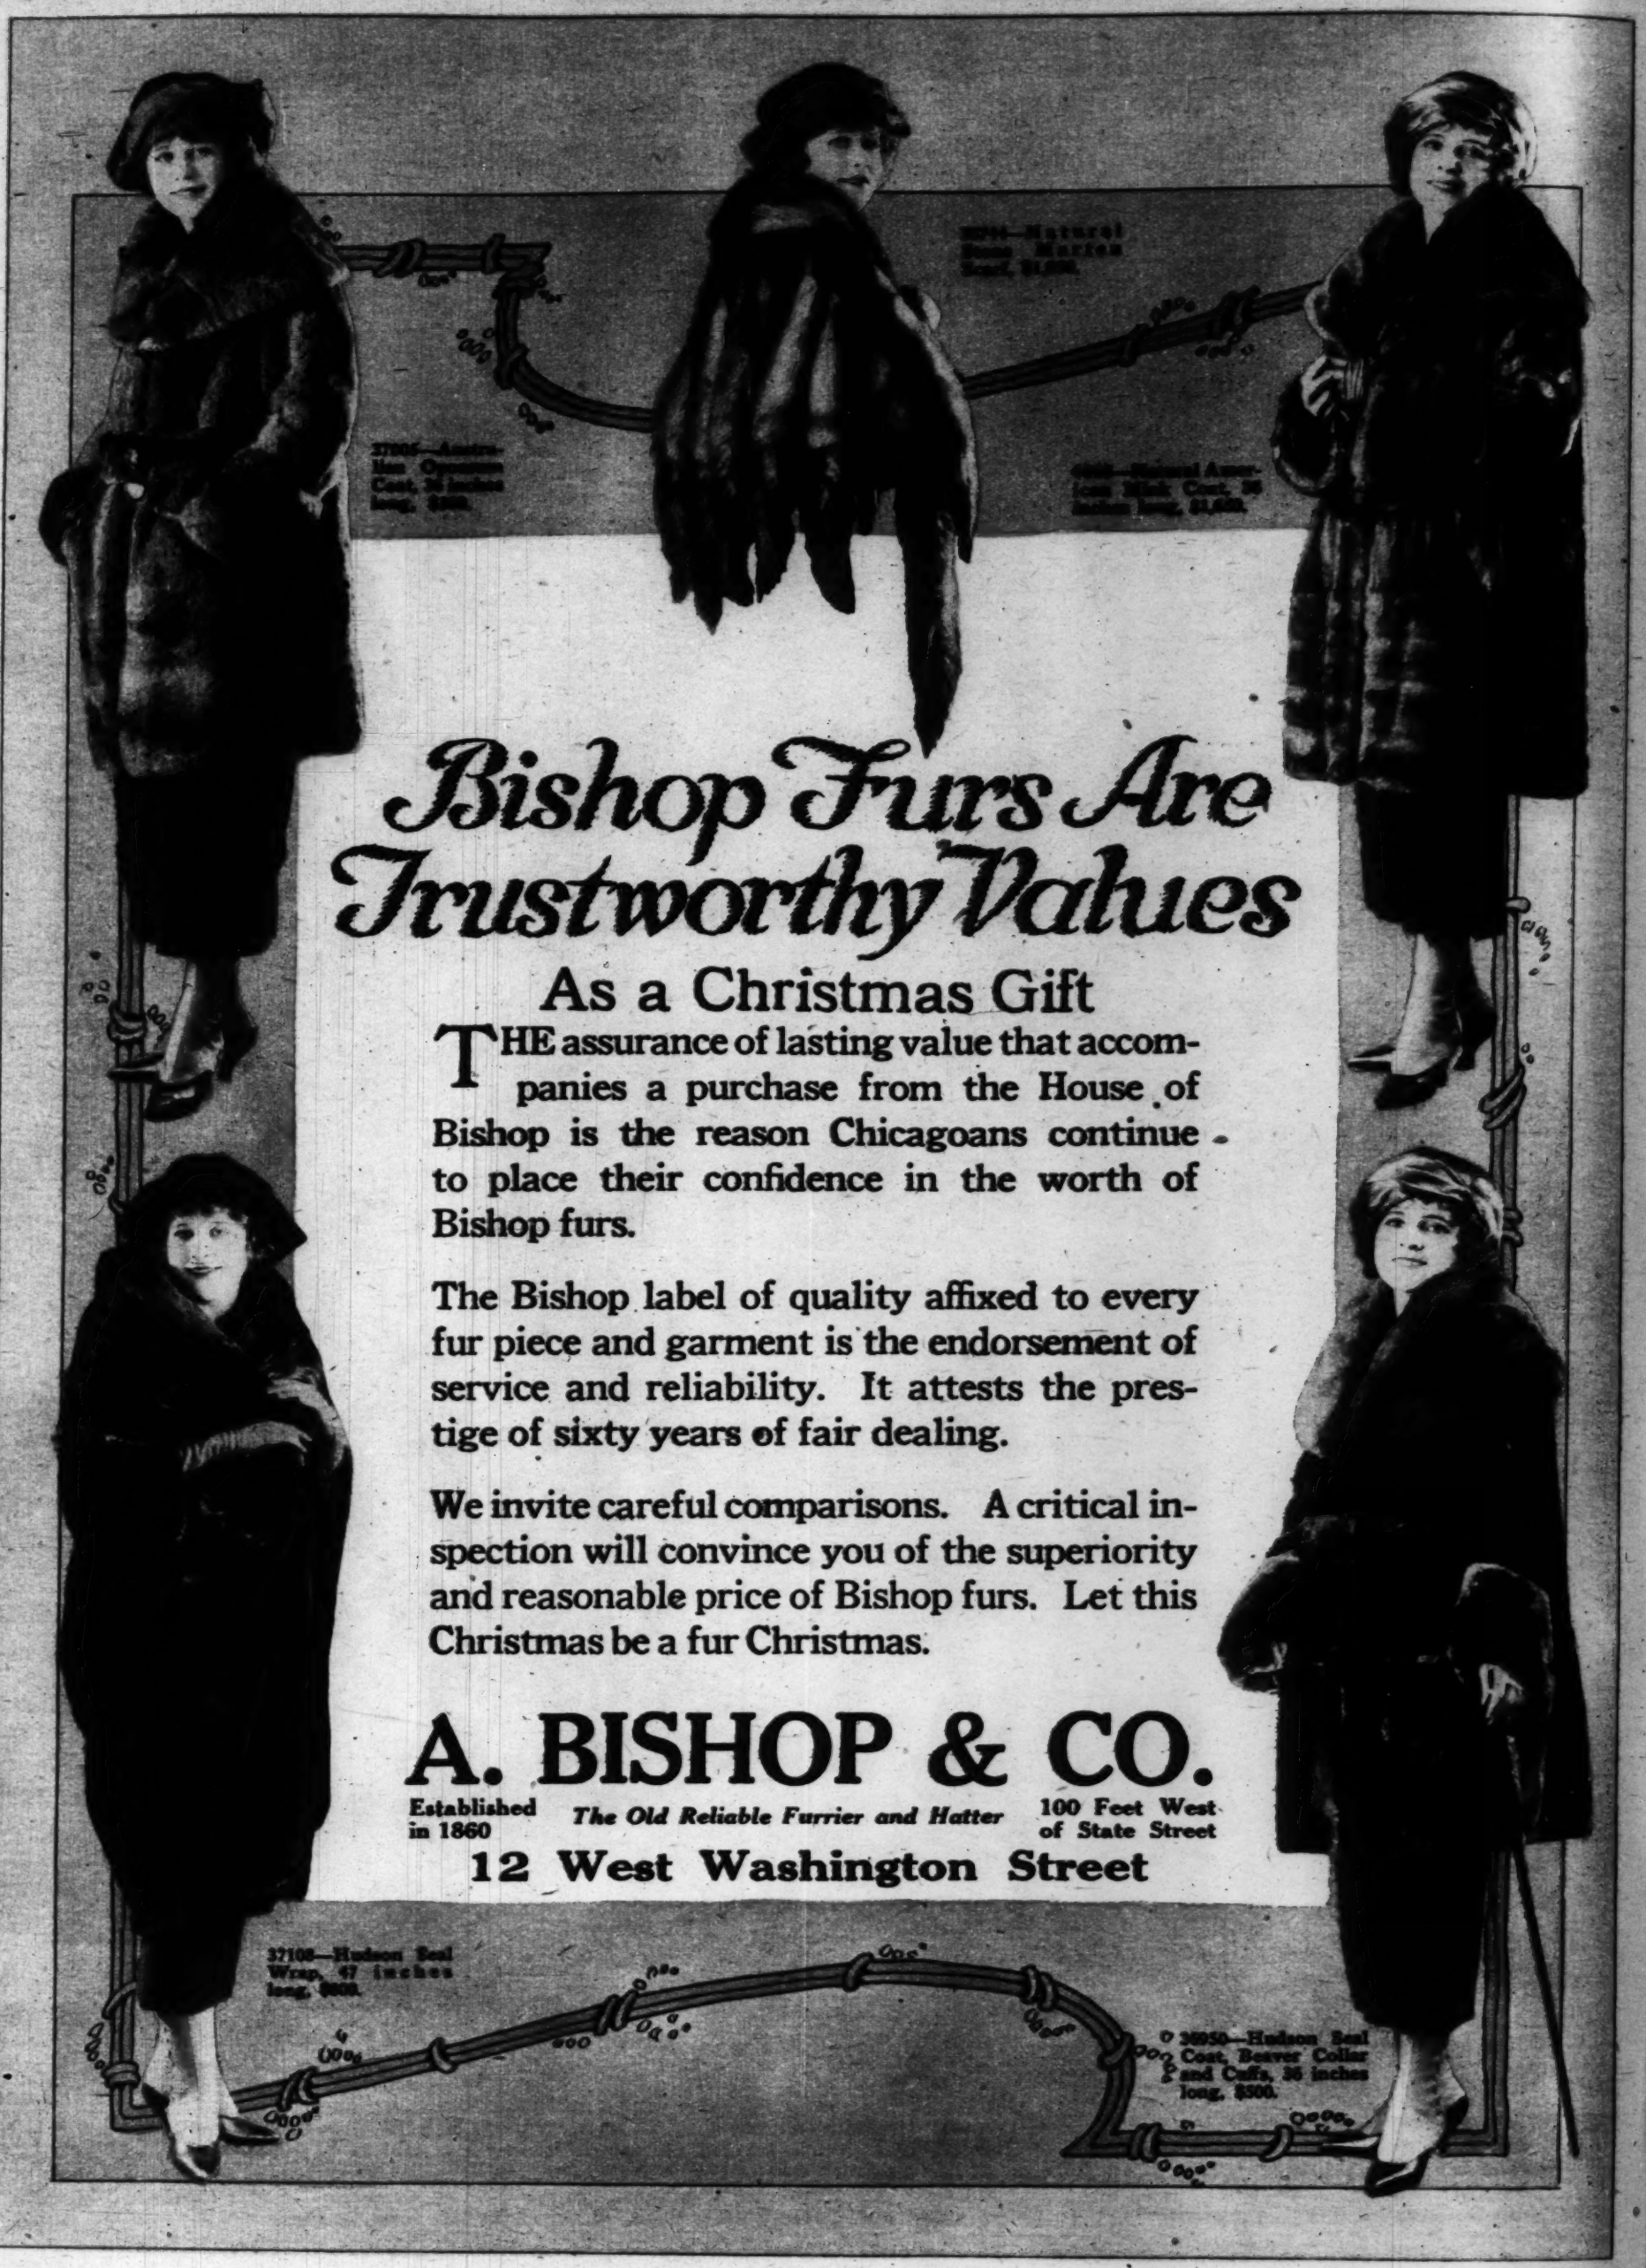
A WONDERFUL HELP TO "TINO"—Princess Anastasia of Greece (at the left), formerly Mrs. William B. Leeds of New York, whose liberal financial support of her brother-in-law, ex-King Constantine, in the recent plebiscite is said to have been a determining factor in bringing about the defeat of the Venezelists. It was, by all accounts, an illuminating experience for the Greeks in the ways and means of winning an election. The photograph shows the American "dollar princess," as she is known in Athens, in her wedding gown, with her husband, Prince Christopher, Constantine's brother, and Queen Mother Olga, widow of the late King George.



Bishop Furs Are Trustworthy Values

As a Christmas Gift

THE assurance of lasting value that accompanies a purchase from the House of Bishop is the reason Chicagoans continue to place their confidence in the worth of Bishop furs.

The Bishop label of quality affixed to every fur piece and garment is the endorsement of service and reliability. It attests the prestige of sixty years of fair dealing.

We invite careful comparisons. A critical inspection will convince you of the superiority and reasonable price of Bishop furs. Let this Christmas be a fur Christmas.

It will not break

Noted sportsman gives 50 friends a new kind of Christmas gift

The new vacuum bottle that will not break

A FAMOUS American polo player bought a new vacuum bottle.

He dropped it accidentally on the hearth. Instinctively he feared that it was broken. But on picking it up he found both the bottle and its contents unharmed.

It was a new Stanley Vacuum Bottle. Made entirely of steel, it had no fragile glass to break. It cannot break.

This sportsman was so much delighted with this proof of the Stanley's durability, that he immediately bought fifty Stanley Bottles to give his friends for Christmas. He knew that the unbreakable bottle would be a surprise and pleasure to every one.

Instantly recognized by the world's most exacting judges

18 Stanley Bottles are now with Edmund Heller, on the Smithsonian Expedition through the heart of Africa.

Shamrock IV, in the races for America's Cup, was equipped with the Stanley.

It was carried by the famous NC-4 on its historic flight across the Atlantic and by all the other overseas airplanes.

The British Imperial Antarctic Expedition, spending five years on the southern ice-cap of the world, is supplied with 12 Stanleys.

They were used by the American athletes at the recent Olympic games.

Today, families in all parts of the country have followed the lead of these men who are the world's most exacting judges of equipment.

An ideal gift for all-year service

Put the Stanley Vacuum Bottle first on your shopping list—it's the gift that will be appreciated the year 'round. For automobiling — for the home — for the office —it keeps liquids piping hot or icy cold for hours at a time.

Naturally the Stanley is more expensive than the ordinary vacuum bottle, but there are no expenses for repairs or replacements. The first cost is the last cost.

Every Stanley Bottle is made entirely of steel and lined with blue Amalite, a pure mineral coating which is fused into the steel—making a surface like porcelain.

Made in one and two-quart sizes. Sold by all the better department, drug, sporting, hardware, jewelry and automobile accessory stores. Prices (East of the Rocky Mountains), black standard finish: quart size, $10.00—2-quart size, $15.00.

Do your Christmas baking easily—with PAT-A-CAKE

YOU can have cakes and cookies ready for the oven in a minute because Pat-a-cake is a complete and perfectly mixed cake batter. All you have to do is mix a package with one cup of water, place in oiled tins and bake.

You can afford to give the children cookies and cakes made of Pat-a-cake because it is so economical and wholesome. Pat-a-cake is an appetizing treat and a real food.

Pat-a-cake is the best of flour, sugar, milk, eggs, baking powder, salt, shortening and flavoring—just the same ingredients you use in mixing cakes the old, tedious way, but Pat-a-cake is already mixed.

One package makes a three-layer cake, or two loaf cakes or eighteen cup cakes. It would cost you a great deal more to buy the ingredients and mix the cake yourself.

You can always make perfect cake with Pat-a-cake because every ingredient is the best, each one is carefully measured and every lot of Pat-a-cake is sampled and tested before it is packed.

Pat-a-cake is prepared and packed entirely by machinery so that no hands but your own touch your Pat-a-cake.

Make the three Christmas goodies illustrated—they are easy to make and they are only three of dozens of different cakes that you can quickly make with Pat-a-cake. Pat-a-cake will cut out most of the trouble of Christmas baking and will save you money into the bargain.

NONE SUCH MINCE MEAT

"—and Mince Pie"

A good luncheon or dinner begins with a lot of things that lead up to a None Such Mince Pie.

Even in the days when housewives went through all the drudgery of preparing mince meat, their mince pies were considered well worth while.

But now we do nine-tenths of the work in our model kitchens, sterilizing the fruits before cooking, and leaving only the finishing touches for you to add.

None Such Mince Meat saves you all the work of cooking the wide variety of choice ingredients that go into None Such, and the ingredients used in None Such Mince Meat are the best obtainable.

Of course, good cooks often try to make something better, but the proof of a splendid dinner still remains a delicious, wholesome pie made of None Such Mince Meat, and baked in your kitchen or by your baker.

The photograph shows students ready to distribute pamphlets telling how good teeth can be saved and their relation to general good health. On this day girl students sold cheap toothbrushes and packages of tooth powder at the main street corners of the city and in the parks.

Beautify Your Hair with "DANDERINE"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

IF YOU care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy, or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

Whiter Teeth

In 10 days, if you'll ask us for this tube

This simple test has shown to millions the way to whiter, safer teeth. It is a free test—you should make it. It may bring life-long effects.

No other method known can do what Pepsodent does for teeth.

To end the film

The object is to fight the film, which dims the teeth and causes most tooth troubles. Dental science has worked years to do that.

Film is that viscous coat you feel. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. The ordinary tooth paste does little to combat it, so the tooth brush leaves much of it intact.

It is the film-coat that discolors, not the teeth. Film is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Thus all these troubles, despite the tooth brush, have been constantly increasing.

Now we combat it

Dental science, after years of research, has found ways to combat film. High authorities have proved their efficiency by clinical and laboratory tests.

The best dental opinion approves these methods. Leading dentists everywhere are urging their adoption. Now millions daily use them, largely by dental advice.

The methods are combined in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. And a 10-Day Tube is being sent, so all who will may quickly know how much it means to them.

The new effects

One ingredient of Pepsodent is pepsin. Another multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva to digest starch deposits which cling and form acid.

It also multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva, to neutralize the acids which cause tooth decay. Two factors directly attack the film. One of them keeps the teeth so highly polished that film cannot easily adhere.

Pepsodent combines the best that modern science has discovered to combat the tooth destroyers. And to millions it is bringing a new era in teeth cleaning.

Watch it act

This is to offer a ten-day tube. Send the coupon for it. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coat disappears.

The new tooth luster will show you its effects. The book we send will tell you what they mean. Then you can judge for yourself.

Men who smoke

Smokers' teeth often show film-stains most. Children's teeth are most affected by the film. Young teeth are most subject to attacks. With older people the chief danger lies in pyorrhea.

So to all this test is most important. For your own sake don't forget it. Cut out the coupon now.

AMERICAN CIVILIZATION in HAITI

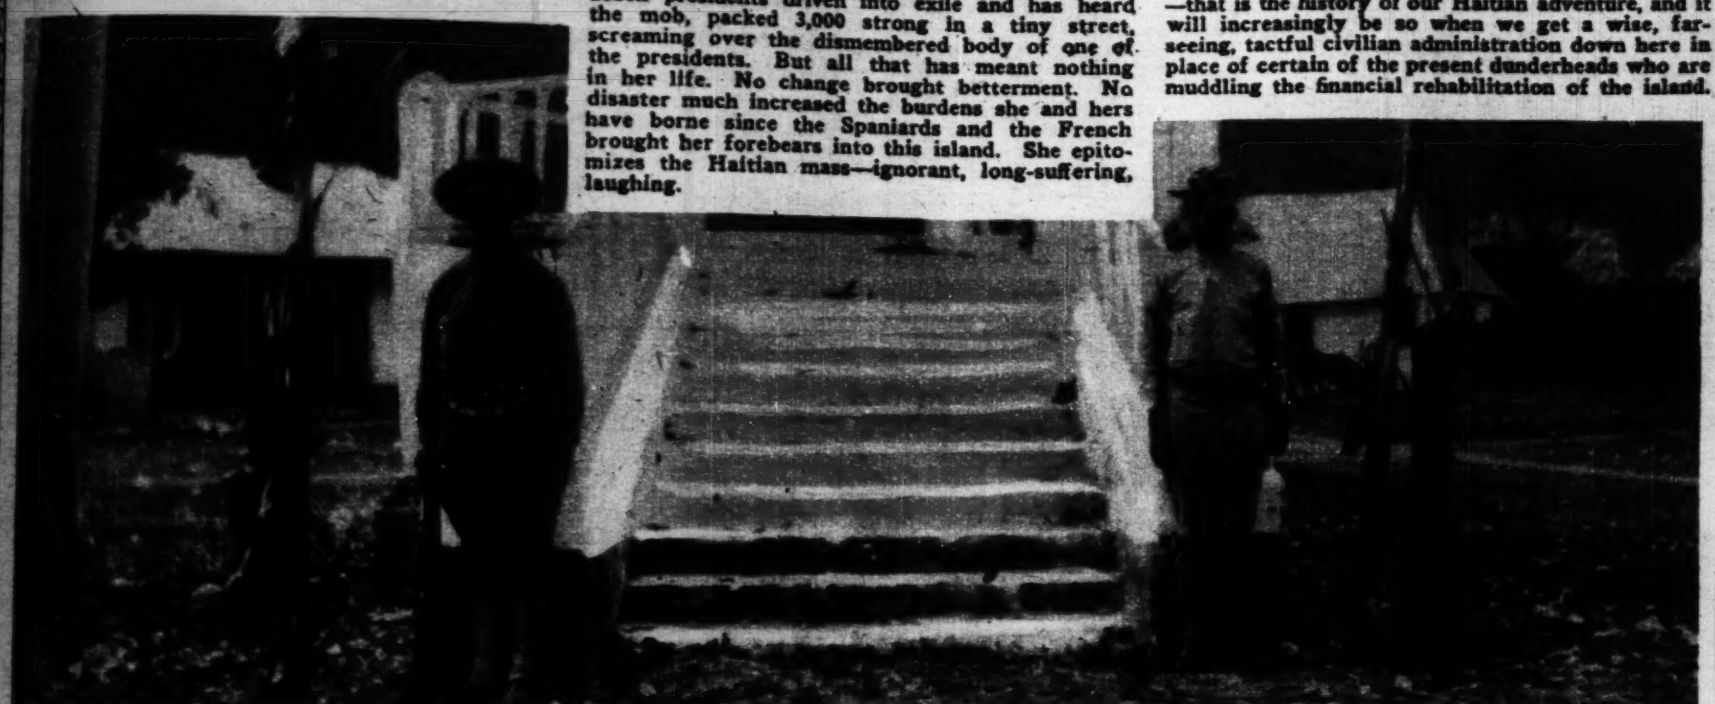
(Photographs from Eye Witness, Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)

A Haitian washerwoman. She is good natured, tireless and unabashed. When she has finished washing her basket of clothes in the stream she will strip and give herself a going over. If the stream is in the country, all right; if it runs through a town—all right, too.

This cheery, chatty soul is anywhere from 75 to 100 years old, depending on what she thinks you wish to hear. Though dazzlingly voluble about her own affairs, she is on all other matters one of Haiti's inarticulate two millions. She has seen a dozen presidents driven into exile and has heard the mob, packed 3,000 strong in a tiny street, screaming over the dismembered body of one of the presidents. But all that has meant nothing in her life. No change brought betterment. No disaster much increased the burdens she and hers have borne since the Spaniards and the French brought her forebears into this island. She epitomizes the Haitian mass—ignorant, long-suffering, laughing.

A typical bit of Haitian back-country scenery where the American agriculturalists who have followed the flag are operating. Here they are building roads to lead up to the plantations at St. Michel. First pacification and then the tractor—that is the history of our Haitian adventure, and it will increasingly be so when we get a wise, far-seeing, tactful civilian administration down here in place of certain of the present dunderheads who are muddling the financial rehabilitation of the island.



Two specimens of our good work in Haiti. The trim-looking black gend armes each side of the bandstand were bandits a few months ago. Gen. Wise and his American fellow-officers in command of the gendarmerie have made neat, alert, self-respecting, and reasonably honest soldiers out of them, and they would follow Wise to the death. The scene here pictured is the Place de Liberte in the interior town of Ennery.

LILLIAN GISH is especially interesting just now because she's heading the new Griffith picture, "Way Down East." This is a mighty pretty photograph of her, don't you think?

Whisper—or say it out loud, the press agent did—John Barrymore went to see the picture twice—or maybe it was three times—and pronounced her a "second Bernhardt."

Guess that's going some!

Mae Tinee.

ANETHA GETWELL sounds like a hospital, but she doesn't look like one, does she?

The young woman, who, by the way, was recently the winner in a "national fame and fortune" contest conducted by a motion picture magazine for ambitious amateurs, is here shown holding "Woody." Not Mr. Wilson, we rush to explain, but the famous feathered war hero of the United States army signal corps. Woody, it may be said, is no more. He died, they tell me, celebrating the armistice.

Miss Getwell, whom we hope will do well, looks a little like Ethel Clayton, doesn't she?

Mae Tinee.

MOLLY MALONE is the pretty youngster you don't see often, but when you do—you wonder what's the matter with the producers, anyhow! Don't they know they're letting some mighty good material go to waste?

Miss Malone was born in Denver, Colo., in 1897, and educated there and in Los Angeles. She has worked for Vitagraph, Lubin, Universal and Goldwyn. Her latest picture was "It's a Great Life." The scenario was written by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

Like the little lady's looks?

Mae Tinee.

ELLIOTT DEXTER isn't vurr' well. So, they tell me, he's going away for a long rest after he makes another picture or two.

We'll miss him, but it will be nice to see him when he comes roly-poly-ing back a la Fatty Arbuckle (Heaven grant not!).

Anyhow, here's his picture. Thought you might like to moon over it a bit.

Cuts, Sores, Boils, Burns

Heal in Quarter Usual Time

New antiseptic marvel discovered in war upsets old healing methods. Free trial proves it. Dozens of other uses.

The same wonderful antiseptic agent which healed war wounds, often in one-fourth the usual time, now serves the same purpose in home or factory. For cuts, sores, and burns, it gives the quickest healing ever known. To see why it conquered infection in the war when all old-standard antiseptics had failed, test it on a boil or carbuncle. Notice how it destroys the pus, ends the soreness, stops the trouble from spreading, and heals with amazing promptness.

Keep Kloria ready to use for injuries. It insures clean, sure, quick healing, and more positively than iodine, peroxide or any old-time antiseptic or ointment.

Kloria doesn't irritate, is soothing, pleasant, and absolutely safe, because not poisonous. Yet by scientific test it is over forty times more germ-destroying than carbolic acid.

Never before was there an antiseptic so healing, so effective in destroying germs, and with so many uses in every home.

It is the one antiseptic which destroys the germ cause of pyorrhea, usually-ending gum soreness and bleeding in one week. For mouth-wash and gargle its superiority quickly proves itself. Notice how quickly it relieves sore throat and canker sores—how clean the mouth feels. Mark how it soothes sore, inflamed or itching skin. Apply it to almost any skin disease, eczema, or barber's itch, and watch the trouble fade away and disappear. For dandruff, simply wet the scalp with it. Scalp itching stops at once, and with just a few applications dandruff ends, yet it is as harmless as water to the hair. Harmless, yet far more effective than poisonous antiseptics for personal hygiene.

Dissolve a few Kloria Tablets in water and instantly you have, at a cost of a few cents, a large bottle of liquid antiseptic which is clean, colorless, stainless, and virtually odorless.

All druggists. 50c. Money refunded if not satisfied.

NO PARTY LINES DRAWN NOWADAYS BETWEEN CHILD AND GROWN-UP

by CORINNE LOWE.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—(Special correspondence.)—Children nowadays should not only be seen—they should be scenic. At lease, that is the opinion of the present day designer, who is busy making little folks trim up a landscape quite as well as any grown-up.

The shops nowadays are filled with lovely frocks for children and, whether one search for them in the humble basement store or in those shy grots of fashion where you are permitted to spend $100 for a little frock for six year old Nancy, one is surprised always by the infinite variety with which children's clothes are now invested. Panels and gay embroideries and smocking, sashes and pockets and contrasts of material—there is such a rich field upon which to draw that the simplest little gingham frock need never be humdrum.

The party frock for the small belle is the one upon which we turned today our talent for research. In looking about we discovered first of all that crepe de chine has taken quite as firm a hold upon four year old Dorothy as it has upon her mother and grandmother. Adorable little frocks of this are found in all light tints, and quite often they are beset with accordion plaiting.

Take, for example, the costume in the foreground of the left hand panel. Doesn't this prove that the wee tot may be not only scenic but crepe de scenic? A true bud is this creature of from 3 to 5, for she emerges shyly from trefoil petals of rose colored crepe de chine, each point of which is picoted. There is a band of lace at the neckline and a little bunch of pink silk rosebuds right below is repeated just above the arm. The whole dress is accordion plaited.

This same model may be carried out in chiffon, which is also popular with the youngest set. Indeed, this theory that your skirt should get a good start in the world is capable of being transposed into a number of party fabrics, all of which gain charm through skipping a bodice.

It used to be that lace went only with middle age and a lorgnette. Now it has unbent and goes quite as nicely with lower age and hoop. At the left of this panel you will find this truth illustrated in a dignified little creation of filet lace and pink taffeta.

The lady in action is wearing another crepe de chine—this one done in baby blue—and to prove that she need take no lessons in sophisticated color combinations she adds to this a narrow girdle of violet ribbon faced with the blue of the gown.

Irish lace is used in bands at the sides of the full skirt and also to outline the round neck and the baby sleeves. This model is for the girl of from 4 to 8.

For the partyist of from 6 to 12 the petal skirt at the right was borrowed from her debutante sister. This occurs in yellow georgette, and each petal is punctiliously picoted. The same points are echoed at the neck line and the sash is of yellow ribbon, also picoted.

Childhood may also be said to have invented ribbons. Now that the grownup taste for this trimming has proved so insatiable, the small girl by no means renounces her claim. Her original patent is, in fact, put to use in any number of ways. Thus, in the right hand panel we find loops of blue velvet ribbon finished out with pink satin rosebuds filling in what vacancies of ornamentation are left by the knife plaited panels of this old blue crepe de chine gown. The age restrictions on this creation are from 8 to 12.

As for the sub-deb, she may certainly be super-ribboned. There are a number of charming little dance frocks for this exuberant young person that copy faithfully Renee's famous dance frock of this season for the graduate young lady. That is to say, the skirt is made entirely of narrow ribbon panels attached at the waistline and frequently turning under at the hem. Often the ribbons of these models are two toned, and, of course, ravishing color effects may be gained from them and from their contrast to the skirt of tulle or lace beneath.

In the center of the foreground of the right panel we find an orchid taffeta for the girl of from 14 to 18 which benefits by a different kind of ribbon cure. Here the ribbon—violet on one side and silver on the other—is garlanded from silver roses. A similar bloom has been cultivated on the point of taffeta extending over the orchid tulle which forms sleeves and the upper part of the corsage.

YES, indeed a skirt should get a good start in life, says this frock at the left for the girl of from 3 to 6, and, so saying, its plaited crepe de chine begins a three flounced "petty" at the neck line. Right back of this a cream filet combined with rose colored taffeta is at the service of the belle from 6 to 12. In the center we find a light blue crepe de chine trimmed with lace taking on a most sophisticated ribbon girdle which is violet on one side and blue on the other. Last, for the girl of from 6 to 14, yellow georgette with a petal skirt, all plaited, just as her older sister wears 'em.

ALL that accordion plaited panels fail to do for this old blue crepe de chine frock is completed by loops of self-color ribbon ending in rosebuds. The sister just a trifle older will look her best at the holiday dance in an orchid taffeta garlanded in violet and silver ribbon fixed by great silver roses. The top of the corsage and the sleeves are orchid tulle. Right next, a turquoise and silver brocade is tasseled in silver and helped out by strings of pearl beads looping the corsage. In the background at the left cream lace over blue satin is distinguished by a satin sash bound at the ends with rosebuds and silver leaves.

Much more formal is the creation right beside it. Indeed, this should not be attempted by the girl under 18. For it is composed of silver and turquoise blue brocade, the tunic of which is punctuated by silver tassels and the corsage of which is looped with strings of pearl beads. The color of this gown is to be recommended particularly to the blonde girl, to whom nothing is ever more becoming than this alliance of turquoise and silver.

The last item of our research work is found in the little lace and satin frock in the background at the left. This frock, designed for the miss of from 12 to 16, drapes cream-color lace over old blue satin, and gains distinction through a blue satin sash bound at the rounded ends by pink and silver roses. And, by the way, the sash for both the deb and sub-deb has been this year the scene for extensive flower culture. Nothing is more charming than these new sashes of ribbon—usually two-toned—which are banded or sometimes appliqued all over with flowers harmonizing in tint with the background.

Clothes that are not intended for party use thrive on the same ideas that nourish adult modes. There, for example, is the passion for applique work that distinguishes our own autumn fashions. For some time this mode of ornamentation has been popular in children's clothes, and this year the popularity has been a craze. Indeed, why not? To applique a design of contrasting color on your child's frock is certainly much less laborious than to embroider the design. And how many, many delightful whimsicalities may be expressed in this way!

As an example of this was the simple little frock for the girl of from 4 to 10, which I saw the other day in a certain widely known shop. This was a chemise model of natural colored pongee, about the hem, neckline, and kimono sleeves of which were appliqued oranges of satin in natural hue accompanied by leaves of black satin.

Natural pongee is, by the way, a favorite with the practical mother of the girl between these two ages, for, warmer than cotton, it is equally durable and easy to launder. Its neutral background invites, too, such colors as jade green, orange, black, and rose.

Many of the pongee dresses are, of course, embroidered—usually in wool. And so, too, are a number of the linen and cotton dresses. The linen dress for the girl of from 4 to 12 is popularly of mauve, yellow, blue, or rose. Any of these is frequently embroidered or appliqued in black.

Either pongee or china silk is used for the shirtwaist, which the girl of this age wears with her plaid wool skirt. These tartan skirts finished off by such a waist and by a black velvet coat make up a dress still in favor after many seasons of experimentation. This year, too, the costume is frequently completed by a coat or cape of plain color, repeating the plaid on collar and cuffs and perhaps pockets and bindings.

The grown-up mode of matching your frock and your wrap has been carried over to childhood's domain in more pretentious wise than this. The other day, for example, what should I see but a Chinese blue duvetyn dress matched by a coat of the same material—both designed for the girl of from 6 to 12! The cost of this costume was, by the way, an exact copy of one from Madeleine et Madeleine. It was distinguished by the same long bloused waistline.

Children's coats are, in fact, perfect mirrors of the grown-up ones. They frequently have the fashionable shoulder cape swinging to the waistline in the back, and one sees them trimmed with the same kinds of fur. Thus, instead of the familiar beaver and squirrel, we often encounter nowadays the various "lambs" that figure so conspicuously in grown-up fashions of the year. Indeed, speaking as a whole, we may say that the motto of today is: Spare the fashion and spoil the child.

SMALL GIRL'S FROCK.

I IMAGINE mothers are always glad to hear of something pretty to make for their small children, and this dress with its fruit pocket is unusually pretty and particularly suitable for a small girl from 2 to 6 or 8 years of age.

Choose a plain material in white or a color if you prefer, and if you have a plain slip pattern you can cut the dress by that. Lay an inverted box plait from the top to the bottom of the front and back, so that the plait comes in the middle of each shoulder.

The box plait on the wrong side should measure two inches across, and on the right side the plaits come exactly together like the picture. Baste them in place from the top to the bottom, and then proceed to finish the seam, hem the bottom, finish the neck, and make and put the sleeves in. The dress you see is so far perfectly plain.

Finish the neck and edges of the sleeves with a narrow facing on the wrong side, then use the blanket stitch in a long and short stitch around these edges, using the color that is to be used to appliqué the fruit in place for the pocket.

You can have three red apples and a couple or three green leaves, and these are cut like the illustration and grouped together to form a pocket and set on the dress on the left side. When it is ready to put on the dress try the dress on the child and pin the pocket on so the hand can get at it easily.

For each apple cut three round pieces of red cambric or gingham, making them different sizes like the picture; then lay one over the other and appliqué the smaller ones to the large one, using the blanket stitch. Then make the leaves of green, cutting them in two sections. After they have been grouped set the pocket on the skirt part of the dress.

If one is ingenious this suggestion will lead to other similar ideas and different grouping of the fruit, or flowers if one prefers, can be used.

These plaits in the dress are stitched together on the wrong side in a seam from the shoulder down to a yoke depth. Of course this is done before the seams are put together on the shoulder. Then the plaits should be basted together the length of the dress and the bastings left in until after the final pressing.

MRS. C. B. T.: I am glad you were interested in the apron designs, and agree with you that they will make pretty gifts. I feel sure if you will read the story over carefully you will be able, with the aid of the picture, to cut your own pattern. And maybe these ideas will suggest others to you, for any grouping of the fruit or flowers will be pretty. Then, too, I think you can buy patterns for cross-stitch embroidery of baskets, etc.

The Full Rounded Tones of the Tuba

Can Result Only From a Long Horn

Next time you hear a band play, listen for the deep, full tones of the low-pitched tuba. You can distinguish the tuba above the other instruments for the long horn greatly amplifies the tones. Yet they are soft, mellow and pleasing. The long horn of the Puritan phonograph has the very same effect. It amplifies and purifies the tone. No scratchy sounds or tinny vibration mar the beauty of the music. You enjoy it as you would the original production.

Every Part Made by Puritan

Every part of the Puritan is built in the Puritan factories. Each tone unit has exclusive features. Puritan Records, too, are recorded and made by special processes. Hear them played on the Puritan. Hear other makes of records, also, and see what a great difference results from the long Puritan Horn.

Dealers: The Puritan Proposition is unusually attractive. Write for it.

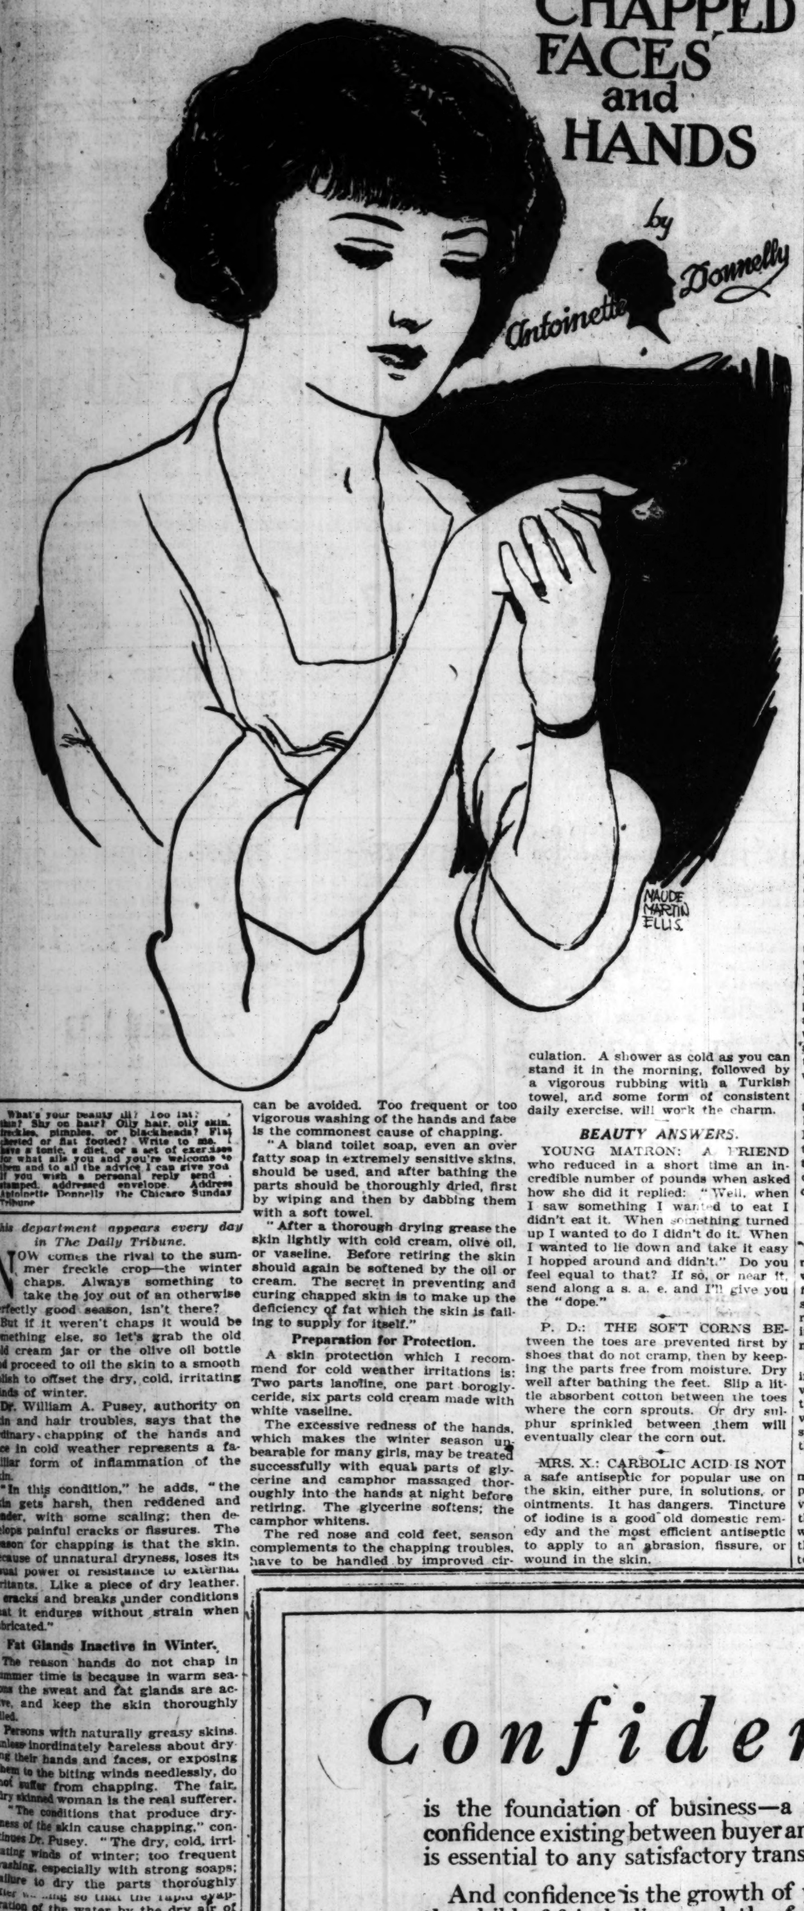
CHAPPED FACES and HANDS

by Antoinette Donnelly



What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you if you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly the Chicago Sunday Tribune

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NOW comes the rival to the summer freckle crop—the winter chaps. Always something to take the joy out of an otherwise perfectly good season, isn't there?

But if it weren't chaps it would be something else, so let's grab the old cold cream jar or the olive oil bottle and proceed to oil the skin to a smooth polish to offset the dry, cold, irritating winds of winter.

Dr. William A. Pusey, authority on skin and hair troubles, says that the ordinary chapping of the hands and face in cold weather represents a familiar form of inflammation of the skin.

"In this condition," he adds, "the skin gets harsh, then reddened and tender, with some scaling; then develops painful cracks or fissures. The reason for chapping is that the skin, because of unnatural dryness, loses its usual power of resistance to external irritants. Like a piece of dry leather, it cracks and breaks under conditions that it endures without strain when lubricated."

Fat Glands Inactive in Winter.

The reason hands do not chap in summer time is because in warm seasons the sweat and fat glands are active, and keep the skin thoroughly oiled.

Persons with naturally greasy skins, unless inordinately careless about drying their hands and faces, or exposing them to the biting winds needlessly, do not suffer from chapping. The fair, dry skinned woman is the real sufferer.

"The conditions that produce dryness of the skin cause chapping," continues Dr. Pusey. "The dry, cold, irritating winds of winter; too frequent washing, especially with strong soaps; failure to dry the parts thoroughly after washing so that the rapid evaporation of the water by the dry air of winter causes sudden dryness of the skin.

Lubricate the Skin.

"The prevention and relief consist in attention to the details necessary to avoid or overcome these exciting causes. The dry air and winds of winter, of course, cannot be escaped by ordinary mortals, but the deficiency in the lubrication of the skin can easily be remedied and the excessive dryness that comes from too frequent washing can be avoided. Too frequent or too vigorous washing of the hands and face is the commonest cause of chapping.

"A bland toilet soap, even an over fatty soap in extremely sensitive skins, should be used, and after bathing the parts should be thoroughly dried, first by wiping and then by dabbing them with a soft towel.

"After a thorough drying grease the skin lightly with cold cream, olive oil, or vaseline. Before retiring the skin should again be softened by the oil or cream. The secret in preventing and curing chapped skin is to make up the deficiency of fat which the skin is failing to supply for itself."

Preparation for Protection.

A skin protection which I recommend for cold weather irritations is: Two parts lanoline, one part boroglyceride, six parts cold cream made with white vaseline.

The excessive redness of the hands, which makes the winter season unbearable for many girls, may be treated successfully with equal parts of glycerine and camphor massaged thoroughly into the hands at night before retiring. The glycerine softens; the camphor whitens.

The red nose and cold feet, season complements to the chapping troubles, have to be handled by improved circulation. A shower as cold as you can stand it in the morning, followed by a vigorous rubbing with a Turkish towel, and some form of consistent daily exercise, will work the charm.

BEAUTY ANSWERS.

YOUNG MATRON: A FRIEND who reduced in a short time an incredible number of pounds when asked how she did it replied: "Well, when I saw something I wanted to eat I didn't eat it. When something turned up I wanted to do I didn't do it. When I wanted to lie down and take it easy I hopped around and didn't." Do you feel equal to that? If so, or near it, send along a s. a. e. and I'll give you the "dope."

P. D.: THE SOFT CORNS BETween the toes are prevented first by shoes that do not cramp, then by keeping the parts free from moisture. Dry well after bathing the feet. Slip a little absorbent cotton between the toes where the corn sprouts. Or dry sulphur sprinkled between them will eventually clear the corn out.

MRS. X.: CARBOLIC ACID IS NOT a safe antiseptic for popular use on the skin, either pure, in solutions, or ointments. It has dangers. Tincture of iodine is a good old domestic remedy and the most efficient antiseptic to apply to an abrasion, fissure, or wound in the skin.

Is Present Day Dress Immodest?

What do you think about the present day dress? Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, says it is indecent. Do you think so or not? Do you approve of the modern maid's rouged cheeks and abbreviated skirts, or no? Do you think her morals different than those of the maid of a decade or so ago as the result of her dress vagaries? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on this much discussed topic. Send along your opinion. Write on one side of page only. Address Miss Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

Sauce for the Goose.

Adam blamed Eve for his fall in the garden of Eden, and from that time right down to the present day men try to hide their weakness behind a woman's skirt, or, rather, lack of it.

Why shouldn't a woman use rouge to put a little color in her cheeks? A man doesn't hesitate to shave every day so he will look presentable, and it's exactly the same principle. As for short skirts, Cleopatra ruined more men than even Theda Bara has screen victims, and she didn't wear short skirts to do it, either!

I saw a news reel some time ago showing a walking contest in Los Angeles, and every man in the contest had shoes and trunks on, and that was the extent of their costumes. Can't you imagine what would happen if woman staged a similar contest? They wouldn't get a good start till the whole city would be on their heels. At the same performance it showed beach policemen arresting women because they refused to wear stockings with their bathing suits, and the guards themselves didn't have enough on to cover a canary.

"What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander," and I certainly think that should be reversed and applied when it comes to men attempting to regulate women's clothes. There are women who go to extremes, but they are the exception, rather than the rule, and I think the man who said, "Man is his own worst enemy," knew whereof he spoke. J. M.

Short Skirts Pretty.

For my part, I do not think girls' dresses are indecent. The short skirts are much prettier than long ones; of course, married women should not go to extremes. The trouble is, married women want to look like the girls.

Of course, the girls want to attract the attention of the men. It has always been that way. And the prettier they look the more attention they get. It doesn't cost so much more to look pretty; a little powder and rouge help a great deal. Too much is vulgar, which we all know. There are always a few who will carry things to extremes, but why condemn the good with the bad?

Most men like the short dresses. I think every girl ought to try to look her best, and married women, too. Men like to see pretty women. If their wives aren't pretty, they begin to admire other women. Yes, women dress to attract men and to outdo other women. E. K.

From One Who Knows.

I am just a country dressmaker, but my work puts me in a position to know women's ideas about clothes. In the first place, clothes were never more sensible and comfortable than they are right now. Women choose their clothes in order to look their best, not to lure men.

A woman has a perfect right to rouge if she does not do it in public. If women didn't do their best to improve their appearance in every way, men would promptly be heard from. Besides, why don't men criticize some of the absurd styles of their sex?

As to the moral side of the question, men are always the ones to raise this point. Their moral backbone is proverbially weak, and, like Adam of old, they blame the woman. No matter what we wear or what we don't wear, they howl. So just pay no attention to them. W. M.

Confidence

is the foundation of business—a mutual confidence existing between buyer and seller is essential to any satisfactory transaction.

And confidence is the growth of years—the child of fair dealing and the father of success.

It is because we realize so well these facts that we have, throughout the years, so jealously guarded the unvarying quality of Larabee's Best Flour and have maintained the Larabee standard of business ethics.

Our reward is that today, throughout the world, there is confidence in the name of "Larabee" which makes our business relationships a source of constant pleasure.

And housewives have likewise learned to recognize in the label of Larabee's Best Flour the guarantee of a superior, always dependable sack of flour.

GIFTS for "HIM" and "HER"

by DORIS BLAKE

FOR the last couple of weeks my mail has been deluged with queries as to what to give "him" and what to give "her" for Christmas.

"I have been going with him steady for three months, and as he has taken me out several times I would like to make him a nice Christmas gift," write at least fifty Perplexeds.

"I met a boy at a dance recently, and I liked him and we danced together, and he said he hoped he would see me soon again. Last night he called up and asked me to go to a party with him after Christmas. Do you think I ought to send him some gift for Christmas?" write Curly Locks, Blue Eyes, and Brown Eyes.

"Do you think my picture would make a nice gift?" query quite a number of girls.

And then the boys write: "What shall I give my girl for Christmas? Haven't much money, but I guess she will expect something nice."

Or, as Bill put it: "I am crazy about a girl just 17. She seems to prefer boys with cars who can take her to expensive shows. But I want to send her something swell for Christmas, so as not to appear like a piker!"

And so on! And so on!

To these queries I have replied, urging in most cases that the giving be reduced to a gift message on a card of greeting, hoping to inaugurate a movement toward discouraging promiscuous gifts from "her" to "him," and return.

I am not referring to the engaged and the married hims and hers, but to the young folk who take Christmas for a liberty to embarrass with gifts.

To illustrate: Visiting at a home which boasted a nice big 6 foot boy of 19, with Christmas morn there arrived five different boxes for the young gentleman, with the cards of five different young ladies enclosed along with the ties, books, cuff links, a bill fold, and a photograph.

A most gentlemanly youth he was, and had it not been for the butt of the family jokes the gifts made him he might have burst into a rage when he opened the box with the photograph in its elegant frame — and what he called her and the rest of the donors would be no sweet music for their foolish ears.

Quieted down, he said: "Honestly, it makes a man feel such a fool. I never sent them anything, and I wish they had not done it to me. They've just spoiled the day for me."

And I know of numerous other cases where this reckless gift giving of girls has lost the young man of their dreams to them.

A decent, self respecting nice young chap does not want to be obligated to any girl for a gift. If he chooses to send her something out of compliment to her entertainment of him in her home that is his privilege, but his pleasure in doing it is completely jarred by a gift from the girl.

So, girls, especially you young girls, don't spend the money on a gift for these more or less casual friends. Send them a card, if you wish—but if there is gift making let the man do it, there is gift making.

And just a word of caution to the young man who rushes in where angels fear to tread, and lays at the feet of a girl who has given him no signs of encouragement a gift which she would rather he had not burdened or embarrassed her with.

Think it over seriously—and then if in the shadow of a doubt, don't send anything.

But, if there is a girl or boy friend whom you have known for years, a sort of a family friend, you may give him something inexpensive, and you may accept an inexpensive thing from him.

Jewelry should not be presented. That is for the engaged and the wedded folk.

The young suitor aiming to please has a fine choice of flower baskets and candy boxes from which to choose. These messages of love are designed now for use about milady's boudoir long after the flowers and candy have disappeared. And what young maid does not thrill to these gifts? Whether she was the girl whom you met at a recent party or one you have known some time, either of these gifts is sure to evoke a tender expression.

The following lists I present, urging, however, that the few words of advice I have given above be applied in the reading:

Brushing your teeth will not save them

—if you neglect your gums

Although the daily tooth-brushing is nowadays a universal habit, men and women of middle age in ever-increasing numbers develop pyorrhea. And no matter how white and clean your teeth may be, you may lose them if pyorrhea develops through gum neglect.

Soft, sore, bleeding or receding gums are the early symptoms of pyorrhea. Its cause is irritation and infection of the gum tissue. This infection — if neglected — spreads to the bony root sockets which hold the teeth in place. Then the teeth loosen, fall out or must be extracted.

Keeping your gums healthy is the only way to prevent or check pyorrhea. Pyorrhocide Powder does keep the gums healthy; and aids in restoring them to health if pyorrhea has developed.

Pyorrhocide Powder is medicated with Dentinol, a germicidal and healing agent used by the leaders of the dental profession in the treatment of pyorrhea at the dentist's chair. It is the only dentifrice whose value in treating and preventing pyorrhea has been proved in clinics devoted exclusively to this phase of oral prophylaxis.

Used daily, Pyorrhocide Powder tones up the gums and also cleans and polishes the teeth. It removes the mucoid films which harden and form tartar, thus doing away with the chief cause of pyorrhea.

The economical dollar package contains six months' supply. At all druggists and dental supply houses.

Free trial package to prove what real gum health means

Send coupon for free sample of Pyorrhocide Powder. Note how it leaves a refreshed, cleanly feeling of the teeth and gums long after brushing. To you who have used other dentifrices, it will prove a revelation. We will also send our educational booklet on the Prevention and Treatment of Pyorrhea.

SALES FOR MONDAY—BOTH STORES

REAL LOVE STORIES

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

GRANDMA ON THE JOB.

HER name was Mrs. Knott, and she looked it. A broomstick of a woman, 60 years old, with knobby joints and shiny false teeth, she might have stepped straight out of a comic valentine. Though something of a "character," she yet possessed in supreme degree the quality of faithfulness. For years she was my cleaning woman and general filler-in, and whatever other helpers might come and go, Mrs. Knott stayed by.

"Don't talk to me about your vacations," she remarked once. "What with being an orphan and marrying a no-good and raising a family, I ain't never had one. I'd surprise myself some day by going off a-visiting if 'twan't for my daughter Emma and her three hungry young ones. But as it is, looks like it's grandma on the job."

Descending one morning to the kitchen, I found Mrs. Knott enjoying a social cup of coffee with an unknown elderly man. Mrs. Knott seemed to think the situation required explanations.

"That's the man that wants to marry my Emma," she volunteered later. "She's turned him down, and he thinks maybe I could sort of coax her into it."

Evidently the widowed Emma continued to preve coy, for at intervals all through the winter the same man was discovered deep in conversation with Mrs. Knot. One day she beckoned me mysteriously into the kitchen.

"Want to see what I got with your Christmas money?" she invited.

The parcel she opened disclosed a small but unmistakably bridal collection from the "white sales." It foamed with lace and flaunted with baby blue and rose pink ribbons.

"It's for Emma's trousseau," exulted Mrs. Knott, holding up a longish garment, above which her beaming face appeared with indescribably grotesque effect.

"So she has consented at last?" I queried.

"Well, not exactly, but she will. She ain't such a fool as not to. A steady man like him, with a good farm and a seven room house. And he's going to buy her a lavalleer and a washing machine for a wedding present."

As time went on I judged that Emma had been brought to see the light of reason, for one by one other articles were added to the trousseau—a pink corset, some silk stockings, a gay camisole.

One day late in the spring I was thunderstruck to hear Mrs. Knott, the faithful, deliver herself thus: "Well, ma'am, I guess I won't be working for you any more after next week."

"Why, Mrs. Knott, do you mean that you are going to live with Emma and her farmer?"

"Naw," was the disgusted reply, "Emma ain't got no farmer. Seems she had another fella up her sleeve all the time, but wan't sure of him. But say," she went on enthusiastically, "I tell you it was lucky I got that trousseau, just the same. There's going to be two June brides in the family."

"What can you mean?" I breathed.

"Why, it's going to be a double weddin'. Emma's goin' to marry her fella, and the farmer"—Mrs. Knott almost managed a blush—"the farmer's a-goin' to marry me."

My Funniest Childhood Adventure

What was the most amusing thing you did as a youngster? You must have been up to some tricks. We'd like to hear about it. Address Funniest Childhood Adventures, Chicago Tribune. Don't get this contest mixed with Bright Sayings. It's deeds we want to hear about. The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published.

Holding Down Swelling.

My younger sister and I used to enjoy watching the clouds bank up into grotesque figures. One summer day when mother was away, the clouds were particularly beautiful, and I wanted sister to get a better view of them. I stood her up on the banister of our front porch and held her around the legs. But she was so heavy that she lost her balance, and over she went, with a bruised head and a badly swollen cheek as a result of her fall. I did not want mother to know of our accident, so I hurried sister into the house, then on to a couch, and was holding a six pound flat iron on her cheek to keep the swelling down, as I thought, when mother suddenly appeared on the scene. She did not approve of my first aid methods, but her keen sense of humor saved the day.

Teacher's Pet Rebels.

I was always a dear, good boy. In school I was considered a model and was teacher's pet, until one day in the midst of my lessons the miserable reality of the fact dawned upon me and I decided to be like the other boys. Turning around to my neighbor I was talking and laughing out loud when teacher caught me and sent me into the dressing room—a most disgraceful punishment. There I realized that I was really bad, and I decided that I could never be good again. Looking around for the next best thing to do, I found that teacher's mysterious dressing closet was unlocked. There I found her street clothes, and put them on as best I could. I dashed wildly through the room waving her hat gallantly while the children in a frenzy of surprise shrieked, hooted and yelled as teacher chased the model boy.

My Most Embarrassing Moment

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moments, Chicago Sunday Tribune. Please write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Out and Under.

That year I was wearing a close fitting hat trimmed with a tall feather which rose straight up the front and curled over at the end into a hook.

I had never found it necessary to use a hat pin in it as it fitted so snugly. I am tall, and one night as my husband and I were emerging from a street car, the top of the feather became hooked over the bell rope, and I stepped out and down from under the hat, leaving it suspended near the ceiling. There was a laugh, of course, in which I was forced to join in spite of my discomfiture.

M. B.

Not for Him.

During my vacation in a small country town I often saw a girl who interested me greatly. She, however, was engaged, and as I never had been introduced I kept my interest secret. Upon leaving the town many friends came to bid me good-by at the station. As I was shaking hands with them from the window just before the train pulled out I discovered the girl standing in the group, stretching her hand toward the train. I hastily grasped it, but suddenly discovered her fiancé in the window next to mine.

B. L.

Three Fatal Words.

A girl who had been a neighbor for years and in whom I had been much interested at one time called on us recently. I was reading and thought of a paragraph in the book I knew she would like to read. I pointed to the place where I thought the paragraph was. Instead, however, I had my finger pointing to these fateful words, "I love you." She thought I was taking a novel way of acquainting her with the state of my feelings. It was terribly embarrassing getting the situation straightened out.

F. M.

Passing the Test.

It was a week before graduation and we all had to pass a medical examination before going out to work. My turn came to have my eyes tested, and as I could not see the last line of writing from where I was sitting I jumped up from my chair and said: "Wait a minute till I get a little closer."

H. L.

Thinking of Mother.

A friend of my husband called to see him one day, but he was out. This man happened to have a bag of candy which he was bringing home to his children. He offered some to my small daughter. She took a piece, and without thanking him bashfully returned to my side.

"Well, Edna, what do you say?" I prompted.

"Give mamma some, too," she said.

LOVE LETTERS

Have you a love letter contest appeal to you? Don't you love to read them? Don't you love to receive them? Can you write a good one yourself? The Tribune is going to pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possession you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Doris Blake, Chicago Tribune. As no letters will be returned send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

ALWAYS PULLED TOGETHER.

MY darling wife: Will mail this so you get it on Wednesday—our Wednesday — yours and mine. I wish I could be with you. Never mind, perhaps sometime every day will be Wednesday for us.

I am sending a million dollars' worth of love with $25 to apply. Use it toward that new spring suit we talked about. Dark blue, wasn't it? Please don't cash it to pay the grocery bill or the coal man. Get the suit, dear.

It hardly seems true that we have been married twenty-five years. Hard pulling, some times, but some way we've always pulled together, haven't we?

Good night, my dear. I love you more today than I did on that first anniversary. Remember what happy, crazy kids we were?

And I know I'm blessed in knowing that you love your old John just as much.

Goodnight, sweetheart. JOHN.

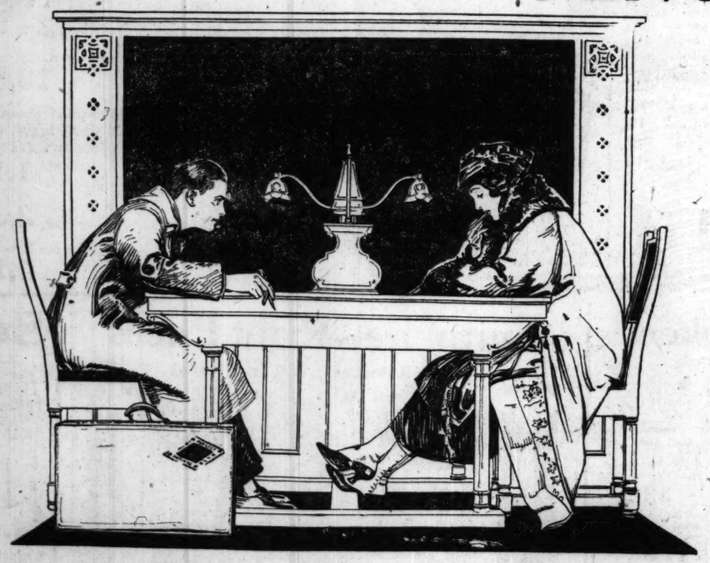
SHEAFFER'S

PEN PENCIL



His Diary:

Dec. 19.—Homeward bound for the holidays with my gift shopping done already. Knowing what to get has been a cinch this Christmas, for if I've learned only one thing since school began it's the fact that everybody needs a SHEAFFER Fountain Pen. This good little pal never fails me—not even when a mighty attractive neighbor dislocates a fellow's line of thought.

Her Diary:

Dec. 19.—Here I am, starting home at last; it seems too good to be true. I hope they'll like the SHEAFFER Pencils I've bought them for Christmas—mine is perfectly lovely and I never could get along at school without it. I'm sure they will—even the good looking man on the other side of the desk seems to admire it.

"This Great Book in Such Compact Form Is Simply Superb!"

INDIA PAPER MAKES THE

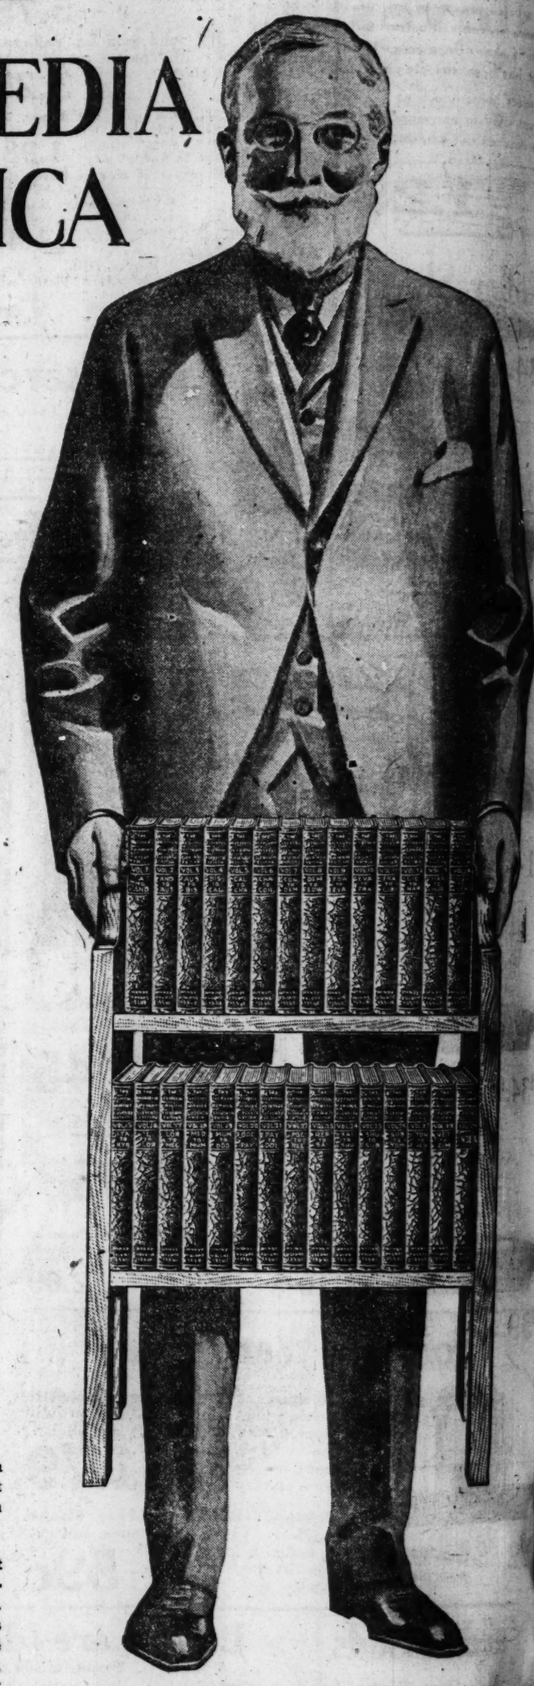
so light in weight that you can easily lift it and move it about—and yet there are 44,000,000 words, 30,000 pages, 15,000 illustrations and maps in it.



ANYTHING that we might say as to the advantages of the Britannica printed on India paper could not be put stronger and more convincingly than in this paragraph

By a Big City Merchant

"I bought the Britannica to use. I expect to get out of it in dollars many more times than I paid for it. I know what a wonderful book it is for anyone who uses it. India paper makes it so light, so convenient, so inviting, that one can't fail to read it frequently. You say the Britannica printed on India paper is 'five times more valuable' than on ordinary book paper. I should say 'a hundred times more valuable.' This is based on my own experience.

"I owned a set of the old Britannica on heavy paper, but I didn't read in it four times a year. It was too heavy; I never had much inclination to look up anything in those big, bulky books.

"I've had the new Britannica, printed on the delightful India paper, less than six months. I use it CONSTANTLY, looking up whatever I want to know, sometimes reading as many as four and five articles a night."

This experience is repeated over and over in the case of owners of the Britannica, for of the 225,000 sets already sold more than 200,000 were India paper sets. The use of this wonderful linenlike paper for printing the world's most interesting and most comprehensive book of knowledge was inspired by the thought that it would increase the handiness of the Britannica—hence, increase its real value to those who possess it.

You, no doubt, know what a remarkable work the Britannica is—an inexhaustible fund of facts and information. Its highest practical value to you or anyone else depends, of course, upon its actual, frequent use.

YOU WANT THIS MARVELOUS WORK—the most complete and authoritative that ever came from the printing press, and you ought to have it on genuine India paper. 200,000 people have purchased sets printed on this delightful, thin but opaque India paper, which has made the Encyclopaedia Britannica infinitely more usable, because the exquisite volumes are no larger or heavier than your magazine. India paper has literally been the means of converting the great wealth of information in the Britannica into a usable, get-at-able form. The sets of the popular Handy Volume issue are offered at unusually low and attractive prices and on very easy terms of payment. We believe the prices of the Britannica are within the reach of everybody.

What the Britannica Will Do for You

Think of the Britannica as an investment, and consider whether you know any other way of investing the same amount of money, or ten times the amount, that will yield such large returns in profit and pleasure.

The Britannica will stimulate you to improve your education, whether or not you've had a college education. It will furnish you with a teacher of any subject you wish to study.

It will give you the answer to the thousand and one questions prompted by the morning paper, lectures, sermons and books. It will make everything you see, read and hear more interesting.

It will enable you to lay out a plan of education for your children and keep abreast with their studies.

HOME NEEDS MAKE THE MOST ACCEPTABLE CHRISTMAS GIFTS
THEY WILL BE ENJOYED BY EVERY MEMBER OF THE FAMILY FOR MANY YEARS

TREMENDOUS REDUCTIONS

The articles presented in this advertisement serve as examples of the many others that lack of space prevents illustrating. Living-room, bedroom and dining-room, hall and kitchen furniture is shown in a comprehensive assortment of designs, woods and finishes—every piece of which has been sharply reduced in our effort to prompt quick sales before our inventory.

To select home-needs now, either as gifts or for your use, is to save quite a substantial amount. Go to our store nearest your home, inspect our display and note how sharply we have reduced our prices.

OPEN AN EXTENDED ACCOUNT

Our account system is different; it does not limit the duration to 30, 60 or 90 days. Rather you can arrange to pay for your purchase by monthly remittances extending your account over any satisfactory period. By so doing you are not deprived of your surplus money—you get the full benefit of our sale prices. You will not be charged interest.

SELECT PRACTICAL GIFTS

Home-needs are the best of all gifts—not only because of their years of service, but because of their effect and influence in the home. Sentiment is attached to a good piece of furniture after a few years of service, and this sentiment deepens as year to year you appreciate its beauty or the comfort it has given.

Our displays are complete, from mahogany candlesticks to porcelain top kitchen tables, and in so large a variety you can surely select some practical home-need as a gift. Go to our store nearest your home.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Cloth of Silver Coat in the Manner of Vestments of Egyptian Priests. | Gray Velvet and Gray Fur. Muff and Hat of Astrakhan. | Princess Dress of Tan Wool and Brown Fur, Embroidered in Gray Wool. | Evening Gown of White Satin Embroidered in Silver and Jet Sequins.

AN EGYPTIAN NOTE.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—The first model is the only thing I have seen so far come out of Paris that looked as if I could make it myself. I thought it was cubist in inspiration, but the artist says it is derived from the robes of the Egyptian priests.

Anyway, it appeared at the Swedish ballet, and the mere fact that there is such an institution as a ballet of Swedes takes my mind off all else. Can you think in terms of a Swedish ballet, and in Paris?

When the ballet comes out, you just naturally expect it to rise on tiptoe and descend calisthenically in a squatting position. Instad of that, it performs a dance with a lithe, fairhaired unity as of one person, and it is the social rage of the city whose judgment is important.

But ballets and ballet costumes are not the concern of this column. It is the other side of the footlights that interests us.

The coat in question is of cloth of silver, embroidered on either shoulder in two huge motifs of vermilion, turquoise, and magenta. Herein is contained a news item for spring. I think those huge round decorations of one sort and another, preferably embroidered, are going to constitute a popular decoration, and, of course, one of them to a garment will be about the average. Where they appear all other trimming is dispensed with or made strictly subordinate to them.

This coat has a little garnishment of fur, round collar and armholes. The coiffeur accompanying this coat at the ballet consisted of a band of silver wound round the back hair of the wearer. Silver shoes appeared with the costume under a black chiffon gown descending toward the ankle in points and of dancing length.

Paris is getting sloppy. The greatest of Indian summers now belongs to history, and people are beginning to talk about the Riviera. The second offering has been designed for daytime wear in the south of France. It would look no less chic in Palm Beach, and later, in the month of May, along the lake shore of Chicago.

It is of soft, gray chiffon velvet made with a coat which flares and has no collar. The coat is nipped in on the sides at the waist line after the silhouette of the day, and is edged with a deep border of gray fur.

I think the French have all other nationalities distanced for the art of putting fur where it is of no practical value. You will observe that this band round the hips is the only touch of it on the costume. But whoever got cold round the hips? The French, as you know, wear fur all summer, and as the season advances they elevate it to a position round their necks when the season gets really warm.

Edging this fur run a series of horizontal tucks, which are effective. They run vertically from waist to knees on either side the straight skirt. The accompanying blouse is of darker gray and has a band in zigzag pattern embroidered from throat to waist line in front. A hat and a muff of astrakhan complete this rather Balkan looking costume.

From the third model you would say that the princess dress was "in" again. I fancy that it as nearly suggests the hour glass figures as we shall ever again in the history of fashions approach. The very lines of our physiques have changed no less than our taste.

This dress is in the beltless line of the day of tan colored cloth, embellished in brown fur and embroidered in gray wool along the lower length of the tight sleeves, as well as in a pattern across the front of the skirt at the bottom. Fur edges the deep V of the waist which descends to the belt line. On either side of it at the latitude of the waist are two ornaments in dull silver.

A gilet fills in the area between the sides of the V. It is of ecru handkerchief linen, crossed with silver threads. The hat is of black velvet with pearl gray facing. It carries the moral that hats are getting a good deal bigger as time goes on. Just by way of contradicting this important truth, however, you see tiny ones a great deal of the time.

I saw an awfully stunning evening dress at the Theatre des Capucines the other night. A tall, willowy blonde with a lovely back wore it. The dress was of white satin embroidered in a curious, rather strong design in rings, some of silver and some of jet, and made of sequins. It was cut in a straight silhouette to emphasize the wearer's slimness. A slender train fell away at one side. Silver beads held it over the shoulders. A belt wrapped in folds of the silver and jet marked the waist line.

"HER FACE COULD STOP A CLOCK."

Priscilla had been to school a few days for the first time in her life when she met a friend on the street one day, who inquired about how she was getting along.

"Mamma does not like to have me go very well," she said, "because she misses me at home."

"But what does your papa say about it?" inquired the friend.

"O, he is kind of uneasy in his mind, too," answered Priscilla. E. F.

Harold was often allowed to visit his grandmother, but was always told the hour he should return home. On arriving at his grandmother's one morning he was asked how long he could stay. "Well, grandmother, I don't remember whether mother said 10 o'clock or 3 o'clock, but I'll go home after dinner and ask her." A. C. K.

While the infant daughter of my hostess was fretting in my arms, the redhaired son of the house puzzled me greatly by bobbing his head about in front of her in the most energetic fashion. When the baby at last smiled he looked up triumphant. "She likes my head," he explained, "'cause it's bright." H. B.

Betty has been taught to say the nursery rhyme on forehead, eyes, nose, and mouth of "Knock at the door, peek in, raise the latch, and walk in." The other day she was taken in next door to see the new baby. After looking at him intently for a few minutes she looked up at the nurse and said: "Please may I kiss him on his door?" P. W.

Alice and Dicky came in to spend a few days with their grandma. When daddy was ready to go Dicky looked for his hat and coat, preparatory to leaving with him.

Grandma said: "Why, Richard, I thought you were going to stay with us, too?"

He answered: "Well, grandma, you know I'm a whole lot of trouble. I think I better go home to my mother." M. L. H.

Surprised at hearing that Teddy was born on Thanksgiving day, I said:

"Well, your mamma and papa certainly have something to be thankful for, haven't they?"

He answered: "I should say so; they're thankful I'm not twins." M. V. P.

Bobbie was invited to visit his grandmother for two weeks, and his mother had equipped him with plenty of pretty clothes. After trying them all on, he remarked: "You better let me wear them to play in, so I can get acquainted with myself, and then grandma will know me." P. R.

Having a little visitor at my home the other day while I was curling my hair, I noticed he had been watching me closely, so I asked him whether he wanted me to curl his hair. He remarked: "O, no; I used to have curls when I was a girl, but I'm a boy now." E. M.

Raymond went with mother for a walk one summer evening, and passed a store where the family was sitting outside with their dog.

"Hello," said Raymond.

"Well," asked mother, surprised, "do you know those people?"

"No," said Raymond, "but I know the dog." Mrs. R. B.

The price she paid for a clean house

—and how her husband's Christmas thoughtfulness saved their happiness

It's bad enough to have all work and no play make Jack a dull boy. But when it makes Jill a household drudge—that's a crime. The loss of playtime, the loss of strength and health is too great a price for your wife to pay for a clean house, because it leads to discontent and unhappiness.

If your wife is tired out when you come home at night; if she is losing her dainty appearance and her good temper alike, she is on the road to paying a price in comparison to which the price of an Ohio Electric Cleaner is infinitesimal.

Happiness is the most precious thing in the world. Don't let such a hum-drum thing as cleaning take it away from you. Make cleaning easier, quicker. Save playtime and happiness. It's up to you this Christmas.

Cleaning everything in the house, easily, thoroughly, is the job for which the Ohio Electric Cleaner is made. It uses the one method of gentle brush and powerful air suction that has proved it can really clean without injuring the finest rugs or carpets.

Three important features are the gentle brush, the automatic switch and the automatic dust valve.

The brush revolves slowly, straightening the nap of the carpet and lifting threads, etc. to a position where the powerful suction can whisk them into the dust bag. The brush is guaranteed not to injure the finest rug or carpet.

The automatic switch controls the motor according to the position of the handle. The simplest possible method, and no danger of burning the hand on a frayed electric cord.

When the motor stops, the automatic dust valve closes, preventing dust from falling back from the bag onto the floor.

These and other features make the Ohio a cleaner that really cleans. Investigate at your dealer's. See his name below.

CHRISTMAS GIFT PROBLEM.

FOR the last several days the conversation at our luncheon table has been about nothing but Christmas and preparation for it.

Ann, who is, as I have said before, an extraordinarily capable and clever girl surprised me by the shortsighted arrangements she had made for the next few weeks. She had decided that all the gifts on her long list this year must be made by hand—her hand. Buried rather deep in her is a strain of sentimentality that only occasionally sees the light, but here it was cropping up in the midst of this busy and breathless time, overriding her common sense and good judgment.

If she had given herself ample time to accomplish what she has planned to do between now and Christmas I would have nothing but encouragement for her indulgence in this bit of sentiment. But she is foolishly trying to do in a couple of weeks what she should have allowed herself months for.

She told us yesterday that she wouldn't be able to have luncheon with us any more until after Christmas, because she needed to devote her noon hours from now on to knitting and embroidering. She'll bring a sandwich from home each day and that'll have to serve, she said, for her noonday meal.

According to her calculation, which is based on the work of the last week, she'll be able to finish all the work she has planned by Christmas eve. But that means that she will have to arise an hour earlier than usual each morning, devote all the hours between dinner time and midnight to this work, and give up her noon hour to it.

She's already beginning to look haggard and worn from the work of the last week, and if she persists in following the program of work she has laid out for herself, I'm afraid she'll be a wreck of shattered nerves at Christmas time.

Marion, Dorothy, and I have remonstrated with her, but our remonstrance and advice had little effect until I told her of the unhappy experience of one of my correspondents.

For the sake of other business girls who may have been inspired either through sentiment, like Ann, or through economy, to overwork themselves during the next couple of weeks, I'll tell the story here.

Margaret N. several years ago decided to make by hand all the gifts she intended to bestow that Christmas. The position she had at the time was no sinecure. The work was heavy and exacting and used up more of her strength and energy than she supposed.

Toward the end of November of that year she began working on her gifts. From then until Christmas she used every spare moment of her time on them and as many hours as she could stand it night after night.

By Christmas morning all her work was done, but she spent that day in bed, as well as every day for the three weeks that followed. The nervous strain from the over work, combined with loss of sleep, lack of exercise and relaxation, and insufficient food (she didn't take time to eat all her meals) was too much for her endurance. It was at least two months before she was able to resume her work, and more than a year before she regained her normal strength.

Her letter to me, written during the days of her convalescence, was in the form of a plea to other working women not to waste their precious strength as foolishly as she had hers.

This story made, I believe, rather a deep impression on Ann, and her last words at parting with us yesterday were:

"You'll probably see me here every day at luncheon, after all. But if you don't, I promise that I'll be moderate about the hand work I intend to do for Christmas, even if I have to buy things ready made for most of those on my list."

"If you still have shopping to do," Marion warned all of us as we were leaving, "do it now. Don't wear yourself out the last day or two trying to do everything at once."

FOR A RAINY CLIMATE.

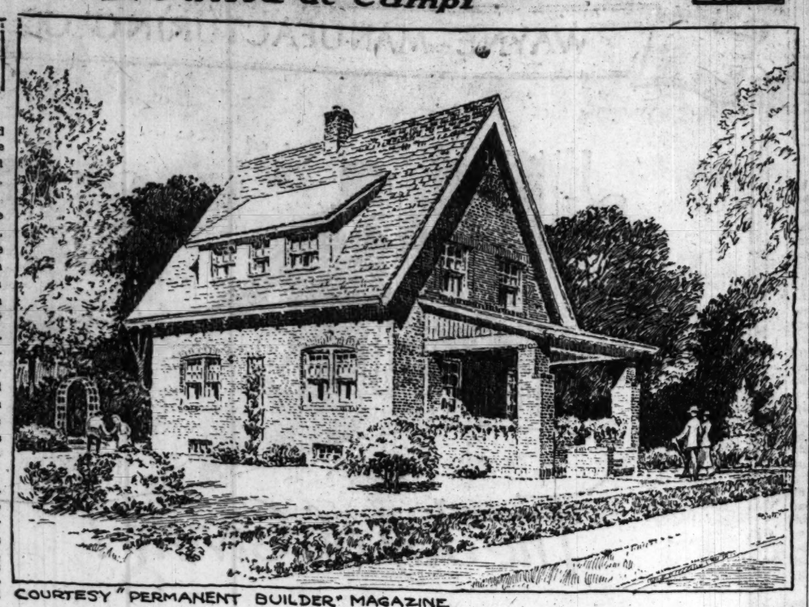
ONE of the charms of the old world buildings is that they are fitted to local conditions, as well as built of local materials. This is particularly true of roofs.

In Palestine, where the summers are extremely hot and the rainfall slight, the houses have flat roofs, where the family can go in the evening to catch any wandering breeze. Farther north in Greece, where there is more rain and less heat, people build with gently sloping roofs; witness their temples. Northern France, as the lads of our expeditionary force can testify, has a climate where rain is the usual thing and fair weather the exception. Northern France is likewise the home of Gothic architecture, and all Gothic buildings have steep roofs to shed the downpour.

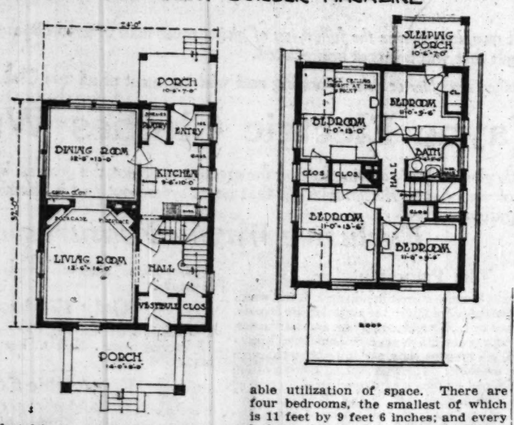
The house shown is designed for a climate having plenty of rainfall. The steep roof will carry off either rain or snow, and shows it. The house was designed as a permanent home, too, and shows that. The lifted dormer has an inviting air which carries out the hospitable suggestion of the broad porch, with its solid brick pillars testifying to the substantial character of the solid brick walls. The central chimney tells of economy in heating, the window groups evidence a wholesome respect for light and air; but over all is the broad, competent, protecting roof of asphalt shingles, proof alike against fire or flood.

Inside, this house is a regular miracle of space saving. The ground plan, exclusive of porches, is only 24 feet by 32. Yet, within this modest space are seven rooms, a vestibule, stair hall, pantry, and bathroom; and not one of these rooms is cramped or constricted. Never was every inch of enclosed space more thoroughly utilized.

The substantial front porch is 14 feet by 8. From this you enter a vestibule, which shuts off all cold drafts in winter, and from the vestibule pass to the stair hall. At the right of the vestibule is a good sized coat closet. In front are the stairs to the upper story, and under the curve of the stairs is the door leading to the kitchen. Between this door and the kitchen is the basement stairway. The saving of steps in this arrangement is as well worth noting as the saving of space.



COURTESY "PERMANENT BUILDER" MAGAZINE



At the left of the hall is the living room, 12 feet 6 inches by 16 feet, lighted by two big windows in the long wall and a smaller one in front, opening on the porch. At the other end of the living room is the opening to the dining room, half closed in by two diagonal built-in objects. On the right of this opening is the fireplace, set correspondingly; its flue using the same chimney as that of the furnace in the basement. On the opposite side of the room is a built-in bookcase, occupying the other corner. The effect of books and fire thus partly facing each other while both face the room is most unusual and attractive.

Passing between fireplace and bookshelves, you come to the dining room, 12 feet 6 inches by 13 feet. On the left is a built-in china closet, backed against the living room bookcase; another instance of space saving. On the same side are two big windows, and two more open on the rear garden. This gives a view straight through from the living room to the garden, and increases the feeling of spaciousness.

At the right of the dining room is the doorway to the kitchen, 9½ feet by 10. Back of the kitchen are the pantry, next the dining room, and the entry from the rear porch. The kitchen is equipped with range, sink, and cabinets, and the doorway in front leads to basement stairs and hall.

Upstairs we find the same remarkable utilization of space. There are four bedrooms, the smallest of which is 11 feet by 9 feet 6 inches; and every bedroom has its closet. What is more, every bedroom has cross ventilation; there are windows in two sides of each; and the steep roof combines with the dormers to give plenty of head room. Next to the stairs is a good size bathroom, and opening from one of the rear rooms is a sleeping porch, over the service porch below.

It would be easy and inexpensive by the way, to run the rear porch nearly or quite across that end of the house, thus enlarging the outdoor sleeping quarters above and providing a garden living porch below.

The walls of this house are of common brick. This adds to the local fitness of the structure, for common brick never are carried far from the place where they are made. Properly selected and laid with wide joints, they make a beautiful wall, as well as a most durable one. If laid in one of the attractive patterns which all good brick masons know, all the better.

The roof is of asphalt or metal shingles, and the interior plaster is gypsum laid on metal lath.

So built, this house contains hardly anything that will burn, and that little is not in the least likely to burn. If fire starts in such a structure, it spreads slowly; and practically always is caught and put out before it does more than trifling damage. But even if deliberately set on fire while the family and neighbors are away, 80 per cent of the value of the house would remain after the flames had done their worst.

ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN.

For the first time since the famous Gobelin tapestry works were established in France, back in 1664, women are now being taught to make tapestries.

Swimming suits worn by girl swimmers who compete in future Amateur Athletic union contests must come higher around the neck and be cut with a due allowance for shrinkage.

It is no uncommon thing for Turkish women to be able to speak half the languages of Europe, and to have, in addition, a knowledge of ancient Greek, Persian, and Arabic.

Between Jan. 1 and Oct. 1, 1920, there were 15,000 women in Pennsylvania out of work because of labor disputes in the establishments in which they were employed.

The "Ship by Truck-Good Roads" essay contest, taken part in by 200,000 high school students, was won by 16 year old Katherine F. Butterfield of Welser, Idaho. She will receive a four year university scholarship.

Patterns by Clotilde

9758—Woman's house dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¼ yards of 44 inch material, with ½ yard of 30 inch contrasting material.

9254—Girl's dress. Sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2⅞ yards of 36 inch material, with ½ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

9467—Woman's and misses' bloomers. Sizes 24 to 36 inches waist measure. Size 26 requires 2½ yards of 27 inch, 1⅞ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

How to Use the Patterns

ONE of those patterns that lends itself equally well to wash materials or serge, satin, or challis is No. 9759. The skirt is in three pieces, and the front gores are hemmed down the front edges and lapped over one another the width of the hems. They are left open to a placket depth, and then stitched together the balance of the length.

If wash material is used, the dress would launder much more easily if left open the length of the skirt. Work buttonholes down the right front and eyelets down the left side. Then buy good pearl buttons on a shank and remove before each laundering.

A good feature for wash material is the way the shoulders are treated. The backs extend over on the fronts and the fronts are gathered at the shoulder. Be careful to arrange the gathers according to the notches, because they do not sit well if they spread too far towards the shoulder. The distance from the neck line is usually one inch, and a little more at the armhole end.

No. 9467 is a good pattern, and, as bloomers are so generally worn, it is a good idea to have a pattern and make your own. They are decidedly expensive to buy and not much trouble to make.

Wash satin, sateen, or any preferred material may be used, and there will be no trouble in making them, as the directions on the pattern are very clear. Be sure that they are plenty long in the seat, and use felled seams, doing the hemming by hand. Valenciennes lace will make a pretty finish at the knees.

No. 9254 is a smart design for your small daughter, and will be especially good looking made of one of those beautiful plaid woolens or ginghams, with the vest, collar, and cuffs of some contrasting color.

There are two box plaits in the front and the same in the back, and the vest and belt are set in underneath these. The plaits should meet exactly at the shoulder seams, and this is not always possible where the seam is put together in the ordinary way. Baste the dress together after the plaits are laid, and make any necessary alterations.

Being sure that the shoulder seams are correctly marked, lay one of the front shoulder seams flat out on a board or table and baste the back shoulder seam that goes to it back, so that the fold comes exactly on the seam line. The basting should come about one-eighth inch below the folded edge. Then lay the back in place over the front, laying the folded edge of the back on the seam line of the front. Pin the seam together at each end, sticking the pins in at right angles to the seam.

Pin the box plait together in the same way, and if necessary to make the plait match stretch the front a little. After the seam is properly pinned together hem the folded edge to the front seam line, just catching in the edge of the fold. Take the pins out, turn the seam wrong side uppermost, baste together, and stitch. Cut the hemming stitches in several places and pull out carefully, then cut and remove the bastings.

The result should be a perfectly matched seam. The idea of the hemming is to hold parts together that must be matched, for no matter how carefully done the basting may be it is impossible to prevent one part slipping out of place enough to prevent perfect matching. The hemming stitches, if put in right, will not be caught in the stitching.

The contrasting material for this dress could be a fine quality of pique if the material is a wash one, or organdie, or the same material as the dress, choosing one of the colors in the plaid and using a solid color.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

When information is wanted by mail, stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

"I am a man 50 years of age, by trade a tool and instrument maker. Due to frequent attacks of asthma and bronchitis, from which I suffer severely during the winter, and also on account of my age, I find it exceedingly difficult to secure a position, and still more difficult to hold on to a job when I happen to get one. As I have to make a living, I had to find some vocation that would render me independent of positions, and am now taking lessons in watchmaking and making rapid progress. It is necessary, however, that I should have a watchmaker's lathe and other tools, and a bench. At the present price this equipment is entirely beyond my means, and it occurred to me that there must be many retired jewelers and watchmakers in Chicago and surrounding country towns, who have equipment of this kind which they are not using, and which I feel sure they would be glad to let me have under the circumstances. I hope and feel confident you will help me in this matter, otherwise I will have to abandon the idea of continuing my lessons and eventually starting up in business. E. H."

I trust this will meet the attention of some one who can help you.

"Will you be kind enough to assist me in finding some one who is in need of bed springs for double bed? The springs are in good condition and I am sure there will be some one who will appreciate having them. Also I have a man's good warm overcoat, which I will be only too glad to give. "MRS. F. D."

Thank you for your generous offer.

"I wonder if any of your readers have business books they do not use. I am a student of business, but cannot afford to buy many books. If any of your readers have books on accounting, I would be gratified to receive them. "T. B."

No need to plead this correspondent's cause, is there—that is, if the accounting books asked for are idle.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care the Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

Why Not Write?

"Dear Miss Blake: I met a girl at a summer resort last season whom I love dearly. As she lives upstate, I have found it impossible to visit her. About a month ago her mother died. The girl was sick for a few days afterwards. I have not heard from her since. She recently asked her cousin to write to me and explain why I have not heard from her, saying she has been too sick to correspond with me. A friend of mine told me the other day that she was working again. Please advise me whether to go and see her or drop her altogether. R. D."

If you care for the girl, go and see her, or, better still, write to her first and ask her if it would be agreeable for you to come. The girl undoubtedly has been under a great strain, and must be excused on account of her trouble.

Nu-tro

The New Milk Product

For use in coffee and cooking

Nu-tro adds a new richness, flavor and nutritive quality to other foods. Use it just the same as milk or cream.

Nu-tro is a blend of pure, fresh cow's milk, with the animal fats extracted, evaporated to double strength and enriched with refined coconut fat, resulting in a product of far greater food value than anything of a similar nature.

Makes a good cup of coffee better

Nu-tro brings out the full flavor and aroma of good coffee. Use Nu-tro in making cocoa or chocolate, creamed soups, gravies, sauces, cakes, puddings and bread.

Nu-tro is always fresh, always ready. It is convenient and economical. Use Nu-tro freely on the table and in cooking. Its price is moderate; its measure of nutrition large.

Ask your grocer for Nu-tro and try the pancake recipe above

Indiana Condensed Milk Co.,
Main Office, Indianapolis, Ind.
Condenseries, Sheridan, Ind.; Lebanon, Ind.; Albany, Wis.

Try This Pancake Recipe

2½ cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
2 level teaspoons baking powder
¼ cup sugar
1 cup Nu-tro
1 cup water
1 egg—beaten
2 tablespoons butter, melted

Sift ingredients, add sugar with Nu-tro and water. Add egg and butter. Mix and cook on hot greased griddle. Serve with maple syrup or otherwise as desired.

Wayne Washer

The Joy of Giving!

WHOEVER would experience the fullest joy of giving must take time to choose personally and with care the gift that will be most appreciated.

Every wife, mother, daughter or sister is hoping and wishing most of all this Christmas for a

Wayne Electric Clothes Washer

What a perfectly glorious gift!—solving forever the greatest problem, the greatest burden of homework—the drudgery of washday! A Christmas gift that never wears out and is always a constant reminder of your thoughtfulness!

Exclusive Wayne Features

The Principle

It is perfect in results because correct in principle. It will wash, without the slightest danger of injury, the most delicate lingerie, the most fragile lace or fabric; with equal ease and satisfaction it will wash the rag rug and the most commonplace of household linen. There are no pegs, slats, paddles or metal hazards to tear or injure anything. The true rocking motion of the "WAYNE" is obtained by means of curved steel rockers of which the cradle is an integral part. In this "Rocker Cradle" the Removable Copper Tub is placed. A crank and a connecting rod transmit the motive power, rocking the cradle, and thus agitating clothes and water. This rocking motion throws the clothes and hot suds back and forth in the tub; forces the suds and hot water through the linen, producing the desired result—snow-white clothing, washed clean, without the slightest possibility of injury.

"Hobby-Horse" Washing Action

It is the only Electric Clothes Washer built with the famous "Hobby-Horse" action—so gentle in its work—but so sure in its results.

Only 17 Moving Parts

It is the simplest Electric Clothes Washer ever built—only 17 moving parts—built to last a lifetime without giving trouble.

Removable Copper Tub

It is the only Oscillating Electric Clothes Washer of the Cabinet type, built with a Removable Copper Tub, a most essential feature—making the few working parts of the "WAYNE'S" mechanism easily accessible, plus the added comfort of having a perfectly sanitary tub, easy to clean inside and out.

Welded Steel Cradle Rocker

It is the only Electric Clothes Washer built that carries the entire load of the tub on a Welded Steel Cradle, which does away with all Springs and the Old-style Center Bearings.

Your Last Chance to Buy on these Easy Terms

THIS is your last opportunity to get a Silvertone Phonograph for the small monthly payments shown here. When our new catalog for 1921 goes into effect the monthly payment terms will be practically doubled on each model. While you may now order your Silvertone and pay from $2.50 to $7.50 a month, if you wait until 1921 you will have to pay from $4.00 to $15.00 monthly for these same machines. It will pay you to order today.

You are assured of lasting satisfaction when you order a Silvertone. Our guarantee of "Absolute satisfaction or your money back at any time" proves that our phonographs are remarkably high quality or they could not be sold under such a binding guarantee. Besides the positive assurance of reliability, you can save money by buying a Silvertone Phonograph in preference to other makes. We guarantee the Silvertone to be the equal of other phonographs selling at prices from 25 to 50 per cent higher.

Liberal Trial in Your Home

Our remarkable trial offer gives you every opportunity to prove all of our claims to your own satisfaction without spending a cent. We want you to try any one of these Silvertone Phonographs in your own home for two weeks without a cent of expense and without obligating you to buy unless you are fully satisfied with the instrument.

No effort nor expense has been spared to make the Silvertone the best phonograph that we can build. We have incorporated in these instruments every refinement in design and construction which would improve their musical quality and durability. Cabinet designs have been refined in keeping with the modern tendency in high class development, until now they represent the most artistic, harmonious and dignified examples of period furniture. In addition to being a pleasing and artistic design, they are made of the finest selected woods and veneers and are finished with that exquisite care and perfection which discriminating buyers demand in their furniture.

Wonderfully Clear Tone

The soft, mellow tone of the Silvertone is due to a scientifically correct combination of our perfected reproducer, tone arm and amplifying chamber. The perfect assembly of these vital parts permits the Silvertone to reproduce with infinite detail every variation of the singer's voice and every note of music with a surprising freedom from disagreeable scratching and surface noises.

Investigate this really remarkable opportunity to procure a superior phonograph at an unusually low price and on easy monthly payments that probably will never again be duplicated. All we ask is that you fill out the order blank below. Send no money. You pay nothing until you decide to keep your Silvertone.

Have a Silvertone in Your Home for Christmas

Order Today

Let Us Send You A SILVERTONE Phonograph for Two Weeks' Trial in Your Home Without Expense to You

SELECT any Silvertone Phonograph shown on this page, refer to the list of Silvertone records given below and check any number of selections you desire, fill in the order blank and mail it to Sears, Roebuck and Co. today. We will ship Silvertone Phonograph and records on two weeks' trial. You take absolutely no risk nor do you obligate yourself in any way by taking a Silvertone on trial. All we ask you to do is to give the phonograph a thorough test. Examine its mechanical features, cabinet work, workmanship and finish. Try it with the Silvertone records, or any other disc record you desire and note its beauty of tone and fidelity of reproduction. Give it every test necessary to prove the truth of our claims for it. And then compare the price of the Silvertone with that of any other phonograph of the same size, beauty and musical excellence. You are to be the sole judge of Silvertone quality and value.

If, at the end of two weeks' trial, you are not fully satisfied with the Silvertone, if you do not believe that it is in every way the equal of any phonograph on the market selling at prices from 25 to 50 per cent higher than the Silvertone, simply notify us and we will take away the phonograph and records at our own expense and will refund any transportation and cartage charges you have paid. The two weeks' test will not have cost you one cent nor placed you under any obligation.

Play as You Pay—Very Easy Terms

If, after two weeks' trial, you are fully satisfied with the Silvertone and desire to keep it, simply add the price of the records you have selected to the price of the phonograph and send us this amount in equal monthly payments until the total is paid. The amount of the monthly payment on each instrument is shown under the illustrations.

The records you order with the Silvertone do not increase the amount of monthly payment. The price of the records is simply added to the price of the phonograph and the whole amount paid at the monthly rate quoted under the illustration of the instrument you select.

If you fill out and mail the order blank at once you will be in time to get your Silvertone before the monthly payment rate is raised. Send your order now!

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

CAKES FOR THE 12 DAYS.

HOLIDAY time used to stretch from Christmas to Twelfth Night, and the next day after, too, namely, to St. Distaff's day. They were rout cakes, among other [illegible] for the period, many of them [illegible] schools drop cookies.

One of the old meanings of rout was fashionable assembly or large evening party. About the only remnant of the cookery customs of a great social era is the rout cake, still used in England on any occasion where French pastry would be served elsewhere. England has such a number of such cakes that it has not needed to adopt many of these from across the channel. The rout cake is an almond adaptation.

Mary Jewry's recipe for a "Twelfth Cake" is one of the old fashioned sort, with two pounds of butter, two pounds of sugar, and so forth. Dividing it by four, we see that it is much like a five egg cake—the original calls for twenty eggs—which may be well imitated by the two egg or cup cake.

It can all the more easily be imitated in the interests of economy because it contains raisins, currants, almonds, citron, and orange and lemon peel. In the original cake there are four pounds of currants, and it is like the English to use eternally the lemon and orange peel.

Beating Twenty Eggs.

It is no wonder that cake making was long considered a high art. Electric power is really required to beat twenty eggs, and to beat that number of eggs into two pounds of butter and two pounds of sugar, creamed together, and do it to perfection, is a task hardly equal to a woman's undeveloped biceps. Of course, the Twelfth Cake contained the bean, a big brown scarlet runner bean, often. The dictionary defines the Twelfth Cake as an "ornamental cake distributed among friends and visitors on the festival of Twelfth night," which festival in these modern days, or rather which occasion, is considered a good one for a dance.

By the way, Mary Jewry's recipe is [illegible] almost exactly from an older and widely popular cook book of the eighteenth century, but she has added: "When nearly cold, ice it over, and ornament it with fancy articles of any description, with a high ornament in the center." In each case directions are given for baking it in a hoop lined with buttered paper, and "smoothing down the top with the hand dipped in milk" before putting it to a long baking, longer because so large.

Cleaning the Currants.

Last year currants cost twice as much as cooking raisins. This year the raisins cost twice as much as the currants, so those who like this sort of a plum in their cakes can gratify their taste and be rather thrifty as well. All the old cook books give directions for cleaning currants by washings and dryings, but if they are rubbed in a little flour, after being picked over, much time is saved, and they are then ready for immediate use. One tablespoon of flour is enough for a cup of currants, and that is not much to throw away. Sift it off the thoroughly rubbed currants.

We could give our whole article to the business of preparing the ingredients for an elaborate cake, giving heed to the substitutes for brandy and other such flavors, which people always used to use, but which most of us had ceased to use long before prohibition days. Blanched almonds may be pounded with a little egg white or water, and fine fresh lemon peel may be blended with cream if we want to add that. There are no end of additions we may make in the way of flavorings, especially to a fruit cake.

Castleconnell Cake.

A simple currant cake, the formula for which departs but slightly from that for cup cake, an excellent fruit cake base, is: One cup of sifted sugar, one-half cup of butter, three eggs, scant half cup of milk, two cups of flour, one teaspoon of baking powder, one teaspoon mixed spices, one cup of currants, one-half cup of sultanas, two ounces of candied peel, which may be omitted if not to taste or at hand. Put together like any cup cake. Bake for one hour or more in a moderate oven in a round pan lined with buttered paper. Half lard may be used for the shortening.

Soft Candied Orange Peel.

Home candied orange peel usually dries rapidly, and may then be pounded fine and used for cakes and puddings. Some home cooks cook the orange peel until the sirup hardens it. Soft candied orange peel is highly worth while for the afternoon tea relish, and ways can always be found for using it in other nice service.

Take off orange skins in quarters, soak and cook in plain water until they can be easily pierced with a toothpick. Most people do not scrape out the white part, but some people like to when the peel is to be used for a garnish of creams. Cut the soft peel into fine strips, and then candy in a sirup in which there is twice as much sugar as water, cooked to a sirup before the peel is put in. Be sure to have the pan covered all the time, and cook over a tiny fire until the peel is well saturated. Take out and drain, and sprinkle with a little sugar.

Since by this method the sirup does not cook away, a considerable amount of peel can be prepared, by several cookings, in as little as one-half cup of sugar. Remember that the emphasized point is that orange peel candied by cooking the sirup away soon grows hard, and may be hardened irreparably at once.

White or Mountain Cake.

One cup and a half of sugar, one-half cup of butter, five egg whites or up to eight, two cups of cake flour, one-half cup of buttermilk or rich whipped up sour milk, or sweet milk may be used, in which case about a half cup more of flour may be required. With the sour milk use one-fourth of a level teaspoon of soda, dissolved in a teaspoon of tepid water. With the sweet milk use a teaspoon of baking powder. This may be used for drop cakes, may be baked in good sized muffin tins, or in the regulation oblong loaf, or in almost any fashion required. Baked in good sized muffin tins, each cake then topped with whipped cream as deep as the cake, this garnished with a bit of jelly or something like chopped pistachios, we get a rich dessert piece. It has no end of adaptations.

Almond Sponge Cake.

For all the holiday time almond cakes used to be in great demand. They are fine of flavor, but rich to the danger point, besides being difficult to make.

The almond contains so much oil that cakes made with it may be exceedingly heavy and even greasy. A simpler way to get the dainty flavor of the almond is to add the nuts to a sponge cake batter, proceeding as follows:

Chop one cup of blanched almonds. Beat the whites and yolks of five eggs separately, folding into the whites one cup of sifted sugar. If preferred the sugar may be beaten into the yolks, but the beating should be continued until the mixture will fall in a smooth ribbon. When the three have been mixed add the nuts, and then fold into the mixture a cup of flour sifted three times with a teaspoon of baking powder.

Almond essence and vanilla—half and half—are good for the flavoring. Bake from forty minutes to an hour, according to condition of oven. It is best to have the oven hot enough to heat the cake through quickly, then to lessen the heat so as to secure a level top.

Mock Angel Cake.

Not every one is successful with this cake, but it is quite as adaptable as the mountain cake, and perhaps those who bake it in small portions have the best success. Baked in a loaf, cut in squares, and these variously iced, it makes an inexpensive base for one sort of French pastry. One of the variations of this recipe reads: "Sift together seven times: One cup of flour, one cup of sugar, one-fourth teaspoon salt, three teaspoons baking powder. Add one cup of milk heated to boiling point and one teaspoon vanilla. Beat thoroughly, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Bake in an ungreased pan in a moderate oven about forty minutes."

Plain Cookies.

Cream one-fourth pound of butter and add to it gradually one cup of sugar, one well beaten egg, and a pinch of salt. Add alternately to this one-fourth cup of milk and two and one-half scant cups of flour into which has been sifted two teaspoons of baking powder and flavoring.

Let the dough when made stand on the ice until chilled, then roll out a part at a time, thin, and cut out with cutter dipped in flour. If thin and small bake from ten to twelve minutes in an oven which is on the border line between medium and hot. An expert can roll these as thin as noodles.

A shred of blanched almond, a bit of angelica, or what you will, may garnish these. Sugar sprinkled over and then mostly shaken off makes an agreeable cookie or small cake. A sprinkle of colored sugar in the middle makes for variety. As to different shapes, cutters are not necessarily required. There are people who think a cookie rises better if cut out with a knife—squares, diamonds, and so forth—rather than with a cutter.

Vanity Balls.

A novelty may be worked out from an ancient recipe which reads: "Thicken the white of an egg as stiff as possible with flour; roll the paste out thin, cut out little cakes with a small canister top, and bake quickly. They will puff up and form a pretty variety in making fancy dishes for a party." These taste something like popcorn, and are safer for the teeth. The little card party cutters are large enough, and if the various ones are used the little cakes make an attractive tidbit. Sugar really does not improve them. It will seem worth while or not to make these much according to your experience. Two or three of them served with a nice soup will be a novelty. As to their puffing up much, probably the worker's skill will determine that, but if they do not puff much they will be found palatable if daintily browned.

Protection

There may be a million dollars worth of merchandise loaded in trucks, hurrying to freight depots and wharves, stopped dead by the upraised hand of this Guardian of the Law.

There may be financial giants and dignitaries of the highest rank fussing and fuming in luxurious limousines because of the delay.

That doesn't matter. The only thing that does matter is the safety, the welfare of the public—of everyone; whether that person has but a few pennies jingling in his purse or a bank account that mounts into dizzy figures.

That is the duty of the traffic cop—and he does it. He doesn't stand alone. It isn't his star, shiny buttons or size that give power to his commands. It is the force back of him—the will—the wealth—determination of a great city.

Stationed at the buying corners of America for nearly a third of a century, has been a staunch, true guardian of Baking Powder value, the Calumet trade mark, the well known blue and orange Calumet label with the Indian head.

It is the firm, upraised hand against inferior quality—against impurity, uncertainty, unfair dealing and greed of excessive profits. It is the protector of those who are not acquainted with Baking Powder quality—of those who are striving to raise food standards and reduce food costs.

And it does protect. It protects because back of every can of Calumet Baking Powder is an inflexible policy of honesty in manufacturing and honesty in selling. Back of every can is a set purpose to give every buyer of Calumet the highest of quality, the utmost of purity and to do this at the lowest possible cost to the consumer.

Back of every can, are the big Calumet Factories—the largest baking powder plants in the world, the most modernly equipped, the most sanitary. Here a corps of food experts, of chemists and of bakers are constantly testing, testing, testing; proving the purity of every ingredient proving the leavening strength of Calumet—proving its economy—protecting you against all possibility of an inferior or an uncertain leavener; fulfilling in every way our every obligation to the buying public.

The housewife who must count every penny as well as the women of unlimited means gets this protection—no matter where she buys Calumet or when.

Calumet has no equal—no superior. It received highest awards at the World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago. It was granted highest honors at the Paris Exposition, Paris, France. It is sold at a moderate price. It contains only such ingredients as have been officially approved by U. S. Food Authorities. It is pure in the can—pure in the baking.

Calumet is the biggest selling baking powder in the world today, because—and only because—it is the most dependable, "Best by Test" and never anything else.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

DECEMBER 19, 1920.

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

MR. GEST, producer of "Mecca," is here proposing to do some important deeds in the way of reforming the theater. Though he does not own the invincible sword, the winged sandals, nor the invisible helmet of another hero, he is going to engage the frightful horror in battle, and he hopes to subdue him, aided by the populace.

Mr. Gest's idea is, when "Mecca" comes in January, that no seats for it will knowingly be assigned to the customary agencies. The Auditorium box office will be the only legal outlet for reservations. He promises not to patronize the ticket brokers, and he asks the public to do the same. Mr. Johnson, executive director of the Chicago opera, announces his aid in the matter, and therefore both the management of the theater and the management of "Mecca" are in league to discomfit the wily middle man. All they need, now, is the people.

Of course, there would be no ticket speculators if the people did not want them. The "agency" is a creature of the playgoer rather than of the play producer. The persons who keep the so-called drama alive are those who buy their seats away from the box office. They are the persons who, having money and the willingness to spend it, believe that it should purchase the best theater seats as it does the best food and the best clothing. Mr. Gest of "Mecca" and Mr. Johnson of the Auditorium have merely to convince these foolish people otherwise.

At that Mr. Gest's proposition is the square negotiation of a man believed by many of us to be the most generous and the least mercenary of the producers. He is a combination of Peter Pan, a drunken sailor, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and the Rainbow. He loves his big spectacles and he loves to have us go to see them. Therefore when he says that he wants "Mecca" to be sold exclusively at the Auditorium, I, for one, am bound to believe him.

Thus, Mr. Morris Gest:

"The public has the remedy for ticket speculation entirely in its own hands, and all that remains is for the public to use its own power and put these rats of the Rialto out of business for good and all. The remedy is for the public to buy at the box office, and not to patronize the 'specs.' The chief difficulty, of course, for the theater manager is to see that the tickets sold at the window are sold to citizens who intend to use the tickets themselves. It is extremely difficult to detect 'diggers' who stand in line to purchase for the speculators, but with the aid of a special detective force and the coöperation of the police under Chief Fitzmorris, we can reduce this evil to a minimum. Of one great aid I am assured: Mr. Herbert M. Johnson, executive director of the Chicago Opera association and manager of the Auditorium, hates speculators as he hates poison, and there will not be the slightest chance of collusion between speculators and any of his box office employés. Therefore all we have to do is to watch the 'diggers' and have our own detective force watch the speculators, to cut off their source of supply.

"The public, however, can make it much easier to thwart the speculators, if the public will follow the slogan, 'Buy at the box office only.' Not more than six tickets will be sold to any one person unless the applicant can show that who will use the tickets, for some special theater party, club or organization. Any mail order that looks 'phoney' will be thrown out and the money returned. I am in this fight to a finish and I am convinced these speculators must not be permitted to gouge the public. Chicago suffers more than any other city in the world from these pests. The brokers in New York have syndicates that buy certain sections of the best seats, but they are under a $50,000 bond never to charge more than 50 cents advance on the printed price of the ticket."

One may add that the New York brokers seem to be under bond not to charge more than 50 cents premium to any save visiting Chicagoans, numbers of whom write to me daily, boasting of the outlandish prices they have to put upon their expense accounts for going to the theater in Broadway. Mr. Gest, by the way, is furthermore an evangel of happier times. "Mecca," which is infinitely a more costly show than "Aphrodite," may be had for $2 the seat, instead of the $4 charged for it popular predecessor.

THIS column may have been unduly encomiastic a week or so ago about "The Hottentot," which Mr. Collier is playing at the Grand. At least it learns so from the competent correspondence of its irritated, though steady, readers. It should be known that "The Hottentot," like "Happy-Go-Lucky," is merely good of its kind. It is no masterpiece, but it is far above the average show. A difficulty of play reporting is that the play reporter, going to all the shows, learns from his many adventures in the theater that the mediocre ones are pretty good, considering. The average correspondent selects his plays, and, never, never reading between the reviewer's lines, knows not the horrors of the standard playhouse.

Returning to "The Hottentot" it is an irresponsible, unparagraphed, unpunctuated frolic, bereft of plausibility, but with a gay insouciance, preferring puns to credibility, but still conferring some very amusing and satiric characterizations. "William Collier and a good cast!" This is a good cast, and the frivolous "Hottentot" is much to be admired, if you go to it in the right mood. I know no more humorous minute in farce than that of the comic servants in "The Hottentot" when the get together and by the race course and discuss their employers while they drink their drinks. One recommends "The Hottentot" to those who are sophisticated and who have a lot of time.

The management of "Abraham Lincoln" asserts that there have been comments from abstemious Chicagoans against Mr. Drinkwater's picture of Gen. Grant as a tippler. They resent, it is said, that incident in the play wherein the great field marshal indulges the dubious encouragement of the black bottle, and they demand that it be omitted from the drama, as inimical to the current sobriety. Mr. Harris, the owner of the play, in reply to cabled inquiries as to what should be done with the general's bucket, answers thus, from London:

"Any one who attempts to distort history and who lays his vandal hand on a work of art in order to enforce his own anaemic idea of morality is a coward, a fool, and a pest."

Teachers in the Chicago public schools have attended the performances of "Abraham Lincoln" to the number of 4,312, according to a census taken at the Blackstone, and have been convinced by that history that one may be triumphant, though alcoholic, in the great deeds of the world.

Many school children have thus been shown by "Abraham Lincoln" that Grant, a great hero, depended somewhat upon the encouragement of the black bottle. Grant is seen in this so-called masterpiece as a tippler. In the moments of the Virginia crises he puts the pompom to his lips and he drinks deeply that he may tell Meade what to do. I admire Mr. Drinkwater's drama as a whole, but I resent his pusillanimous emphasis of Grant as an alcoholic. Grant may have taken many drinks, but he never did so in a crisis, and when Mr. Drinkwater makes him do so in his play he is merely cheap and expedient.

MISS MADGE KENNEDY, desiring to be heard as well as to be seen, withdraws, temporarily, from the screen to play in a thing called "Cornered," by Dodson Mitchell. From Mr. Woollcott's friendly observations in the New York Times one surmises that neither she nor it is a world-beater.

Josephine Hall is dead in Rhode Island, where she retired when she left the stage. Back in the '90s she was very popular here and those who heard her sing "Sister Mary Jane's Top Note" will never forget the occasion. It was in "The Girl from Paris," and the song made her. She had played in musical comedy and drama with fair success until that time, her first appearance on the stage having been in 1885 at Providence in "Under the Gaslight," in which she played Peach Blossom, a part in which Mrs. John Wood had often been seen. After that she appeared in other plays and then took up musical comedy. Later she appeared at Koster & Bial's, and afterwards made a success in "The Girl from Maxim's," but her real triumph was with the "top note" song.

The Santleys, Joe and Ivy Sawyer, desert "The Half Moon" on the eve of its Chicago appearance, preferring the comforts of their New York home to the rigors of life west of the Hudson.

The McCormicks remain adamant to the importunities of Mr. Woods, who pleads that his new theater should bear their name. News from New York is that the house will be called "The Century," a commonplace title, in view of the wealth of atmospheric names with which it might be christened.

The Colonial theater announces that seats for the Follies may be obtained from authorized agencies at prices no higher than those asked at the box office. These authorized agencies include the Hotel Sherman, the Drake hotel, Blackstone hotel, Congress hotel, La Salle hotel, Morrison hotel, Chicago Athletic club, Illinois Athletic club, University club, Stratford hotel, Auditorium hotel, Mandel Brothers, Chicago club, Union League club, Railway Exchange Segar shop, Boulevard Building Segar shop, Harvester Building Segar stand, 15 South La Salle street, and 54 West Randolph street.

From F. Ziegfeld Jr.'s sartorial philosophy:

"Stage costuming has not improved. It has become hideous and the successful costuming of the future will be that which is in simple elegance dignified and pleasing to the eye.

"A glittering costume that fairly dazzles the eye is not nearly so beautiful as a charming, well made frock with graceful lines and fitted with skill to the wearer. This gives ample opportunity to reveal the beauty of figure, bring out all the beauty of complexion and coiffure and at the same time leave a lasting impression that is pleasing.

"As a matter of fact, the artists who have designed many of the fanciful and grotesque costumes of the past realized as well as the producers that they were not artistic but were made merely for show. Critics declare that the Follies strike an entirely new artistic note this year. There are none of the accepted costume formulas. Instead of bare legs there is a flash of a well turned ankle peeping from a sea of lace.

"Simplicity in costuming does not mean that the producer will have to spend less money. In fact, he will have to spend more, for the simple artistic costume is always the most expensive creation. A pretty neck and pair of shoulders are always beautiful, but even then there is no need to expose them wantonly without regard for good taste.

Capt. Irving O'Hay, a quiet American soldier of fortune, known to many members of the A. E. F., is to appear in the imminent "Passing Show of 1920." The captain was a Rough Rider with Gen. Wood; he has fought in South America, South Africa, the Balkans and Mexico; and he cut somewhat of a figure in the Argonne. He will be recalled by those who waged the Battle of Paris, after the armistice, as a successful referee of pugilism in the bouts directed by the Knights of Columbus.

A. H. Woods, pleased, as he should be, with the efforts of Mr. Barry Baxter in "Happy-Go-Lucky," plans to make of him a star. A drama, 'tis said, is now being composed with that rainbow purpose in view, and it will reveal the efficacious Mr. Baxter as the actor of a serious rôle.

W. A. Brady, producer of "The Little Visiters" is a trifle embittered over the failure of it in New York. Apprehension exists that Mr. Brady, hereafter, will be colder than ever to the drama's better things.

From this morning's New York Times:

The Shuberts, it is learned, are making overtures to Ethel Barrymore to appear in a play by Zoë Akins, which is to be produced in Chicago.

Simple Tale of Simple Folk Is Found Appealing

"THE FORBIDDEN THING."
Produced and directed by Alan Dwan.
THE CAST:
Abel Blake ..... James Kirkwood
Joan ..... Helen Jerome Eddy
Abel's mother ..... Gertrude Claire
David Whorf ..... King Baggot
The other woman ..... Marcia Manon

By Mae Tinee.

NOT the title, but the names of Helen Jerome Eddy and James Kirkwood lured me to "The Forbidden Thing."

I found it to be a picture of genuine heart appeal, quaintly subtitled, beautifully acted, exquisitely photographed.

Sitting on the wave washed shore at twilight, an old mender of nets tells the story of "The Forbidden Thing" to a girl who listens in rapt attention. Flashes of these two are shown throughout the picture, and the effect is beautiful.

The tale is, as Mr. Griffith says of his "Way Down East," "a simple story of simple folks" and its hero is a young chap, living in a small New England town, whose life is subject to the influence of three women. There is his mother, the girl he loves truly, and who returns his love in kind, and she who is usually known as "the other woman." In this case she is a Portuguese vampire, who hangs out at Ryan's, a disreputable resort, whither the boy strays when he thinks himself deserted by his fiancée.

As is most unusual, he marries the other woman. The girl marries another man—yet the ending is happy. More than this of the plot I mustn't tell you, because one of the big reasons for the picture's being as good as it is is the fact that you are left in doubt as to the outcome until practically the end of the production—and this with no padding or apparent attempt to keep you guessing.

Helen Jerome Eddy, who isn't beautiful, is so much more than that that she is rather difficult to describe. She has poise, charm, sweetness, and wholesomeness. (It seems to me I've used all these adjectives on her before.) She always was one of the leading attractions in the George Beban pictures when she was numbered among the cast. Her work is unfailingly sincere and in good taste.

James Kirkwood, who used to content himself with directing, makes a stalwart, earnest, and magnetic lead. King Baggott, in another leading male rôle, is the same virile, unpretentious sort of fellow who made a hit when pictures were in their infancy.

Marcia Manon I should describe as a perfect villainess. She is slim, lithe, tigerish, and can roll a wicked eye with more celerity than any woman I know of on the screen.

Little Gertrude Claire as her big boy's adoring but peppy little mother, is as always perfectly charming.

"The Forbidden Thing" was one of the things that made last week a good week. Sometimes the weeks are so rotten—Lew Cody and everything.

News Notes.

The news may or may not be of interest to you that Eric von Stroheim is reported as recently married to Miss Valerie Garmonprez. Mr. von Stroheim used to take all those horrible German villain parts in the propaganda pictures. People have done everything but throw daggers at the screen when he has appeared.

All the toys that are being used by Viola Dana in a marionette show connected with her coming picture, "Sorrentina," have, it is said, been promised by her to one of the nurseries in Los Angeles when the picture is completed.

Zasu Pitts has, according to announcement received, just been signed by a newly formed company of San Francisco. It is called the Columbia Feature Film company. Tom Gallery, her husband, when he finishes working in a picture at present being produced by Marshall Neilan, will appear opposite Miss Pitts in "Cinders," which will be her first picture.

Report is that D. W. Griffith will soon produce a screen version of Bartley Campbell's "The White Slave," a melodrama.

Mary Pickford will make one more picture in Los Angeles before going to Holland.

Of course this has nothing to do with Mary's going to Holland, but Owen Moore, who has finished his work in "Lend Me Your Wife," has just gone on a hunting trip.

The former Mrs. Chaplin, who now wishes to be known as Mildred Harris, expects to go abroad next year with Mrs. Marshall Neilan.

MISS ALICE BRICKER with WILLIAM HODGE in "THE GUEST OF HONOR"—LA SALLE.

Ask Me! Ask Me!

M. I. B.: It was perfectly lovely of you to remember me. I can't tell you how much I appreciate your thought. You mustn't be so timid next time you're in Chicago. Call me up—even if it's just to call me down.

NOT MIN: I don't think that anybody has forgotten Marguerite Clark. She'd better get busy pretty soon, however, or there's a chance that such a horrible thing might happen.

MABEL B. M.: Why they don't star Herbert Rawlins more often is a mystery to me as well as to you. (Now that we've said our little say, maybe they will.) Betty Compson is still heading her own company.

W. S.: The same right back at you, W. S. I knew I had that name spelled wrong!

JAY DEE SEE: You haven't a bit of patience, have you? If you'll only give me time I'll try to comply with your request.

G. E. N.: Glad to have gotten your votes. They were counted. Go ahead and disagree with us any time you want to. As long as we all keep the corners of our mouths turned up while we're disagreeing, nobody should worry.

STAND PATTER: You go right along and boost William S. Hart. I haven't an objection in the world—and I like him, too. I guess I can change my mind if I want to. You have the same privilege.

FAN: If you're feeling that tired, one suggests a nap. Your being tired didn't interfere with your writing a long letter, though, did it. Come again! Our time is all your own.

H. B. S.: All right! All right!

PATSY: Having one's tonsils out seems to be a favorite indoor sport these days. Dear, dear, how times do change. It used to be one's appendix that was yanked out as a sure cause of all evils.

The Theaters

ing massive preparations for a spectacular melodramatic production at the Century theater, to follow "Mecca" during the week of Jan. 24. The play will be "In the Night Watch," which, it will be remembered, was acquired by the Shuberts after the London production a season or more ago. The play is an adaptation from the French by Michael Morton. The present cast, which is still subject to revision, includes Robert Warwick, Tyrone Power, Edmund Lowe, Laura Hope Crews, and probably Margaret Illington.

A play entitled "The Bird's Nest" has been placed somewhat silently in rehearsal by Fred C. Whitney. The cast includes Julia Dean, Orrin Johnson, Jessie Busley, and Kenneth Hill.

"Ruddigore" has been revived in Glasgow by D'Oyly Carte's company and will probably be heard in London also. It had not been played in England for thirty-three years.

"The Dragon," the new piece at the Aldwych in London, is a play about opium and the villainous chink. The Morning Post dismisses it somewhat abruptly with the statement that it "contains the germ of a music hall sketch."

Elsie Janis is now appearing in London in what she calls a "Revusicomedy," a "combination word coined by herself," says the Daily Telegraph, "made up of three letters from 'revue,' four from 'music,' and five from 'comedy.'"

"Chu Chin Chow" will reach its 2,000th London performance on Dec. 29, and is still strong enough to warrant daily matinées during Christmas week.

Concerning Fourth Week of Opera; Important Items

By Ruth Miller.

TWO revivals of master operas, the introduction of a new and fascinating "Tosca" and the world premiere of "Edipo Re," were listed among lyric valuables in the wealth of our fourth week of opera.

"Edipo Re" was the operatic swan song of Ruggiero Leoncavallo. This sixty minutes of concentrated tragedy carried out the traditional pathos usually signified by that veteran metaphor, for Leoncavallo, known almost exclusively as the composer of that operatic jewel, "Pagliacci," sang very sweetly before he died.

It is true that Leoncavallo composed other operas; operas that slipped out of sight in the musical whirlpool, sucked under by the inexorable undercurrent of public indifference and forgetfulness. Occasionally some misguided zealot fishes one of them out.

Geraldine Farrar rescued one of the submerged last season by an effective disrobing act. And "Zaza," had a popular run in New York after her bit of audacious showmanship made the first pages of practically all our best papers.

But all this spurious enthusiasm could not turn the dull dross of Leoncavallo's banal, monotonous and boresome score into gleaming operatic gold. Then, in addition to the tawdry music, the play from which the material for the "Zaza" libretto was drawn had made many a hardened dramatic critic weep at its maudlin sentimentalities.

This opera's chief virtue lies in the fact that it furnishes the star with one or two excellent opportunities for a display of feminine hysterics and the unrestrained outbursts of temper common to the successful cocotte.

Last summer at Ravinia Florence Easton was heard in the title role, and gave an admirable performance. "Zaza" has not been done by the Chicago Opera association for five years, but according to the printed announcement at hand it is being revived Tuesday night as a vehicle for the debut of Mme. Walska, Polish soprano.

Tuesday evening "Edipo Re," last operatic attempt of Leoncavallo, was given for the first time with Titta Ruffo in the leading role. The story is that of Sophocles' master tragedy skeletonized. This drama of ancient Greece is woven about the illfated son of the Theban king, Laius, who had had his feet pinned together with a spike of bronze by the order of his father, and at the age of three days been cast forth upon Mount Kithairon to perish. And because of the wounds in his feet from the spike's piercing he had been called Oedipus (Edipo) or the "Swollen footed."

Leoncavallo adapted his own libretto. A work that consisted chiefly in making an Italian translation and eliminating from the original all the philosophical comment of the conventional Greek chorus, including that quaint custom of the use of the first person in its dialogue with the principals.

He has made this essence of Grecian horror fit into an hour's time and even in its summarized form it retains its overwhelming intensity, its drama.

It is a magnificent development of a master theme dealing with stark tragedy whipped along by a relentless fate.

Having completed his libretto, he began the musical setting. It is a foregone conclusion that in this latter he did not stir the philosophical depths of Sophocles' masterpiece. Probably no operatic version of this gloomy drama ever could. Nor did the completed score meet the inspirational splendor of that matchless interweaving of uncompromising reality with frivolous simulation, his "Pagliacci."

It is not music that tears at the nerves, throbs like a living wound. But it has plenty of pleasant melody of a rather popular kind. Orchestrally it does not surge to a tense climax only to lull ominously immediately thereafter as it follows the rise and fall of the dramatic action as does, for example, the symphonic accompaniment of Puccini's "Tosca."

It mutters and threatens rather. But it does contain two definite and unforgettable musical climaxes.

The one which blazes forth when the truth of their unholy situation is forced upon Edipo and his queen, and they flee shrieking, has already been reviewed in these columns. Its effect is gained by a canny combination of trite orchestral tricks.

The other, not so long or completely built, occurs earlier in the action, when the blind prophet accuses Edipo of patricide. The first half of the score is devoted to a superabundance of dreary recitative that to those who have not studied the libretto is more or less meaningless.

Another item that had marked influence on the musical workmanship of this opera was the fact that Leoncavallo wrote "Edipo Re" for his friend, Titta Ruffo, and, bearing his great vocal gift in mind, made it as difficult as possible.

Last Tuesday Titta Ruffo met its demands as nonchalantly as though they were a beginner's daily vocal exercises. A remarkable singing actor, this Titta Ruffo. He belongs frankly to the old Italian school of acting. He beats his chest and tears his hair; he slays the atmosphere, his arms like restless windmills; he throws himself about; he stalks and storms; he falls back suddenly, gurgles, gasps, and groans, but—and herein lies the overwhelming genius of the man—it never occurs to his absorbed spectators that his wide flung gestures are ludicrous.

And they are not. For when Ruffo indulges in grotesque pantomime that in another lesser man would be clowning, he manages to be impressiveness itself.

Although critical prophecy is a treacherous business, anyone can risk the statement concerning "Edipo Re" that whether or not its intrinsic lyric value is enough to make it weather the operatic storms of fifty years from now, as long as it has Titta Ruffo in its title rôle it will be a cherished item in the Chicago company's répertoire.

Of the two revivals of the week "Falstaff" had far the happier performance. As a whole it had the roguish spontaneity, the spirited mischievousness that covered successfully any chance operatic mishaps.

But Sunday's "Romeo and Juliet" was a stodgy, dull affair. The glowing spirit was lacking. One scowled at it and muttered: "Now, what's the matter with the thing?"

It was neither extremely good or bad, nor was it entirely mediocre. Technically, certain parts were excellent. But by the time one had developed a decided peeve at the unevenness of the performance one came to the conclusion that what it needed was more adequate rehearsing and a little more zeal and love for it on the part of its interpreters.

The fourth item in our week of mixed operatic blessings was Yvonne Gall's Tosca. On the credit side of the ledger goes this cannily conceived and conscientiously worked out interpretation with its amazing effectiveness and artistry.

Recall the moment when she recoiled with all the superstition of her class and religion from the dead Scarpia; that second's sickened hesitancy before she mustered up courage to tear the precious passport from his clenched and lifeless hand. Again, when she placed the candles at his head, she did that bit of business with averted face and a quiver of shrinking.

Then in the torture scene she did not forget, as do the majority of prima donnas, that in the adjoining room the iron bands were being clamped tighter and tighter on her lover's temples. The instant Caverdossi was led out of her sight into the torture chamber she did not settle herself down complacently to the practical business of beautiful and flawless singing. Instead she kept up the tense illusion of being conscious of his every suffering, her nerves throbbing and tortured with his.

Details. Unnoticed trifles. But great art is little else but a smooth texture close woven of a myriad of such filmy threads.

The Music Calendar

Today at 3—Campanini's memorial concert, free to opera subscribers and patrons. The program includes Rossini's "Inflammatus," sung by Rosa Raisa; Franck's "Fourth Beatitude," sung by Forrest Lamont and Hector Dufranne; and a seventeenth century Italian air sung by Tito Schipa.

Today at 3:30—In Orchestra hall Josef Rosenblatt, the cantor, will be heard in song recital under the direction of Wessels & Voegeli. His program includes Schubert's "Der Doppelganger," Beethoven's "The Worship of God," the aria "La Fleur que tu m'avais donnée," from Bizet's "Carmen"; Valverde's "Clavellitos," Golub's "Wiegenlied," two folk songs, "Vieni sul mar" and "Duleiniska," and the following from the pen of Mr. Rosenblatt: Yishtabach, Shomer Froel, Achenu, and Av Horschmin.

Today at 3:30—Marie Meyer Ten Broecke, pianist, and Otto Meyer, violinist, will be heard in joint recital at Kimball hall.

Today at 3:30—Victor Young will be heard in violin recital at the Studebaker theater.

Tomorrow at 8—"La Traviata," with Galli-Curci, Tito Schipa, and Carlo Galeffi in the leading rôles. Alexander Smallens will conduct.

Monday at 8—In Orchestra hall the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Frederick Stock, conductor, will be heard in the fifth of its series of popular concerts. The program includes the march from Wagners' "Tannhäuser," the larghetto from Beethovens' Symphony No. 2, "Titl's Serenade," for flute and horn, by Messrs. Quensel and de Maré; Massenet's "Scenes Neapolitan," Goldmark's "Sakuntala" overture, Glazounow's duo for violin and violoncello, to be played by Messrs. Weisbach and Malkin; Keller's "Waltz Caprice," and the overture to "Tannhäuser."

Tuesday, at 8—"Zaza," with Ganna Walska (debut) and Edward Johnson and Titta Ruffo in the leading rôles.

Wednesday at 8—"Romeo and Juliet," with Galli-Curci, Maxwell, Hislop, Defere, Dufranne, Cotreuil, and Nicolay in the cast. Henri Morin will conduct.

Thursday at 8—"L'Elisir d'Amore," with Alexander Bonci, Florence Macbeth, Philene Falco, Giacomo Rimini, and Vittorio Trevisan. Marinuzzi will conduct.

Thursday at 8:15—In Orchestra hall, the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Frederick Stock conductor, will give the evening concert of its regular subscription series, the change this week being made from Saturday to Thursday because of Christmas falling on Saturday this year. The program arranged by Director Stock provides for the appearance of Cyril Scott as piano soloist in a performance of his own "Concerto for Pianoforte in C Major," and as guest conductor for the performance of his two passacaglias. Mr. Stock has also placed upon the program and will conduct Dvorak's overture, "Othello," and Alfven's symphony No. 3 in E Major.

Friday at 2:15—In Orchestra hall, the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Frederick Stock conductor, will be heard in its regular weekly concert, the program being the same as that announced for Thursday evening.

Friday at 8—"Lohengrin." This Wagnerian revival will be sung in English, and the principal rôles are assigned to Rosa Raisa, Cyrena Van Gordon, Edward Johnson, and Edouard Cotreuil. Marinuzzi will conduct.

Saturday at 2—"Edipo Re," with Titta Ruffo in the title rôle. Following the Sophocles tragedy the corps de ballet will be seen in "A Dance Poem," a ballet in one act given to the unfinished symphony of Schubert, eight divertissements, and the "Dance of the Hours," from "La Gioconda."

Saturday at 8—"The Barber of Seville," with Florence Macbeth, Tito Schipa, Rimini, Trevisan, and Lazzari. Marinuzzi conducting.

New York Music Letter

By James Whittaker.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.] — Music hath no charms to soothe the civilized breast. Mrs. Oscar Hammerstein, widow of the impresario, lately announced a season of German opera in German. She proclaimed that she was impelled to that announcement by two ideas. One was to give German opera and the other "to cement international concord."

Several American Legion posts in New York answered Mrs. Hammerstein's valiant statement with one of their own. They will be present, they say, on Christmas day, when the Hammerstein venture opens at the Manhattan Opera house, and throw the bricks of international concord faster than Mrs. Hammerstein can cement them.

Their plans are very rough. They include the buying out of the house on the first and second nights of the season and the distribution of the tickets among husky and right thinking veterans of the war. The rest is left to what is left of the war-time ingenuity and ferocity of the legionnaires' imaginations.

The Metropolitan Opera company played a safer game. They revived "Tristan and Isolde," "Parsifal," and Carl Maria von Weber's "Oberon," but sang the texts in English. The words "In English" were prominent in the posters. In that way they dodged trouble with the brave legionnaires. One wonders that they had none with the Sinn Feiners.

The Metropolitan, eternal enemy of the Manhattan, is chuckling over Mrs. Hammerstein's troubles. These two operatic factions enjoy one another's troubles better than they enjoy their music. In announcing her German season, Mrs. Hammerstein did not forget to slap at the Metropolitan. She called their Englished Wagner a "cowardly half-measure." Obviously none of her cement is to be wasted on domestic concord.

The Chicago Opera company has always had a place in this old row between Metropolitan and Manhattan. In Chicago the Chicago Opera company is considered a Chicago product. In New York it is considered a Hammerstein product.

During his lifetime Campanini always warmed a remnant of the old Hammerstein hatred of the Metropolitan in his breast. I think that nothing pleased him so much as, when he led his opera army to New York each year, to read those of the New York newspaper notices which praised him at the expense of the Metropolitan. This year Mrs. Hammerstein has arranged for the Chicago company season in her opera house.

"It will be like the old times—Hammerstein versus Gatti-Casazza," say the old opera fans. And their nostrils dilate with a fore-whiff of approaching rumpus. Mrs. Hammerstein makes no secret of her elation. She told me:

"The Chicago company season will bring all the old crowd back into my opera house. All the élite will turn out—and compare. And I hope that they will keep the habit of coming to the Manhattan."

She plans nothing less than the resumption of the famous old operatic war that raged through the penultimate decade of Hammerstein's troubled life and left him, licked, to eat out his heart in inactivity during the ultimate decade. He died two months before the end of that ten years. Up to the last he was happily busy with plans to get Mary Garden and a dozen of his old stars together and declare a renewal of hostilities.

His widow carries on. In her hart of hearts she cares nothing for German opera as such. She merely wants something with which to start her opera going, and the Metropolitan, spreading all over the opera world, has absorbed nearly everything else. Mrs. Hammerstein has had to pick scraps outside the banquet hall. German opera is one of them. If that falls, she will try to season some other scrap.

She has her eye on what was once the Imperial Russian opera. They are now in South America. She is arranging with them to come to the Manhattan next winter.

There is one other possible source of coming discord in New York opera. I have said that the widow Hammerstein carries on for her dead lord. Within her own faction she has a dozen bitter enemies, who refuse to shout "The King is dead. Long live the Queen."

For them—faithful old Saint Bernards, refusing to come away from the grave of their master—this woman is a stranger, and they growl dismally when she tries to scratch them behind the ears. They are old stage managers and seconds in command of the glorious Hammerstein days.

There were family rows during Hammerstein's last days. The old man always claimed that his son Arthur had turned against him when the Metropolitan finally forced his retirement. The Saint Bernards growl that Mrs. Hammerstein did likewise. In fact, they do nothing but growl.

When, and if, Mrs. Hammerstein resuscitates the Manhattan, the Saint Bernards will be in the lobby growling Altogether, the lobby may have a louder music than the house. With legionnaires throwing bricks, faithful Metropolitanites throwing aspersions, and the Saint Bernards growling, there will be enough Stravinsky outside the doors to drown the Wagner inside.

Orchestras are descending on New York from every point of the compass. On one day the President Wilson from Genoa steamed into port with Arturo Toscanini and ninety-eight men composing his La Scala band on board, Nikolai Sokoloff of the Cleveland orchestra marched out of the Pennsylvania station, and Henry Voegeli car-

PLAYER PIANO
is an expression player. Even the lowest priced Apollo will give expression automatically, and the higher grades offer an actual reproduction of the artist's performance.
With an Apollo you can transpose the music to any desired key—and when you are through playing the roll rewinds without using the pedals.
There are several types of Apollos to meet varying requirements, including both uprights and grands. See all other players first—then hear the Apolio.
Select your Christmas Apollo now while stocks are complete. Two years in which to pay for any piano.
Fourteen leading makes of players, grands and uprights—all sold under our "one price—no commission" plan.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Holiday Crowds Throng Shops in Search of Gifts

By Mme. X.

TEMPUS fugit! It is such a little while since last Christmas that the average, plodding mortal refuses to believe that another one is upon us. Where is that excellent society, "the spugs" (the society to prevent useless giving)? To judge from downtown crowds that for weeks past have been swarming the shops, the spug is as extinct as the dodo.

The giftseekers have not been besieging the counters where warm underwear or stout shoes or other useful and homely things can be bought. But where the flimsy and evanscent are displayed there the throng is thickest.

Of course, the only element that counts at this season is that represented by the youth of the present generation, the boys and girls ranging from infancy to college lads and lassies. To all of these, even to that aged mortal, the college senior, Christmas still has a glamor all its own. The self-absorption of the young is sometimes exhausting to the folk ahead of them in the procession.

Glad to Have Them Go.

The remark of a parent, a philosopher I am rather fond of quoting, to a schoolgirl friend of his daughter's, is illustrative of this state of mind.

He was speeding his daughter on her way to boarding school last autumn and failed to sympathize with a weeping mother, whose offspring was also departing for the educational mill. In fact, he was saying that it was the best thing that could happen to the parents to have the young go away for their schooling.

Piqued, a departing maiden asked: "Why are you glad to have us go? Don't you like young people?"

"Indeed, I like you, and yet I am glad to have you depart," was his reply. "You sap my vitality without intriguing my mentality."

Mystified, she went her way.

In the Gay Whirl.

And now all that youth, the children of the well-to-do, are swarming back for the health destroying festivities with which it is our benighted American custom to celebrate the birth of the Christ child, the bringer of light and peace.

Many a parent only sees the son or daughter, at home for the holidays, when chance brings them face to face on the family front steps as the young person is en route for some entertainment. In fact, to see your father and mother more often is a confession of failure not to be admitted or endured by the ambitious you person. Masquerades, dinner dances, tea dances, luncheons, and receptions all will conspire to separate the young person from family and home.

Among the parties being arranged for this contingent is the masquerade which Mr. and Mrs. Heyliger De Windt are giving for their daughter at the Indian Hill club on Dec. 22. On the same evening Mrs. George Dixon is giving a dance for her daughter, Marion. The following night Mrs. Albert Sprague and Mrs. Donald Wegg will entertain at the Casino for Albert Sprague III. and Talbot Wegg.

Many Christmas Festivities.

On Dec. 23 Mrs. Edward Heissler and Mrs. William H. Emery have invitations out for a tea dance at the Woman's Athletic club for Miss Helen Heissler, Miss Anna Emery, and Miss Mariana Beckwith.

At the Indian Hill club on the Dec. 24 Mrs. Robert Cluett will be hostess at dance for her granddaughters, Miss Emily Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic H. Scott, and Miss Barbara Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Scott. On the Monday after Christmas Mr. and Mrs. James O. Heyworth and Mr. and Mrs. D. Mark Cummings give a luncheon and dance for Miss Frances Heyworth and Dexter Cummings. That same night Mr. and Mrs. C. Bai Lihme will entertain at a supper dance at the Blackstone for their daughters, the Misses Olga and Anita. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker give a dinner preceding this dance for their son and daughter, Arthur Jr. and Miss Mary Meeker.

That day is also the date for a tea dance at the opera club which Mrs. Louis M. Stumer is giving for her daughters, the Misses Lois and Aline Stumer. As this is not the half of the affairs planned, the holidays promise to be more than usually happy and unhealthy. Would the opposite—healthy and unhappy—be the only alternative?

Helping Starving Children.

In the background of all our festivities sits a grizzly specter. There is no one so callous—and there has been much to make us callous these last six years—there is no one so callous, I repeat, as to be able, with equanimity, to face the undisputed fact that, without our aid, millions of little children will starve before the next harvest in middle and eastern Europe. The sufferings of grown men and women may leave some of us apathetic, but when it comes to the question of the succor of little children, who can be indifferent or turn the other way?

The European Relief council, of which Herbert Hoover is chairman, is organizing a nation-wide appeal through every available agency to make our Christmas one of which we can be justly proud, one which will be remembered in the annals of faraway peoples for generations to come, so that the name America will always have a significance not accorded to any other people or nation.

What a subtle poetry there is in the form of the appeal made to us of the prosperous, full-stockinged Christmas —"Have you an invisible guest?" What Christmas party is complete without one?

Who is this invisible guest? you ask. It is a little child, whom you may never see, but whose life is in your hands, nevertheless. For ten dollars that child may be fed until the next harvest. Without that ten dollars it will perish as surely as if its frail body were smothered before your eyes.

America Must Respond.

Three and one-half millions young lives are waiting their life and death sentences from us Americans. We shall not fail them. We may not be willing to tie ourselves up in the political destinies of Europe, but we admit our responsibilities in that greater confederation, the universal brotherhood of man.

And I think that the fact that they are working under Herbert Hoover's direction gives to each worker a special sense of satisfaction. Out of the horror, welter and turmoil of the last six years rise two figures: Cardinal Mercier of Belgium, and Herbert Hoover of America.

Augustus A. Carpenter is head of our local committee. Mrs. Arthur Ryerson is vice chairman. Gen. Charles G. Dawes is treasurer, Mrs. Russell Tyson is secretary, while among the active workers on the Committee of Seventy are Julius Rosenwald, Mrs. Langworthy, and Mrs. James W. Morrisson. An honorary committee consists of Gov. Lowden, Archbishop Mundelein, Bishop Anderson, the Rev. Timothy S. Stone, and Mayor and Mrs. William Hale Thompson. Cöperating with the Hoover committee are the American Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Knights of Columbus, the Quakers, and the American Relief administration. On this mission Catholic and Protestant, Jew and Gentile, are working side by side and shoulder to shoulder.

Leaving for Warmer Spots.

The holiday season is going to be a strain on even the strongest of us. Late hours, too much food, and—well, in olden times we should have said drink—and no let up are going to test the strength of even old timers. No wonder that those fortunate enough to have places of refuge in such inviting localities as southern California and Florida are preparing to go to them earlier than usual.

Robert G. McGann went to Santa Barbara more than a week ago. His wife and daughter are following him early in January. The Edward L. Ryersons have already taken their train accommodations for later in the same month.

Mrs. William Prescott Hunt and her sister, Miss Marie J. Rozet, are betaking themselves to Florida by mid January. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brewster, and Mrs. C. M. Ely are sailing for France on the Imperator on Jan. 20.

Headed in quite another direction are Mr. and Mrs. Albert M. Day and their son-in-law, daughter, and grand daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Francis C. Farwell, and Miss Elizabeth Farwell, who are embarking in a few weeks for the Panama Canal, Jamaica and the West Indies, to be gone four months.

Last Tuesday, early harbingers of the winter's migratory folk, James Deering set forth with a house party for his famous Italian palace just outside of Miami, Fla. The Charles Deering house in that same region will be occupied by his daughters, Mrs. Chauncey McCormick and Mrs. Richard Ely Danielson and their families. The Chauncey McCormicks have bought the Wolff house near Wheaton, which was built by the late Frank Gorton twenty years or so ago, a charming place with a stately Georgian mansion set in fields where somnolent sheep roam and browse with many a plaintive bleat.

Delights at Coliseum.

The spirit of Christmas, to return for a moment to the season, is to be found in its finest distilled essence at the Coliseum these days. Every street car that arrives in front of that ancient people's palace disgorges hordes and hordes of children, coming from all parts of the city. It is a sight to tempt the Pied Piper of Hamlin. Chattering, laughing, jumping, running, they stream across the street and into the building.

Nor are they disappointed when they get inside, for there is staged there now a show to delight the heart of the most blasé child, if there be such an unnatural product as a blasé youngster. At the foot of a giant and glittering evergreen tree the smartest, cheeriest little circus that ever delighted the heart of the child daily gives several performances.

Monkeys, dogs, bears, horses, clowns, trapeze performers, and all the talent and wit of the best circuses are to be enjoyed there by the youthful crowds that daily fill the place even to the topmost galleries. Besides this show they can ride on a Ferris wheel, crack the most galleries. Besides viewing this show they can ride on a Ferris wheel, crack the most elaborate whip, whizz around on the liveliest merry go round, and buy popcorn and spun sugar fluffs, and in the end go home with a present given them by a Santa Claus who comes out of a veritable chimney.

If, when the affair ends next Thursday evening, there is a child in Chicago who has wanted and not been able to see the great show, Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman and the other promoters will be chagrined. Their hope is to make the affair an annual civic event for the children of the city.

Each day this last week children from some one of the many enterprises founded for children have visited the place. Yesterday the youngsters from the Red, White, and Blue club, whose club is to be aided during the coming year by the money raised by this festival, came in a gay, dancing crowd. Another afternoon Miss Rebecca Gallery brought a lively band of young hopefuls from Casa Maria on West Oak street, a melting pot she has been running for some years, transmuting small Italians and Poles into good Americans.

Chicago Historical Society Tea.

Speaking of good Americans, the Chicago Historical society is giving an original tea party tomorrow afternoon in its rooms on North Dearborn avenue. It will entertain the members of the women's board of the Gunther collection, who are invited to meet there Frank McGlynn of the Abraham Lincoln play, and the company will sit on chairs which were in the White House during Lincoln's administration and sip tea from cups in use there at that same period. It will be served from a table belonging once to Jefferson Davis.

Mr. McGlynn will be photographed wearing Lincoln's hat and shawl, carrying his celebrated umbrella, and sitting in the pew he occupied in the church he attended when at Springfield, Ill.

Mrs. G. A. Carpenter is chairman of this committee, which has taken an active part in helping raise some of the money needed to pay for the Gunther collection.

For International Good-Will.

In view of the fact that there is some criticism of the attempt to collect money here for a Keats memorial to be established in London, it is to be remembered that the English have, since the war, bought and set aside the old home of George Washington's family, Sulgrave Manor, where his father was born, to be preserved as a memorial of our common ancestry. They have also set up in Parliament square opposite Westminster Abbey a replica of the beautiful St. Gaudens statue of Abraham Lincoln which stands in our own Lincoln park. In his dedicatory speech Lloyd George said: "Of such dust are we English made."

While it is impossible to establish a permanent good understanding between our two nations only by such means, each expression in such tangible form is a distinct aid to such understanding. The great Bartholdi statue, "Liberty Enlightening the World," which greets every arrival in New York harbor, is in itself almost sufficient to make unthinkable a war between the two republics.

So every attempt to express international good-will has merit, and should find support from those who have both money and a farsighted understanding. Of course, if one have not the former the latter must find satisfaction in some less solid and more intangible form.

Handiwork of the Blind.

There are a few more days for those interested in that most touching of all manifestations of courage and perseverance, the handiwork of the blind, to visit and inspect the exhibition and sale of the fabrics and textiles made by the blind weavers in the Chicago Lighthouse at 3323 West Twenty-second street, an exhibit now to be seen at the Artists' guild on the fifth floor of the Fine Arts building.

Sightless men and women have woven articles of many colors, and now offer them for sale. Each pattern has had to be translated into braille, and the designs are exquisite and artistic.

Mrs. Alfred T. Martin is president of the Chicago Lighthouse, and among the officers and directors are: Mmes. Knowlton L. Ames, John Glass, George S. Haskell, William L. Hodgkins, William S. Monroe, Henry C. Olcott, Sidney Worthy, James W. Thorne, and the Misses Louise Hessert, Edith Ware and Louise Voltz.

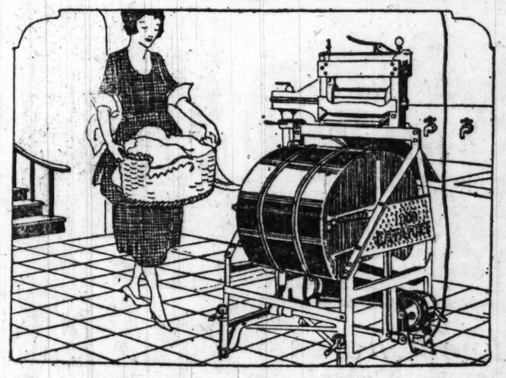
A Reminder of Your Thoughtfulness 52 Weeks a Year



That is what you give, when you give a 1900 Cataract Electric Clothes Washer. It is a gift that will carry its message of thoughtfulness even for years to come. It is a gift that will relieve her of the week's most tedious task —that of washing clothes.

A woman's greatest source of pride is her clothes. She is proud to be the first one in the neighborhood to have her clothes upon the line. She is proud of their snowy whiteness, but do you realize what the satisfaction of this pride means, if her washing is done by the old fashioned rub-board method? It means countless hours of toil, it means red hands and face, and the early loss of her youth. When it lies within your power to dispel all these wash day bugbears for a small amount of money, don't you feel that

The 1900 Cataract Electric Clothes Washer Is the Ideal Christmas Gift

In mechanism and in principle, the 1900 CATARACT is the world's best washing machine. The FAIR selected it after months of investigation which covered practically every machine manufactured. One of the things which influenced our choice is the fact that there are over 25,000 in use in the City of Chicago alone. Among this army of users we do not know of a single one who is dissatisfied. 1900 CATARACT WASHERS have been Chicago's standard for 22 years.

No Machinery Within Tub

The 1900 CATARACT does not employ cups, shafts or cylinders in its washing process, its glistening interior is entirely free from machinery, there is nothing that can possibly wear or tear your most delicate garments, and yet this wonder-working machine will cleanse your heaviest blankets with equal facility.

Only Five Dollars Required

Upon the payment of $5.00 we will deliver this washer to your home. You may pay the balance monthly in 1921. By this arrangement you are enabled with a small initial outlay to give a gift that will be appreciated. We would like to have you thoroughly examine the 1900 CATARACT ELECTRIC WASHER. For your convenience we have arranged a demonstration upon our Sixth Floor and also at each of the neighborhood stores listed below:

Christmas Parties Many and Gay at Settlement Houses

PROBABLY the busiest persons in the city during holiday week will be the children who pass their play hours at the various settlement houses in the city. Ordinarily the objects of sympathy because of their crowded living conditions and lack of space for recreation, these girls and boys and their parents have ahead of them a happy, busy week, planned by the head residents, welfare workers, and women's clubs.

Not that this is just an annual celebration, because these workers cooperate all year to make conditions more pleasant for their charges; it is but a fitting close to twelve months of well planned, healthful, and educational days.

Fellowship house, at 831 West Thirty-third place, will be the scene of a number of gay parties, including several gatherings for both girls and boys, this being the first season that they have held their parties together. On Tuesday evening the big sisters and brothers will trim a tree which is sent over every Christmas from the Faulkner school, together with gifts and decorations.

On Wednesday Mrs. Elliott W. Davis, head resident, will give a luncheon for the friends and those interested in the settlement. That evening the various girls' and boys' clubs which meet during the year will "get together" for a candy pull, games, and an informal program.

A party for members of the sewing school will be given on Thursday afternoon, followed by an evening party for the little tots, which will include the appearance of Santa Claus with gifts for every one present. A party for little girls on Friday will conclude this week's festivities.

The real affair of the season will be given on Monday afternoon, when the 105 members of the Fellowship house Woman's club will give their annual party for the grandmothers, mothers, and small children. There will be rides in motor cars for those who desire to go, followed by coffee cake and a social hour for the elders and a frolic and simple refreshments for the little ones.

On Wednesday the nutrition class of children, which is conducted in connection with the Armour school, will have their party. Workers from the Elizabeth McCormick Memorial fund, who have assisted the class during the year, will be guests.

The first party of the week at Ellis Stokes house, 621 West Elm street, will be given for the kindergarten on Wednesday morning. Children in costume will decorate a tree in nature materials, and there will be special games and songs. That afternoon there will be a party for the larger girls and their mothers. On Christmas eve the mothers who work for the linen shop conducted in the Stevens building will be guests at a luncheon.

One of the brightest spots in the Ellis Stokes calendar is the annual arrival, early Christmas morning, of a large and shining tree, hanging with glittering balls and tinsel and with gifts to make little folks squeal with delight. Every year on Christmas eve members of the smart Casino club on the "gold coast" look forward to hanging a tree with all manner of pretty things, which are sent next morning to the house a few blocks west on "the sands."

Miss Mary McDowell and her assistant, Miss Emma Adams, will have a busy week at the University of Chicago settlement house at 4630 Gross avenue.

PRINCESS CANTACUZENE
PHOTO © MATZENE

The New America shop, which has been maintained for the last two years in the Stevens building, under the auspices of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has attracted the interest of Princess Cantacuzene, who returned to the east recently after a brief visit in Chicago.

The princess has consented to act as one of the board of directors of the shop, the other members including ten women from the foreign language division of the American Red Cross, as well as representatives of the D. A. R.

Handicraft of Russian refugees will be sent to the shop by Princess Cantacuzene within a short time. The shop is a clearing house for the work of foreign born women, and is to encourage them to carry on the wonderful lacemaking, weavings, and other crafts of the old world, and to find a market for them. Twenty-five nationalities contribute to the shop, thus enabling the workers to make practical use of their knowledge, and at the same time enabling us to make this heritage of their arts a part of our own.

The program will begin on Wednesday morning with a party for the kindergarten pupils, and will be followed by small gatherings every day until school begins again.

The annual afternoon celebration for the older people will be held on Monday, when the woman's club of the settlement will assist in presenting a program. Pretty tarlatan stockings, filled with useful gifts for the grandmothers and grandfathers, have been filled by students of the University High school. Small children who attend will be amused with games and music.

A young people's dance on Dec. 29 and the adult party on the 30th will conclude the holiday affairs, except for the small club meetings which the members themselves arrange, and all of which are looked forward to with great joy by these little folk, who must make the most of their opportunities for healthful play.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

The regular monthly business meeting of the Chicago Woman's club will be held on Wednesday at 2 p. m. In the morning at 10:30 the drama study class will meet to hear Mrs. James N. Crandall's paper on "The Drama of Adolescence."

On Tuesday from 4 until 6 p. m. the members of the Cordon club will give a reception for members of the Chicago College club, of which Miss Sarah B. Tunnicliff is president. Hostesses for the Friday afternoon tea will be Mrs. F. Bentley, Miss Charlotte H. Fose, Miss Mary Lewis, and Miss Susan Lewis. The club rooms will be closed all day Christmas day.

The Christmas celebration of the Chicago Culture club will be held tomorrow afternoon at the Hotel La Salle. A program of many surprises has been planned by the committee.

Mrs. Morris M. Townley and Mrs. Harold G. Sterling will give the members' program at the meeting of Le Cercle Francais on Tuesday. The professional program at 3 p. m. will include a lecture by M. Henri Morin of the Chicago Opera company.

Mrs. Harrison P. Young of 625 Cornelia avenue will be hostess for a meeting of the Kaskaskia chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, to be held on Tuesday afternoon. Prof. O. W. Junek will speak, and the officers of the New America shop will be guests.

There will be a meeting of the Jewish Consumptives' Relief society on Wednesday at 2 p. m. at Washington hall, State-Lake building. Rabbi Leon Fram will speak.

A demonstration on Christmas candies will be given by Miss Ruth Hagerty on Tuesday at 10:30 a. m. at the School of Domestic Arts and Science.

There will be a meeting of the board of managers of the Chicago Public School Art society on Friday at 10:30 a. m. at the Art institute.

A meeting of the Lloyd George chapter, Daughters of the British Empire, will be held on Tuesday at the Brownleigh club.

The Protestant Women's National association will hold an open meeting on Thursday at 2 p. m. at 19 West Adams street.

A bazaar and card party will be held tomorrow at the Somerset hotel for the benefit of the philanthropy fund of the South Carolina colony of the Illinois Colony club.

There will be a board meeting of the Andoka Philanthropic club on Tuesday at the residence of Mrs. J. K. Evans, 408 South Oakley avenue. Luncheon will be served and Christmas work will be done.

SOUTH SIDE CLUBS

The Civic Music Student orchestra is giving a concert this afternoon at 3 at the John Marshall High school under the auspices of the Chicago Woman's Aid. Horace Bridges will speak on "The Relation of Church Loyalties to Civic and National Loyalties" at the regular meeting of the Chicago Woman's Aid education department study class tomorrow at 10 a. m. Mrs. Carrie Hirschman Kohnstamm of New York will play at the midwinter social of the aid on Tuesday at 2 p. m. at Sinai temple. The Americanization committee of the Chicago Woman's Aid will hold its third Americanization luncheon on Thursday at 12 at the Covenant club. The symphony orchestra study class will meet Friday at 11 a. m. at the Sherwood School of Music.

A literary meeting of the Woodlawn Woman's club will be held on Tuesday morning, followed by the annual Christmas party and special program at 2 p. m. The club meets on Thursdays to sew for charities.

A children's program will feature the meeting of the Morgan Park Womag's club tomorrow.

Tomorrow morning at 11:30 the monthly meeting of the Howell Neighborhood house auxiliary will be held at the Neighborhood house.

The Mothers' Aid of the Chicago Lying-In Hospital and Dispensary will meet on Wednesday afternoon at Sinai center.

Tomorrow at 2 p. m. the Washington Park Woman's club will have the annual Christmas party and program.

There will be a meeting of the Chicago Lawn Woman's club on Tuesday at 2 p. m., followed by the children's Christmas party at 3 p. m.

Tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. the junior auxiliary of the Mother's Aid of the Chicago Lying-In Hospital and Dispensary will meet at Sinai center.

The South Side W. C. T. U. will present a portrait of Frances E. Willard to the Shakespeare school, Forty-sixth street and Greenwood avenue, on Friday afternoon.

NORTH SIDE CLUBS

The Marionette players will give the children's program tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the North End club.

A Christmas party for children of the members will be given on Thursday afternoon at the Edgewater Beach hotel by the North Shore Woman's club.

There will be a meeting of the Magazine Study club tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. at the residence of Mrs. William C. Schultze, 804 Leland avenue. Horace Bridges will speak.

The Mount Vernon Seminary association will assist in entertaining the children of the Northwestern clinic on Thursday and Friday evenings.

The Irving Park Woman's club will meet tomorrow at 2 p. m. with Mrs. Josephine Larson as speaker.

The members of the Albany Park Catholic Woman's club will give a Christmas party tomorrow afternoon for the children of Our Lady of Mercy school, 4424 North Troy street. Eight hundred children will attend and there will be a Christmas tree and gifts.

The Lake Shore Women's club will have its next meeting on Wednesday in the Sheridan room of the Edgewater Beach hotel. The hostesses on that day are Mrs. Frank J. Tritchler and Mrs. Charles F. Tritchler.

WEST SIDE CLUBS

A program of Christmas music will be given on Wednesday at the meeting of the Hull House Woman's club.

SUBURBAN CLUBS

Mrs. Jacob Bauer will speak at an open meeting of the Woman's Department club of Wheaton on Tuesday afternoon, giving her experiences at the international suffrage conference at Geneva, Switzerland, to which she was a delegate.

The music department of the Glen Ellyn Woman's club will present a cantata, "Bethlehem," by Paul Bliss, on Tuesday at the Methodist church.

The Safety Sign on glass-packed foods

When you buy foods in glass tumblers and jars, look for the above trade-mark on the Cap. It's your most dependable safety sign. It means that the packer has provided the most reliable seal possible to procure.

Glass, with this trade-marked Cap, is the best container. It leaves no opportunity for deterioration—all the original flavor and purity are retained.

When buying, be constantly on the lookout for this trade-mark. Accept no glass-packed foods without it.

We have prepared a fascinating booklet that tells you what you ought to know about this vital subject. We send it free. Ask for "The Story of Preserving."

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Music to Be Feature of Church Ceremonies on Christmas Day

By the Rev. Gardner Mac Whorter

CHRISTMAS IN THE OLDEN TIME.

Heap on more wood—the wind is chill;
But let it whistle as it will,
We'll keep our Christmas merry still.
Each age has deemed the new-born year
The fittest time for festal cheer;
And well our Christian sires of old
Loved when the year its course had rolled
And brought blithe Christmas back again
With all its hospitable train.

Domestic and religious rite
Gave honor to the holy night
On Christmas eve the bells were rung;
On Christmas eve the mass was sung;
That only night, in all the year,
Saw the stoled priest the chalice rear.
—Sir Walter Scott.

CHRISTMAS, the great Christian festival commemorating the birth of Jesus Christ, the son of God, will be celebrated in all Christian churches of Chicago and suburbs with special services Saturday morning and the Sunday following.

In Roman Catholic and Episcopal churches there will be early celebrations of the holy communion, some beginning at 11:30 p. m., Christmas eve, commonly called "midnight mass," preceded by the singing of Christmas carols, while other masses follow at 3, 4, and 5 o'clock on Christmas morning, culminating in a musical high mass or high choral celebration at 11 a. m.

In Protestant churches there will be special music and sermons by the pastors at 11 a. m. and in most cases special Christmas music will be repeated at the same hour Sunday.

In many churches the choirs will be assisted by quartets of stringed instruments or violin and cello soloists, and in every church a special effort is being made to offer the best service of worship and praise that it is capable of offering, and the plea of each pastor and priest is that the religious significance of Christmas day may not be forgotten in the midst of domestic joy. Go to church on Christmas morn, "For unto us this day a Savior is born."

Christmas music in the Roman Catholic churches of the archdiocese of Chicago is always a feature of the earliest and latest masses that day. At the Holy Name cathedral Gounod's mass will be sung at 4 and 11 a. m. by the Quigley seminary and the cathedral choirs; at St. Patrick's church, the "Missa Solemnis" of Browne will be sung at 3:30 a. m. and the "Mass in G" of Cesar Franck at 10:45 a. m.; at St. Malachy's Weber's mass in G will be sung at 11:15 a. m.; and at 5 and 11 a. m. Gounod's "Messe Solonelle" will be sung at St. Vincent's church; Millards mass in G will be sung at Resurrection church at solemn high mass, and Gounod's "St Cecilia's Mass" will be sung at St. Ita's church at 5 and 11 a. m.

The Rt. Rev. C. P. Anderson, D. D., LL. D., bishop of the Episcopal church in the diocese of Chicago, will celebrate the holy communion and preach the Christmas sermon in the Cathedral SS. Peter and Paul, West Washington boulevard and Peoria street, on Christmas morning at 11 o'clock.

Bishop Anderson will deliver the Christmas message to the Sunday Evening club next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. For many years the bishop has been the Christmas preacher at the Sunday Evening club, and it is his custom to celebrate and preach in the cathedral every Christmas and Easter.

Bishop Anderson was consecrated bishop coadjutor to the late Bishop McLaren twenty years ago, and succeeded to the diocesan bishopric five years later. He is prominent in the national councils of the Episcopal church, and as chairman of the commission on faith and order, has visited the heads of the eastern and western Catholic churches during the years since the war, and has attended conferences with the Protestant leaders of America in the interests of church unity, looking toward a world conference on unity.

Bishop Joseph C. Hartzell, one of the most picturesque figures of the Methodist church and for nearly twenty years a missionary in Africa, will speak in the Park Avenue M. E. church at 11 o'clock this morning. The present congregation of the Park Avenue church is a colored one of over 3,000, but in former days it was one of the well known white congregations of the south side. Bishop Hartzell's son, the Rev. Morton Hartzell, now deceased, was the pastor, and in his memory a social center will be dedicated this morning by his father. Dr. Cline, a former member of the Park Avenue church, has given the property for the Morton Hartzell Memorial Social center.

Christmas festival music by the united choirs of the New First Congregational church, Ashland and Washington boulevards, the Rev. Dr. Gilbert Wilson, minister, includes "The Messiah" of Handel, to be sung Tuesday evening, and a Christmas pageant on Thursday and next Sunday evenings, under the direction of George Lee Tinney and Mrs. Frances Somerville.

Advance notice is given of a course of lectures on "Child Problems" to be given on Tuesday afternoons during January at 2:15 in the clubrooms of the Art institute, by Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Mrs. Ira Couch Wood, and Dr. Caroline Hedger. Every one interested in children—mothers, Sunday school teachers, social service workers—is invited to attend these lectures, to be given under the auspices of the social service department of the Episcopal Church Service league, of which Mrs. G. L. Pollock is chairman.

Dr. Theodore C. Soares, head of the department of religious education of the University of Chicago, will speak on "In the Spirit of Comradeship" at the Unitarian Laymen's league public meeting in Kimball hall this evening at 7:45 o'clock. The president of the league, Charles H. Strong of New York, will preside.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

A FEW CHRISTMAS GREETINGS.

(To be clipped, pasted on cards, signed, and mailed at your own risk.)

TO MY DOCTOR.

You'd slice my giblet, I guess,
And amputate my gizzard,
Revise and annotate me, yes,
From alpha down to izzard;
You'd dearly love to carve and lance
My latlice passing well—
Some day, perhaps, you'll get the chance—
You will like—Merry Christmas.

TO ME.

(To be filled out and mailed to me by any of my readers—if there are any.)

_____ day _____ gay _____ cheer _____ year
_____ Africa
_____ (yes, yes, go on.)

TO MY LAWYER—WITH CHRISTMAS GEETINGS.

I wish you a flock of retainers,
And clutters of succulent fees,
May your juries be crazy, your judges be aisy,
And your conscience (applause) be at ease;
And if you should go where the brimstone is blue
I wish for a habeas corpus for you.

GREETINGS OF THE SEASON—TO MY LANDLORD.

On Christmas day, with its memories old,
May you sit in a draft and catch a cold.
And my New Year wish is deep and strong:
I wish you hangnails all year long.

How One Bright Girl Increased Her Salary

When Miss Boyd graduated from High School she "took the first thing that came along."

But now she was beginning to find herself and to look ahead. She knew there wasn't much future in the work she was doing. And so many untrained girls were losing their positions!

It occurred to her that what she needed was a profession—a line of work requiring expert knowledge and therefore something safe even in bad times.

One day she mentioned her ambition to one of the girls who came to see her quite often.

"Why don't you take up filing?" asked her friend. "I think you could learn it quickly and once you do there is a good position waiting for you at a good salary. Run in to see Miss Gladys C. Bridges, the principal of the Illinois School of Filing. She will be glad to tell you about the course."

So it was that Miss Boyd studied filing at night, graduated as "one of the brightest girls in the class" and got a position immediately.

Today she is getting $20 a week and is in line for another raise!

To every girl and woman who wants to better her position we offer these three words of advice—"Take up filing."

A suggestion for today:—Write for the free book—"Filing as a Profession for Women."

Listing Gotham's Best Plays for Holiday Tourist

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK—[Special correspondence.]—Comes the holiday tourist with the familiar request that he be advised, counseled, and guided as to which of the Broadway theaters offers the biggest return on the money invested, including war tax and the library's commission. To which request we make the equally familiar reply that, not knowing, we cannot say.

We recently have been through a spot of picking the ten best plays produced last season, and while the comments concerning our final choice have scattered, they have not strengthened our confidence in the universality of our taste.

One lady wrote that, except for the last six, our ten plays were perfectly chosen. Another that any human being who could include three of them, at the cost of leaving out three she could name, should at the very least have his teeth X-rayed, his tonsils removed, and finally submit himself to a psycho-analyst for examination.

However, we can, and hereby do, submit a list of the twenty-five current offerings that would, had we to do the first half season's playgoing all over again, first attract our attention.

This list, remember, leaves out the three old timers, "Lightnin'," which the populace, resident and transient, has voted the most thoroughly satisfying theatrical entertainment of this generation; "Irene," the musical comedy that is now in its second year, and "The Gold Diggers," which began in September, 1919, and is still going. It is a lightweight list, so far as the serious drama is concerned, but that is not our fault, and it is as follows:

"THE FIRST YEAR"—An amusing, brightly written comedy, proving that the first 365 days of married life are the hardest. Miss Cox is that particular year for a newly married couple seeking to adjust itself to double income and a limited income. Frank Craven and Roberta Arnold playing the leads.

"ENTER MADAME"—A bright little comedy in the French style, showing that a temperamental actress is trea difficult, not to get along with, but so facinating as one husband can be satisfied with any other, once he is used to the type. Gilda Grand the star, Norman Trevor, her leading man.

"THE BAD MAN"—A satirical comedy, full of laughs and a whimsical philosophy, in which a Mexican bandit, easily identified as the recently active Francisco Villa, attempts to adjust a border romance. Holbrook Blinn starring in the best part he has had in years.

"THE BAT"—A mystery play in which each member of the cast and most of the audience are suspected of having committed the murder, effectively enlivened by a comedy relief supplied by May Vokes as a dull witted maid.

"MECCA"—A gorgeous spectacle on the "Ziegfeld Chow" order, with a riotous orchestra, in which several hundred ladies and gentlemen of the ballet, hastily and scantily costumed, dance themselves into a state of exhaustion and fall panting in graceful heaps about the stage.

"THE SKIN GAME"—A serious drama by John Galsworthy, in which the conflict is between a pushing and determined commoner and an forcing the well-born but snobbish aristocrats of his neighborhood to accept his family as social equals.

"POLLY'S WILD OATS"—A fantastic but human comedy farce, full of Clare Kummer fun and made entertaining by the fine performances of Roland ing, as a rich youth stricken to play "Hamlet," and Lotus his leading woman.

MISS BURTRESS DIETCH in "CINDERELLA ON BROADWAY" STUDEBAKER. PHOTO-CAMPBELL STUDIO

"TIP TOP"—The annual Fred Stone show, with the comedian contributing a new line of stunts, and the Dillingham cast and chorus supplying a perfect musical comedy background.

"THE MEANEST MAN IN THE WORLD"—A comedy of the "Wallingford" type, in which George Cohan plays the unsuccessful lawyer who tries to be mean, but fails after he meets the heroine. He saves the girl's fortune, turns a bush town into a boom town, and everybody wears new evening clothes in the last act. Cohan's best performance.

"SAMSON AND DELILAH"—Introducing Jacob Ben-Ami, a young Jewish actor recruited from the Jewish Art theater and now playing his first rôle in English. An interesting domestic drama, with Ben-Ami giving performance some insist John Barrymore could not duplicate, which J. B. generously admits.

"HEARTBREAK HOUSE"—A Bernard Shaw jumble of wit and wisdom, "a Russian fantasia on English themes," in which the Shavians delight and about which all others refuse to commit themselves. A study of the English leisure class before the war.

"JUST SUPPOSE"—A sentimental comedy detailing such a romance as the Prince of Wales might have enjoyed if he had ditched a dinner to the secretary of state gone motoring in Virginia and found Linda Lee Stafford living in a rose garden. Patricia Collinge starring, three fine English actors, Fred and Geoffrey Kerr and Leslie Howard, and Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, assisting.

"THE MIRAGE"—The story of an honest Pennsylvania youth who finds his schoolday sweetheart living with a traction magnate in New York, and is severely shocked. Later he recovers and takes the girl back to the country on her promise to be good. Florence Reed starring (for 10 per cent of the gross and a guarantee of $900 a week, 'tis said) and Alan Dinehart playing the lead.

"LITTLE OLD NEW YORK"—A quaint comedy of Manhattan island in the days when Cornelius Vanderbilt wore corduroy pants and ran a ferry and John Jacob Astor spoke with a German accent. Genevieve Tobin plays the heroine with so much charm she has reminded all the thinning hair brigade of Maude Adams and "The Masked Ball."

"THE WOMAN OF BRONZE"—A serious domestic drama in which Margaret Anglin, as an abused wife, carries the second act to an exciting and impressive emotional climax when she discovers that her stage husband has taken up with the ingenue.

"WELCOME STRANGER"—A character comedy in which a humble Hebrew practices a kind of Christian Science on a hard shelled Yankee village and gets himself invited to a Christmas party. George Sidney starring.

"AFGAR"—An English burlesque, stupid as to book, commonplace as to score, but saved by the presence of Alice Delysia, a French comedienne of the Gaby Deslys type, plus a good singing voice, a pretty face, and a spinal column perfectly enviroled.

"BAB"—Helen Hayes visualising as perfectly as may be the sub-deb of Mary Roberts Rinehart's stories. An entertaining comedy, appealing especially to other sub-debs and those with little grown up fairies in their homes.

"MARY"—The liveliest of current musical comedies and the most popular, containing a song called "The Love Nest," which all elevator boys try to whistle though comparatively few achieve the time.

"HONEYDEW"—Another musical comedy, with a likable score by Ehram Zimbalist, the violinist, a good romantic story to match it, and a competent cast.

"THE PRINCE AND THE PAUPER"—A new version of the Mark Twain story, written by Amelia Rives, produced by William Faversham, who is wonderfully swashbuckly as Miles Hendon, and with Ruth Findlay, pale and feminine but sweetly winsome, as the boy heroes. Children adore it.

"CORNERED"—The newest of the cinematographic melodramas, a crook play, with Madge Kennedy playing twin sisters, one good, one a little bad, but both darlings, as Madge plays them.

New York Music Letter

ried a suitcase full of announcements of the coming visit of Stock out of the Grand Central.

More cement. Toscanini is backed by the Italian government, which desires closer relations with America. He will try to play an entente cordiale into the hearts of his audiences.

Sokoloff talks mysteriously of cement to be carried to the south—something pan-American is in his head.

Voegeli, saner than the rest, speaks only of a reasonable desire to show New York what Chicago has.

In any event, New York will hear some better orchestra music than it has been having. The Toscanini band is the best in Italy. The maestro got the ear of the government, and they conscripted his organization for him. The Italian conservatoriums were shorn of their best professors to make an orchestra. His personnel is a blue book list of the professional artists of Italy.

Only one orchestra—the Paris Conservatoire society—has been successful with solo artist material. Others have tried it, and have found that the average union material works much better together. To make soloists play well together, an autocratic power of discipline centered in the conductor is necessary.

Toscanini seems to have that. On the day of his arrival here, his men had trouble with the customs officials. The blue caps had no rules about the dutiability of bass drums and viols, and had to telegraph Washington for instructions. Toscanini wanted to attend a banquet of welcome.

He shooed his professors and grand artists back into their steamer cabins, abandoned them there, and came ashore. There was no mutiny. Apparently they are well trained.

The Chicago orchestra is probably the best in America now, with the old Boston Symphony recovering from its wartime dissolution. The New York season becomes better and better as the winter progresses and the rest of the world arrives to help it.

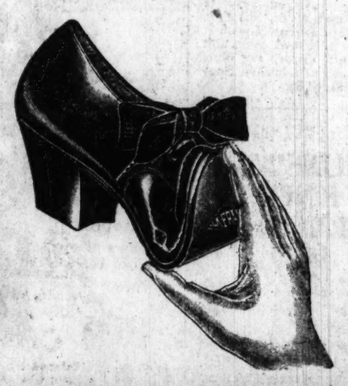
LA FRANCE

Shoes for Women
Practical Christmas Gifts

Smart, graceful of line, durable and undeniably useful, La France shoes merit a high place in the ranks of Christmas gifts. We direct particular attention to the La France Arch Support Shoe, the Rest-Cure and the Foot-Form Flexible Shoes. The latter are especially well adapted for nurses, school teachers and business women who are on their feet a great deal.

For the woman who likes to wear low shoes in wintry weather we have the La France Brogue and Walking Oxfords—neat styles, built for wear. The services of our specially trained fitters are always at your service. Boots are priced from $10.50 to $15; low shoes from $8 to $10.50.

Our Christmas Merchandise Bonds make the giving of shoes an easy matter. Gift Bonds may be purchased from any salesperson in our Second Floor Shoe Section.



Our Greatest Slipper Sale
Continues Tomorrow

It presents a remarkable opportunity for holiday shoppers to solve their Christmas problems in a most practical way. A great purchase from one of New York's foremost slipper manufacturers enables us to offer first quality slippers at about wholesale price, and we will maintain this low price until the entire lot is sold. All are made of the best felt over foot-shaped lasts, and are steam-dried and lasted, which insures the shape of the slipper.

Every pair is perfect and is neatly and attractively trimmed. There are styles high and low—colors are orchid, pink, Copenhagen, French blue, old rose, Royal blue, Oxford gray, wine, heliotrope, Alice blue, purple, taupe, brown, lavender and combinations.

THE POTTERS

Putting the Baby to Bed

ILLUSTRATED BY J. H. STRIEBEL

by J. P. McEvoy

SCENE—The living room of the Potter flat. Dinner has been destroyed (we used to call it supper back on the farm) and the family is sitting around scrapping for the evening paper. Pa with his usual luck has drawn the last two pages of the classified. Ma is reading one of those diaries. Mamie (of course) is drinking in the Answers to the Love-Lorn. Bill has a hammerback and half-nelson on the sporting page, while Baby is earnestly sawing a leg off the piano with the bread knife.

PROLOGUE.

When the evening meal has been eaten,
And before the paper is read,
Comes the hardest of all occupations,
Known as "putting the baby to bed."
Hannibal, Titus, and Cæsar
Most always succeeded, 'tis said,
But a point on which hist'ry is silent:
Could they put a smart baby to bed?

MA (reading dairy aloud):
I've bought the dearest little gun; I saw it advertised;
I guess I'll shoot dear John tonight—Oh, won't he be surprised!

PA: I'll bet he was—hey, watch that kid, the furniture's a wreck;
Stop climbing on that davenport, you'll break your little neck!

(Spelling) Say p-u-t b-a-b-y to b-e-d, my dear.
MA: Oh, let him play around a while——
MAMIE: Oh, father, listen here:
(Reading) Is it polite to kiss a man with a mustache on his forehead?
BILL: Are whiskers also going up?
MAMIE: I think your jokes are horrid!
BILL: Read to yourself.
MA: Now, children, hush!
PA: Stop climbing on that chair!
MA: Tell him a story.
PA: Blankety Blank!
BABY (joyfully): Ooh bear, ooh bear, ooh bear!
PA: Well, THE GREAT BIG BEAR in a GREAT BIG VOICE said,
"WHO'S BEEN SITTING IN MY CHAIR?"
MA: Don't yell so loud.
PA: Who's doing this?
BABY: Ooh bear, ooh bear, ooh bear.
PA: And the middle sized bear in a middle sized voice said:
"Who's been sitting in my chair?"
MA: Well, that's much better.
PA: Ain't you kind!
BABY (impatiently): Ooh bear, ooh bear, ooh bear.
PA: And the little beety bear said in a little beety voice:
"Who's been sitting in my chair?"
Let go my hair!
MA: Don't scare the child!
BABY (rapturously): Ooh bear, ooh bear, ooh bear.
PA: Put him to bed now, that's enough.
BABY: WOW!.....WOW!
BILL: That's the stuff.
MA: You should have spelled it, you might have known.

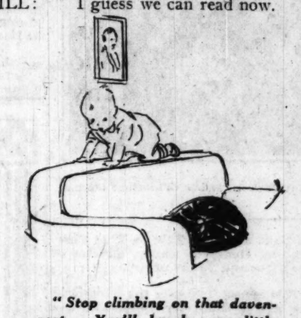
"Is it polite to kiss a man with a mustache on his forehead?"

PA: I'll put him to bed.
MA: You leave him alone.
The poor little thing is scared to death.
BABY: WOW!.....WOW!

"The great big bear in a great big voice said: 'Who's been sitting in my chair?'"

"MULK! MULK!"

MA: He's holding his breath.
MAMIE: Oh, Ma, let me take him.
PA: Let somebody do it.
BABY (with renewed vigor) WOW.....WOW!
PA: I knew it, I knew it.
I'll put him to bed.
MA: You leave him alone.
Come over to mudder, my precious, my own—
Does him want to go to him's little white bed?
BABY: WOW!....WOW!
BILL: "He doesn't," he said.
MA: You mind your own business—Is him all played out?
PA: Go on now with mother—that's a good little scout.
MAMIE: Him's a good little boy—him's goin' to bed.
BABY (exits with mother): WOW!....WOW!
PA: Oh, shut that kid's head.
MA (in the other room): You let him alone. Lay down, little son.
BILL: I guess we can read now.



"Stop climbing on that davenport. You'll break your little neck!"

"You leave him alone. The poor little thing is scared to death."

PA: Thank God, that is done.
MA (enters): He's going to sleep, he can't hold up his head.
(BAM!....BAM!)
Oh, he fell out of bed!
BABY (at door): MULK! MULK!
PA: Why, wasn't he fed?
MAMIE: I'll get him a bottle.
PA: Gwan back to bed!
BABY (exit with mother): MULK, MULK.
PA: Gwan with your Ma!
MA (voice): He's chewed up his nipple.
BILL: Well, give him a straw.
(Ten minutes elapse.)
MA (re-enters, sighing): At last, he's asleep.
PA: What a stubborn cuss!
MA: It must come from your side, is isn't in us.

New and Used Pianos

PIANOS!
Uprights
Grands Players

WE make no glowing statements but we do offer you real bargains at prices lower than you can get any place along the street. Our salesrooms are filled with the best display of good pianos and we have decided to move them even though we have to sacrifice money upon them.

We have listed them at prices which will surprise you when you see the names on the fall boards. Fine old standard makes are represented. All we ask is that you come in and see them. We know that once you see the beautiful cases and hear the fine tone of the pianos we offer at these special prices, you will appreciate what this advertisement means to those who wish to save money.

Penny wise merchants may not be satisfied with a reasonable profit but insist upon adding to original cost all kinds of fancy charges. When they offer a piano to the public it is overloaded with an unreasonable price. We DON'T look at things that way. We are satisfied to make a small profit because we are sure of large turnovers. That view is to your benefit. It makes money for you because you save money if you are shrewd enough to come in and see some real bargains.

Special Offer!

We will allow you to come in and make your choice of any type piano we have on display, and we will deliver it to your home for a 30-day trial. You can put it to any test within reason and you will find it exactly as represented. Then you can start to make payments as low as $1.50 a week. You cannot better this offer anywhere. Come in and see for yourself.

Terms as Low as $1.50 a Week

Christmas Pageant Seasonable Event at Art Institute

By Eleanor Jewett.

The young moon, naked, born a silver thread,
Hung in the damp clasp of the winter night
Where shepherds watched on Galilean hills
Their restless flocks under the quivering light
From the sweef lamps that swung across a sky
Ridden by shadows, shifting black and white.

The young moon breasted the steep slope of sky
Where, at its crest, the wings of night are furled—
The gold stars faded to a misted round
Through which low strains of sudden music swirled—
And, to the paeans of angelic hosts,
A Babe, in Bethlehem, smiled on the world.

The young moon shivered at the dawn's red touch,
The curtains of the dark were drawn away.
Down through the waiting fields the shepherds trod—
The first of men to make a reverent way
To His glad worship—in their ears the song:
"Peace upon earth, good-will to men, today!"

E. J.

"Mrs. Frederick Seville," by Anna Lee Stacey, in the exhibition which opened yesterday at the Art institute.

CHRISTMAS is, perhaps, the one day universally celebrated. The picture of the Christ child, pillowed high upon sweet smelling hay in a manger in a lowly stable in Bethlehem, surrounded by an adoring mother, a wondering father, wistful, wide eyed beasts, worshiping shepherds, and gift laden wise men, is a picture present in the mind of practically every one at Christmas. He belongs too much to the world for the world to forget Him. His day is too much ours for us to let it go past unrecognized.

Last Christmas season the "Drama of the Nativity and the Massacre of the Innocents" was presented in Fullerton hall of the Art institute in loving recognition of the day. This year it is being given again. Possibly, under encouragement, it will be played every year, making of it as eternal an offering as the Passion play of Oberammergau. It is to be given tonight and tomorrow night, and all those of us who have not seen it should make an effort to go. It is, truly, a worth while, artistic achievement.

The holiday season has been ushered in, as far as the Art institute is concerned, with a number of interesting exhibitions. Unfortunately they opened too late to permit me to see them in time to write of them today, but I can, without fear of error, at least mention what they are. Possibly the most important exhibit, because we have seen none of his work recently, and because we know his work is good, will prove to be the sculpture by Jo Davidson—but perhaps not—it is a most unsafe procedure to forecast the possibilities of an exhibition of art.

The other exhibitions are paintings by Guy Wiggins, paintings by Alfred Juergens, applied arts by Herman Sachs, paintings by Charles H. Woodbury, paintings by John and Anna Stacey, pastels by William Penhallow Henderson, a group of paintings by Gifford Beal, W. Elmer Schofield, and Eugene E. Speicher, and an exhibition by the Chicago chapter of the Wild Flower Preservation Society of America.

There are a number of interesting offerings connected with this last exhibition. For one thing, six illustrated lectures on nature study will be given in the clubroom at the Art institute on the following dates, at 4 o'clock: On Tuesday, Jan. 4, "Birds and Flowers Through the Seasons," by W. D. Richardson; on Thursday, Jan. 6, "Trees in Winter Form," by Willard N. Clute; on Friday, Jan. 7, "Ferns of the Chicago Region," by Miss Ruth Marshall; on Monday, Jan. 10, "Milk Weeds and Their Insect Guests," by Jesse Lowe Smith; on Wednesday, Jan. 12, "Birds and Flowers of the Chicago Region," by Orpheus M. Schantz; and on Friday, Jan. 14, "The Wonders of the Dunes," by Henry C. Cowles.

Programs of particular interest to children are planned for the Saturday afternoons during the month the exhibition is open, at 3 o'clock. Alvin R. Kahn will speak on "Home Life of Our Familiar Birds," in the clubroom of the institute at 3 o'clock on Saturday, Jan. 1. The following week at 3 o'clock, in Fullerton hall there will be motion pictures of plant life. On Saturday, Jan. 15, there will be shown in Fullerton hall the "Formation of a Mountain Glacier"; the "Life History of a Butterfly" [this should be exceedingly interesting]; and "Showing America to a Foreigner." On the last day of the exhibit, Tuesday, Jan. 18, in Fullerton hall, at 8 o'clock, will be given a "Chalk Talk on Wild Flowers," by Henry T. Bailey, director of the Cleveland School of Art.

This appeal, found in the bulletin of the Art institute for December, can bear repetition here because it is of importance: "Members and friends of the Art institute are asked that when discarding costumes, furniture, or art objects, they bear in mind the possible usefulness of such objects to the school. Costumes, period, modern, or fancy dress; period furniture, textiles suitable for backgrounds, and objects in pottery, metal, or glass for still life may prove highly useful. Refer to Miss Kendall, registrar of the school."

I saw last week the exhibition of paintings and sculpture at the Chicago Norwegian club. It is the first exhibit of what is hoped to be an annual affair. Aside from the fact that the club is a difficult and distant place to get to, the exhibition is a great success. There is work seen by artists who, to me at least, are new, and other work by artists with whom we are all familiar.

The most delightful canvas shown was, I thought, "Summer Frolics," by Dorothy Visju Anderson. It is a lovely thing, full of the happy-sad mystery of summer which so often one tries to catch only to have the effort fail ignominiously. It shows woods and a river, with two dryads frolicking in the blue shallows that ripple against the misted green meadow of the foreground. It is not so much the composition as the atmosphere that holds one.

A man new to me is Sigvald Asbjornsen. He is a sculptor and, if the figures that are on exhibition here may be taken as proof, he possesses much talent. The "Edgar Allan Poe" is a most interesting study; the larger figure of the "Indian Boy" is excellent; the plaster statuette "Yearning" is sympathetic; the statuette of Fred W. Bentley is a delicious character study; and the little "The Kiss" is delightful in a gentle, appealing way.

The work of Gilbert Riswold is done on a larger scale with perhaps a more majestic touch, a more cavalier swing of the modeling tools, a more virile disdain for the little details which add charm but detract from masculinity.

Among the other painters who have noteworthy pictures on exhibition are Karl Ouren, Jonas Lie, Olaf Brauner, Edna Vognild, Fred T. Larson, Emil Biorn, and Carl L. Boeckmann.

There opened at the Arts club on Friday an exhibition of old masters, from Rembrandt to Reynolds, which will be discussed at a later date.

The Chicago Camera club announces an exhibition of prints by C. W. Christiansen which will remain on view until Dec. 21.

The Piker - - - - BY GUY F. LEE

I watch with envy as the daring flyer
Goes somersaulting up among the clouds;
And jealously, as he wings high and higher,
I hear the yelling plaudits of the crowds.
A joyous jaunt, indeed, and very thrilling
Amid the distant skies to dance and prance—
But frequently the fun has proved too killing,
And that is why I never took a chance.

I dodged the opportunity to boast of
The perils one encountered in the war;
Reciting his adventures to a host of
Admiring friends and neighbors o'er and o'er.
I might have won great glory in the fray there
Had I but sailed away to sunny France—
But then, again, I might have had to stay there,
And that is why I didn't take a chance.

Some people tell me it is fine to ramble
In double harness down this vale of tears;
While others say at best the thing's a gamble:
That married life is cluttered up with fears.
The ladies love me—with 'em I'm a demon,
But though they tumble for me at a glance,
I've seen so many "lifers" pick a lemon
That so far I've declined to take a chance.

The market often offers easy monies,
A guy can grab a fortune at roulette;
It's soft to make a cleanup on the ponies,
And poker profits with the proper bet.
But Lady Luck, whene'er I say I like her,
Backs up and gently fades into a trance—
And so I guess I'll always be a piker;
I'll never have the nerve to take a chance.

Lighting Poultry House in Winter Means More Eggs

By Frank Ridgway.

TURNING night time into day in order to give layers longer days and shorter nights is a trick poultrymen are resorting to for the purpose of increasing the production of eggs during the period of high prices in winter.

In the tropics, where fowls originated, the days and nights are about equal in length, and the habits of the birds became developed to suit the conditions. Fowls in this climate are subjected to entirely different lengths of days and nights, which interfere with their eating habits and the number of eggs produced at certain seasons of the year.

In this section of the country at this time of the year the sun rises about 7 and sets about 4; giving a short day and a long night. Hens are kept on their roosts for about fifteen hours, reducing the day to nine hours during the cold months of the year. As a result hens eat less and produce fewer eggs during the winter months than they do in the summer.

Light Increases Production.

The artificial lighting of poultry houses has been experimented on for many years by poultry keepers in this country. The idea was first tried out about thirty years ago by Dr. E. C. Waldorf of Buffalo, N. Y.

Expert poultrymen have been testing it thoroughly, and now the fact has become pretty well established that increased production may be brought about by artificial illumination. It is no longer a theory; it is beyond the experimental stage, and during the last few winters many poultry owners have given it a prominent place in their scheme of economy.

It is generally agreed that artificial lighting does not increase the number of eggs that a hen may lay in a year, but it greatly increases the production when comparatively few eggs are coming in to the market in November, December, January, and February.

Since the winter eggs give the big returns, the commercial poultry farmer is finding that the small expense of lighting yields good sized dividends, for the layers are working overtime and producing eggs while other hens are resting during the season of highest prices.

How Weather Affects Laying.

In this part of the United States and north of here extending into Canada most poultrymen regard artificial lighting as an aid in feeding. With artificial light the hen has more time to eat, digest, and digest her food. The extra time naturally calls for more food and water. A certain amount of food is required to maintain the body and the surplus is then converted into eggs.

The trouble with most flocks in this section is that the layers are not able to eat much more than enough food to meet their body requirements, consequently they have little surplus to be used in the manufacture of eggs. They come off their perches late in the mornings and go to roost as soon as it begins to get dark in the afternoon.

Thus if it is foggy the birds frequently remain on the roost until after 7 and are forced back to their roosts early in the afternoon on rainy days. The short day of the hen is often reduced to seven hours in cloudy weather.

Making the Day Longer.

Experienced poultrymen believe that artificial lighting can be applied successfully by all classes of poultry keepers. Owners of back yard flocks, as well as managers of both large and small plants, are finding it to their financial advantage to keep a light burning in their poultry houses to make the days longer.

Even on ordinary farms, where no poultry is being made of poultry, farmers are finding it worth while. And the increased installation of electricity on farms the practice will no doubt become more common.

Eggs that are produced by hens that are kept under lights in winter are usually of poor quality for incubation purposes, and for that reason breeding stock should not be kept in laying pens that are artificially lighted. The judgment of good breeders is that light should only be used where layers are housed. By the use of light many have practically doubled the number of eggs that are produced normally by the hens during the winter season.

Getting Best Results.

There is still much to be learned about this new method in poultry keeping, and there is a difference of opinion as to the time of day when the lights should be used. Some turn the lights on in the morning and again at night, while others claim they get best results by keeping the lights on from 1 in the morning until daylight and not turning them on again in the evening.

In many cases where pullets are hatched the lights are used from October until the last of March.

If the hens are a year or more old some poultrymen begin earlier, turning on the lights from about the first of September and keeping this up until the last of January. This system is used where the breeders are kept in the same poultry house, giving the birds a chance to rest during the early growing months before incubation season begins, in order that the eggs will hatch well.

When lights are not provided the hens go to roost as soon as it is dark, as it is impossible for them to eat enough to carry them through the long night. In fact, a hen's crop [food reservoir] is usually found empty if examined at midnight when the days are short and the nights are long.

Air Mail Pilots Making Startling Records for Prize

All Are Fighting for $1,000 Newspaper Award

BY MORROW KRUM.

THE air mail pilots who are competing for the $1,000 prize offered by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and four other newspapers are ticking off the miles with a velocity and a regularity that brings many smiles to the face of Otto Praeger, second assistant postmaster general and head of the flying postal service.

WILLIAM HOPSON. [Wide World Photo.]

From Sept. 8, when the New York-San Francisco service was opened, until Nov. 30 Pilot C. V. Pickup of the Omaha-Salt Lake division covered 15,166 miles and made fifty-two trips over his division at an average speed of 80 miles an hour or better.

Second on the list is Pilot H. Weir Cook of the same division. Cook covered 14,755 miles and made forty trips at better than 80 miles an hour.

Third on the list is William C. Hopson of the Chicago-Omaha division, who has flown 13,905 miles and made fifty trips at better than 80 miles an hour. Rowe of the Chicago-Omaha division is fourth on the list, having flown 13,276 miles and made forty-seven trips at or above required time.

Since Dec. 1, J. T. Christensen of the Chicago division, who was not mentioned among the first ten pilots in the statement sent out by the government, has set up two records, which, according to local officials, will stand a long time.

On Dec. 3 Christensen made the trip from Chicago to New York in 5 hours and 31 minutes actual flying time. From Cleveland to New York Christensen averaged 151 miles an hour. On Dec. 14 this same pilot flew the eastbound mail from Omaha to Chicago, a distance of 440 miles, in 2 hours and 45 minutes—an average of 162 miles an hour.

Christensen will no doubt be among the first ten pilots in the statement the air mail service will send out for the month of December.

The other newspapers contributing to the air mail prize are the New York Evening Post, the Omaha Bee, the Salt Lake Tribune, and the San Francisco Examiner. The $1,000 is to be divided into three prizes, $500, $300, and $200, for the three pilots making, during the first six months of the coast to coast service, the largest mileage at an average speed of 80 miles an hour or better.

Following is the list of the first ten pilots who covered the most miles and the number of trips they made at an average of 80 miles an hour or better:

Pilot—	Total mileage.	No. trips at 80 M.P.H. or better.
1. Pickup, C. V.	15,166	52*
2. Cook, H. Weir	14,755	40*
3. Hopson, W. C.	13,905	50†
4. Rowe, H. H.	13,276	47†
5. Leonhardt, E. C.	13,261	44‡
6. Murray, J. F.	12,646	32*
7. Smith, W. J.	12,515	19†
8. Smith, W. L.	11,758	37§
9. Braukman, C. A.	11,500	33*
10. Yager, F. R.	10,980	48*

THE CONTEST RULES

Here are the rules under which the air mail pilots are competing for the newspaper prizes, totaling $1,000.

The prizes shall be given to the pilot having to his credit the greatest number of points during a prescribed period—points to be awarded on the following basis:

1. For each completed trip the pilot shall receive one point for each mile flown with mail—air line measurements.

2. For incompleted trips the pilots will receive no mileage credit, except in the case of a forced landing due to mechanical trouble made without damage, in which case the pilot shall receive full mileage credit for the trip.

3. For each safe takeoff at the start of a scheduled trip the pilot shall receive one point for each twenty pounds of mail carried.

4. For each safe landing at the end of a scheduled trip the pilot shall receive one point for each twenty pounds of mail carried.

5. The pilot shall receive ten points for punctuality each time a trip is started on scheduled time (within fifteen minutes after the arrival of the mail on the field), and for each time that the pilot was on the field and ready to start for a scheduled trip on time, even though the start of his trip be delayed or canceled through mechanical trouble or on account of weather conditions.

The awards are to be made as follows:

$500 to the winner.
$300 to second place.
$200 to third place.

during the six months started Sept. 8, 1920, and ending March 8, 1921.

The above rules were drawn with the assistance of air mail officials by the contest committee of the Aero Club of America.

May Have Field.

Largely through the efforts of Lieut. Harry D. Copland, Hartford, Conn., may in the near future, have a municipal aircraft station. The finance board has the matter under consideration, and the majority of the members agree with the idea. Pilot Copland has recently taken many of the important townsmen on surveying trips and a selection has been made among the various suitable places that have been mapped out from the air.

Weather Station.

A signal corps meteorological station has been established at the air service engineering school at McCook field, Dayton, O., as one of a system of stations at military posts for the purpose of studying upper air currents and furnishing information concerning these currents to the artillery.

Eugene W. Majors, manager of the local air mail field, is doing all he can to make Chicago the center of American flying. It is his job to see that the twenty-five pilots fly in turn, that their ships are ready when the mail arrives at the Maywood field, and that the mail flies every day, which is a mighty difficult task these winter days.

Forest Patrol.

Arrangements to extend the aerial forest patrol until it covers the entire northwest are being made by Maj. H. H. Arnold, in charge of the San Francisco office of the air service.

The war department at Washington has granted authorization to organize reserve aero squadrons for this purpose, the squadrons to be composed of reserve officers and enlisted men who will be on active status from May 15 to Oct. 15. The officers will serve as pilots or observers.

Maj. Arnold is making an attempt to recruit reserve officers from the members of the aviation clubs of the bay cities. He addressed the Pacific Aero club at a luncheon recently, explaining the proposal.

Land and Water Airplane Needed by Commuters

An airplane salesman and a business man sat together in a loop office last week and discussed the possibilities of the heavier than air machines. The business man was one to whom minutes were really valuable. He was particularly interested in the airplane because of the time flying saves.

"I live in Wheaton," said the business man. "The best time my chauffeur can make to my office from Wheaton is 1 hour and 15 minutes. I want a ship that will bring me to the loop in 20 minutes. Have you that ship?"

"There is no landing field near the loop. Have you a landing field on your farm?"

"I can make one."

"I have a ship that would bring you to the landing field that is closest to the loop in less than 15 minutes. But it would take at least half an hour to drive the rest of the way."

"Haven't you a ship that can land on both land and water?"

"No, sir. I'm sorry. That would answer the question, wouldn't it?"

"Yes, I could take off from my farm, and land on the lake front. Is such a ship made in America?"

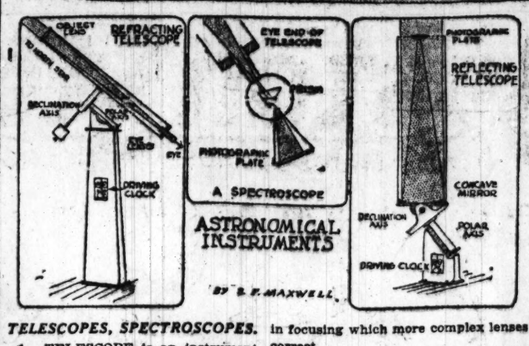
"Not that I know of—I doubt if there is a practical land and water ship in the world."

"If some one would build a combination ship that was safe and practical he would make a lot of money in Chicago," asserted the business man.

May Map N. Y.

With the announcement that $20,000 will be asked of the legislature to conduct New York's part of the United States geological survey this year, information has been received by State Engineer Frank M. Williams that the federal authorities are seriously considering utilizing airplanes in revising the topographic maps.

ASTRONOMY



TELESCOPES, SPECTROSCOPES.

A TELESCOPE is an instrument to make distant objects look larger. It is usually a combination of glass lenses, or lenses and mirror.

Telescopes are of all powers, from the giant ones in the big observatories to spyglasses. There is no limit to the distance a telescope can see. The big ones pierce space for millions of light years, while the little ones grade by imperceptible stages into microscopes. Although almost any sort of a spyglass or hand lens is by strict definition a telescope, the term is usually reserved for that class of instruments which is used for viewing the stars.

An astronomical glass consists of a lens, usually a compound one at the front, whose duty it is to collect as much light as possible, and a series of small lenses at the eye, whose function is to magnify the image cast by the object glass. Two lenses, a big one of low power and a small one of high power, will make a telescope, but such a simple arrangement is not used on account of numerous errors in focusing which more complex lenses correct.

An astronomical telescope makes every object appear upside down, but this is of no consequence in the sky, as every one sees them this way who sees them at all. For terrestrial vision an extra pair of lenses must be inserted near the eye piece, to turn things right side up again.

To perform at all, a large telescope must be mounted. The heavy iron tube which carries the lenses must be so nicely balanced that it will move at the touch of a finger, and still be right in all its bearings.

This is accomplished in this way: The tube is swung on two axes set at right angles to each other. One axis points to the north pole of the sky, marked by the North star, while the other sweeps around the celestial equator. The tube swings on the end of the latter. By swinging back and forth, objects north or south of the celestial equator can be seen. This axis sets the telescope in declination, which is in the sky what latitude is on earth.

The whole dome of the sky is in slow apparent rotation around the north star. If the telescope is slowly swung on its polar axis, it can be made to point at any particular object all the way across the sky. A clock is, therefore, usually attached to the polar axis, and once the telescope is clamped on a star, the astronomer has no further worry about keeping it in view.

Extremely large telescopes are made with a concave mirror in place of the object lens in front. A mirror is not nearly so expensive to make as a lens, and in addition it has several technical advantages in its favor. Such a reflecting telescope, as it is called, is ordinarily used for taking photographs. A plate is placed in the focus of the cone of rays coming from the star, and after a suitable time a picture results from objects so faint that no eye could ever hope to see them.

A third type of glass, called the spectroscope, is ordinarily used with every telescope. A spectroscope is the reverse of a telescope in principle. A telescope must gather light without decomposing it, while a spectroscope must decompose light and spread it.

A spectroscope consists of a triangular block of glass called a prism, with suitable lenses for conducting the light in and out. It is used for ascertaining what stars are made of, their speed of approach, rotation, dark companions and a multitude of other facts.

In practice, the spectroscope is substituted for the eye lenses or the photographic plate at the eye end of the telescope.

The largest telescope in the whole world is at Mt. Wilson in California. It is of the mirror type, and is nearly nine feet across. The largest telescope using lenses exclusively is at Yerkes observatory, at Lake Geneva, Wis. It is 44 inches across. The third largest glass is at Lick observatory, in California. This one is 36 inches across. The largest glass near Chicago is the one at the Dearborn observatory in Evanston, eighteen inches across.

Strange as it may seem, some of the largest telescopes ever built were not in institutions, but were made by amateurs. The list of famous amateurs who built notable telescope for themselves include such names at William Herschel, a musician; Lord Rosse, a nobleman; Brashear, an iron worker, and Mellish, a farmer.

PACKARD

No motor car ever came to market with so rich and impressive a tradition behind it as is behind the new Packard Single-Six. It is, in every particular, as is every other Packard, the kind of car the founders of the Packard Company would themselves wish to drive. Drafted into its design, forged into its structure, alloyed into its very steels are those factors of superb and trustworthy service that have distinguished the 70,000 earlier Packards that preceded it. We invite you to see this new Packard, and to learn by personal inspection how remarkable a value has been accomplished in this moderately priced car.

"Action in Phonographs," such as has never been witnessed before----here or at any store in all America----and there are sound reasons for it----TO-WIT----

The Celebrated VITANOLA Phonographs in Six Leading Models at Half, And Less Than Half Their Actual Value

A pronouncement in value-giving that is holding all Chicago a-quiver—and that has already sent hundreds to our great Cash Establishment, the greatest Cash Establishment in America, for any business man needs but a moment's study to realize that our prices are, right at the moment, when phonographs are selling virtually "hand over fist," the lowest that have ever been quoted, not alone for Vitanola, but for cabinet phonographs of any sort.

Gratify that innermost gift thought of all the family here tomorrow, for Vitanola is rated among the very best of phonographs, from every artistic, musical and mechanical standpoint. Still, for the first time, and in all probability the last time—Vitanola is here at half and less than half actual value.

The six models we are enabled to provide cover practically the phonograph desires of every family in the city—a merchandising event that has upset the calculations of thousands, and that has brought savings that enabled hundreds to secure the coveted phonograph for Christmas.

Note the Illustrations
Our Prices, the Dealers' Prices

Consider the savings and the desirability of Vitanola and you'll quickly understand why this is destined to be the overshadowing Sale of phonographs in the history of Chicago.

Seventh Floor

Feature No. 1
Vitanola Tone Filter

The "Tone Filter" is a combination of carefully thought out devices that makes Vitanola tone distinctly unusual and gives the full tone-value of the record, marvelously lifelike and clear. The Tone Filter eliminates surface noises, blasts and other impurities—to be had only on the Vitanola.

Feature No. 2
The Vitanola Motor

noiseless, tireless, easy winding (while playing if you wish). Powerful and specially designed to give that absolutely constant speed that is essential to perfect tone. The most costly type of improved motor used in any phonograph today. Reliable as a fine timepiece and built the same way.

Feature No. 3
Vitanola Tone Chamber

laminated (layer on layer) construction, and the result of years of experience and experiment. Essential to perfect tone. And the tone modifier, a "focal-shutter" device in the throat of the Vitanola, regulated from the outside of the cabinet, gives perfect tones in all volumes.

Feature No. 4
Vitanola Duplex Reproducer

or sound box makes Vitanola owners free to buy the records of their choice, regardless of the make. For, with a simple quarter-turn after rendering a lateral-cut record, it's ready to play the "hill-and-dale" type—and both kinds "natural as life." No extra attachment is required.

Feature No. 5
Vitanola Tempo Regulator

This enables a record to be rendered at any desired speed—fast, slow or medium, depending on the record being played. On the Vitanola this contrivance is so nicely adjusted that it acts unfailingly, lessening or increasing the number of revolutions made by the turntable, and indicating the speed on a little nickel dial.

Feature No. 6
Vitanola Duplex Tone Arm

Most important because upon it all the trueness and clarity of the tone depend. The Vitanola tone arm permits an even, uninterrupted flow of the sound waves with the natural, gradual increase in their volume, so absolutely essential to faithful reproduction.

Mechanical Superiority of the Vitanola Is Not Surpassed by Its Cabinet Work

To find a Vitanola in your home is to find a piece of furniture in rich, rare good taste, the product of master cabinet makers. Look at the artistic lines of any of the six models we can feature—see how they will harmonize with the select surrounding of the well appointed house—see how staunchly and solidly they are built, how carefully they are polished and finished—how splendidly the carving is done—and please note that on the Vitanola the carving is not "applied" but solidly done—a delight to any room.

An Opportunity One Can Hardly Hope to See Repeated

For even though the downward revision of prices reaches the phonograph field and prices are reduced, they can never be reduced to equal the sensationally low prices that are possible here tomorrow. The power of Casn exemplified as it is day in and day out in practically every line of merchandise in this Great Cash Establisnment, another object lesson in "having and holding" that enables the thrifty Home Furnisher to have the choicest and best at a small outlay

Study the Vitanola---and the More You Do the More Strikingly Low Will These Prices Seem, for It Is Truly a Mechanically Perfect Machine, and Here Now Priced in the Most Extraordinary Manner---Buy Now for Christmas Delivery---Seventh Floor

MOTORDOM

Traffic Manager Wanted for Huge Highway Bureau

Routing of State Motors Demands Immediate Attention

BY J. L. JENKINS.

THE people of Illinois have bought and paid for a 4,500 mile high speed transportation system without giving a thought or a dollar to its successful operation.

No railroad in the state can boast of a near approach to the actual mileage or one-half the number of patrons directly served by the newly constructed or recognized federal aid and bond issue highways; but no railroad, no matter how small, would attempt to carry passengers or freight without the services of a traffic manager and operating department.

Lack of this vital necessity in the rapidly developing highway transportation systems of both state and nation—where 8,000,000 cars already form the "rolling stock" and more than 200,000 miles of recognized main roads form the rights of way—has been brought close home to millions of automobile drivers in the last few months. They have been forced to travel over their own roads, bought and maintained by their own money, without a single official "dispatcher" to guide them, without a block signal to protect them and without a definite idea of what would greet them around the next turn in the highway.

Their "operating department" has consisted entirely of maps purchased from sources outside of the highway organization, the advice given by bureaus unequipped to report actual conditions of roads in their own townships alone and the recommendations made by commercial agencies whose information, no matter how carefully compiled, is months behind the constant highway changes and road failures.

Highway authorities are slowly being forced into action on the operation needs of their lines through sheer self defense. With the close of the touring season, county, state, and national officials have been deluged with a flood of letters, telephone and personal inquiries from highway routing bureaus, map makers and logging agencies, all demanding to know how they can learn the condition of roads.

The answer is, invariably, "You can't! Your assuming to take this burden is splendid, but it's also funny. The only way possible now to give people information about exact condition of the roads is to drive over them and see for yourself."

During the summer months THE TRIBUNE'S touring bureau has answered, to the best of its knowledge, more than 12,000 inquiries concerning specific routes and automobile roads and thousands of additional inquiries about touring generally. The only exact information that the bureau has been able to get during the period lay in 12,000 miles recorded on the speedometer of its pathfinding car, miles covered and examined each week before the publication of "Tribune Tour" maps and highway logs, in constant investigation of county and state roads and in a 4,000 mile swing through the west. For the rest, second hand information had to be collected from trails organizations, each boosting its own particular highway; state superintendents, engineers and county officials, some loath to tell of bad road conditions; other routing bureaus, tourists fresh from the roads in question, and correspondents. Yet inquiries embraced roads from Maine to California and desired exact pictures of what drivers were going to find along 200,000 miles of highway, the kind of necessary information that cannot be furnished by the biggest and best organized railroad, mile for mile along its line.

Good roads leaders estimate that an expenditure of nearly $200,000 will be required in Illinois alone for the organization of an efficient state routing bureau that could meet the operation needs of its road system. They estimate, conservatively, that there are 5,000 miles of important and heavily traveled roads in the state and that any truthful report on their exact condition would require the patrolling of every mile at least once every two weeks. Thirty cars, twenty for constant driving and ten in reserve, and twenty drivers would be needed for the work of patrolling the first season, while thirty additional clerks, draftsmen, and executives should be able to handle the making and revising of road maps and distribution of information. In other words, the "dispatching" of some 600,000 Illinois automobiles and a varying number of visiting cars. They believe that until each state has organized a new department of this kind, each working in coöperation with all other states, highway transportation will continue to be the same gamble that it is today.

Funds for the establishment and operation of a state routing department may be asked of the legislature in connection with the $1,000,000 appropriation needed for the patrol, maintenance, and marking of all roads in the Illinois state aid system. The organization may not be as elaborate as that advanced as an illustration of the ideal highway "operation department," but leaders agree that Illinois should supplement its hard road building achievement of 1920 by setting an operation example for the country.

Record.

The dirigible Zodiac, stationed at Langley field, Va., is engaged in the work of carrying officers and enlisted men for training purposes, several flights being made daily. During recent flights a total of seventeen passengers has been lifted each flight in the big airship besides many hundreds of pounds of ballast. This is the largest number of passengers carried by a dirigible in the United States.

Motors in Wings.

From Germany comes the news that a huge monoplane, capable of carrying eighteen passengers, has been designed by Ingenieur Rohrback and constructed in the Staeken factory. Four motors are installed in the wings of the ship—the first time the thick chord of the German monoplane wings has been so utilized.

NEWS OF THE NEW

A. BERTMAN, 2201 Loomis street, has brought into production an interesting adjunct to the tool family in the "Utilitool," and ordinary seeming pair of pliers which, when properly set by simple adjustments, perform fifteen distinct tool functions.

The device, produced new in one Waukegan plant, can be adapted through the use of set screws and reversal of parts to instant use as: Pliers, full strength pliers, pipe gripper, small pipe wrench, wire cutter, pinchers, chain wrench, nail, staple, and tack puller, cutter, monkey wrench, screwdriver, and bolt gripper. The handles are adapted to use as tire removers.

Safety Steering Gear.

The joggling and throwing of front wheels out of line by road obstacles and the loss of steering wheel control when ruts jerk the wheel out of the driver's hands, are guarded against in a new improved steering gear patent now under construction by the Marceau Safety Steering Gear company of Fairbury, Ill.

The improvement allows the steering road wheels to operate independent of one another. There is no direct connection between them through their steering arms. The movement imparted to them by the hand steering wheel and column is transmitted by independent connections through an irreversible gearing. Practical experiments have shown that the new gear in operation on a rough road keeps the wheels permanently in line and allows them to climb diagonal ruts, car tracks, and other road obstructions without throwing the car out of its direct track and without affecting the hand steering wheel.

Automatic Gear Shift.

Enlarged distribution is the object of an educational campaign set under way by the United States Auto Gear Shift company of Eau Claire, Wis., manufacturers of the new Laursen shift. Continued expeciments and improvements on the invention and its installation on many cars for practical use has resulted in numerous improvements in this year's product. The shift works automatically through a heavy spring, which is controlled by the foot clutch pedal. The gear control has been installed in a quadrant attached just below the steering wheel and connected by the device itself, a small metal box lying just below the floor boards. The hand shift lever is entirely removed from the car when the new device is installed. This automatic shift allows the pre-selection of gears by the driver, who controls his car by setting the hand lever at the desired speed, first, second, high, or reverse and shifts gears simply by pushing in and reëngaging his foot clutch. The device has been found practical by a number of Chicago drivers.

The Public Obeyed.

A style change that amounts to a mechanical revolution in the Pierce-Arrow establishment is to be observed in the 1921 models newly demonstrated in Chicago. After years of standard production in which the right hand drive was as much a part of the Pierce-Arrow car as its rear wheels, the new model has arrived quietly, with left hand drive, disc clutch, and center control among its features.

"The factory has simply bowed to a public wish," is the explanation for the change given by the Chicago dealer. "Ninety-nine per cent of the automobile drivers want the left hand drive. It is a matter of driving education."

The new model carries an entirely new body design. It is lower and the suspension has been changed to meet changed operating conditions. The manufacturer has discontined making the long established 38 and 48 horse power motor and has concentrated production in the present 1921 model.

Germany Protests.

A protest from the German government against the interpretation placed by the aeronautical interallied commission of control upon that article of the treaty of Versailles which applies to the disposition of all aeronautical material in Germany has reached that body. The particular point protested is the inclusion of private aeronautical material under the interpretation as outlined by the commission.

Careful Does It.

Despite the steep and crooked roads through the Yellowstone National park, over which no less than 10,000 privately owned motor cars toured this year, ten accidents have been reported, only two of which were of a serious nature.

Wages of War.

The shortest taxi ride in Berlin costs $5.

MOTORDOM

Foreign Fields Shatter Fear of Gasoline Famine

Motorist Demands Less Kerosene in His Fuel Supply

BY HIGH SPEED.

Here is another story about gasoline from a motorist's point of view. Lower gasoline prices, based on market readjustment and the usual winter curtailment in demand, were predicted in the first report. This one indulges in a little gossip about the future fuel supply and the need for co-operation between oil men and motor car builders.

THE world's supply of gasoline is inexhaustible so far as the present generation of motor car owners, their children and grandchildren are concerned. Numerous cheerful authorities in the oil trade itself go so far as to predict that the supply will meet the increasing needs of a thousand years to come and that it will be limited only by the degree of aggressiveness and commercial freedom shown in the development of vast fields in every part of the world.

In this, the practical producers contradict the forecasts of sundry scientists who have seen certain exhaustion in the unprecedented growth of the fuel oil demand by pointing to the scores of new and untouched fields discovered in the last year alone.

Thomas A. O'Donnell, president of the American Petroleum institute, is authority for the statement that there are vast oil producing areas in all parts of the world "scarcely scratched," as yet and sufficient in resources to meet the requirements of many generations. Among the many new and practically undeveloped fields that have interested the industry lately is a mighty territory discovered in northern Canada, where one well is producing 1,500 to 1,800 barrels a day. The Imperial Oil company declares that this is the biggest field in the world and adds that it will take $50,000,000 to install pipe lines there. South America is another potential source of limitless supply with new oil discoveries reported from Brazil, the Argentine, Colombia, Venezuela, Equador, and Peru. Russia has like potentialities and it is estimated that 200,000 barrels a day can be produced for 100 years to come from western shale deposits in the United States.

The chief interest among industrial leaders at present seems to lie in the development of these foreign fields and in their protection from monopoly threatened by foreign governments and from threatened destructive regulation. The trade estimates conservatively that the world consumption which took 327,000,000 barrels in 1910 and 615,000,000 barrels this year, will call for 700,000,000 barrels in 1921. It also estimates that the United States is and has been supplying 70 per cent of this world's supply and warns that Uncle Sam is spending his petroleum wealth rather recklessly and can reasonably look to outside fields to aid in the future.

Late reports show that the daily output of United States oil wells for last August reached one and one-fourth million barrels, while the daily consumption rose to one and five-eighths million barrels, the three-eighths million barrels deficit being made up by imports from Mexico. They also show that of the 8,000,000,000 barrels consumed by the world in the last sixty years, 5,000,000,000 have come from United States fields.

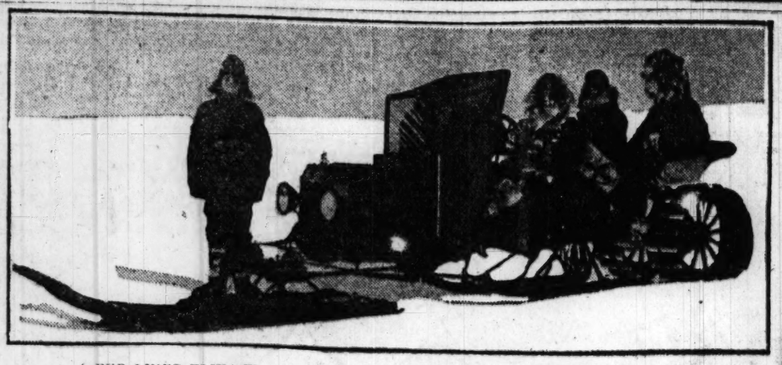
It is the conservation of Uncle Sam's own future oil supply that has resulted in this season's big campaign to reduce the waste through evaporation of oil run through the pipe lines and to educate all motorists in the proper carburetion of their gasoline.

C. F. Kettering of the General Motors company spoke for all automobile owners recently when he accused the entire petroleum industry of failing to keep faith with motorists and told oil leaders that they have brought adverse public opinion on themselves.

"You started the gasoline business," he told delegates at a national oil convention, "by making kerosene, and then you had some government regulations to keep you from putting a lot of gasoline into the kerosene and blowing up the kitchen lamp. Then the internal combustion engine came along and took the by-product away from you, but they have never passed a rule the other way—to keep you from putting the kerosene into the gasoline. I am willing to bet there is not a producer in this organization who uses in his own car the same stuff that he sells. There are thousands of automobiles being laid up this winter because your fuel won't start them, and we in the automotive industry find that our most serious problem lies in making motors to fit the fuel they have to burn."

The motor representative added that until oil producers and motor manufacturers get together in real cooperative understanding there can be no hope of getting maximum power from motor fuel, bringing the motor car to its proper standard of efficiency and developing maximum economy in automobile operation.

Some of the big oil companies have partially met this demand for adaptable fuel through producing summer and winter grades of gasoline, and by experimenting with a view to reducing the carbon deposits in motors.



A FUR LINED FLIV.—The conquest of the Arctic was aided materially recently when an ingenious resident of Nome, Alaska, built this auto sled for far north joy riding. A Ford furnished most of the equipment.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

SUBSTANTIAL cuts in the prices of all models in the Kelly-Springfield truck line have been announced by Hare's Motors, Inc., to supplement the $1,000 reductions made some time ago in that corporation's Locomobile and Mercer passenger car lists. The new prices on Kelly-Springfield chassis now in effect include: $2,900 for the 1½ ton size, reduced from $3,000; $3,250 for the 2½ ton; $4,200 for the 3½ ton; 4,900 for the 5 ton, and $5,100 for the 6 ton model.

In order to take care of increased demands a new service building has been opened at Cottage Grove avenue and Twenty-seventh street. The Hare's salesroom will be moved to 2415 Michigan avenue temporarily.

E. A. Martin has been named general manager of the Stutz Motor Car company of Chicago, distributors for the H. C. S. car. A new two passenger roadster and four passenger coupe are features among 1921 models.

A cross section of a new model Velie touring car, showing every detail in its construction, is an exhibition feature at the R. C. Cook salesroom, Michigan avenue and Twenty-third street. This "X-Ray" demonstration has met with the approval of many motorists during the past few days.

Glen Giles Fisher, crack Chicago bowler, has joined the ranks of motor dealers through the opening of elaborate show and sales rooms for Briscoe and Lexington cars at 339 East Garfield boulevard.

Henry Ford has announced the early opening in Detroit of the Ford Institute of Technology to embrace subjects leading to degrees in mechanical, electrical, and chemical engineering. He will grant monetary scholarships to all students. Instruction will consist in half time class, lecture and laboratory periods and half time actual experience in the Ford plant.

J. L. Whalen has been appointed assistant to the general manager of the Bearings Service company and assigned to the central district with headquarters in Chicago.

Few Body Changes, More Car Economy, In 1921 Fashions

AMERICAN made cars through and through, and American made cars only, will be on exhibition at the Twenty-first National Automobile show, which will be held in the Coliseum and First Regiment armory from Jan. 29 to Feb. 5. With eighty different manufacturers having been allotted space, the exposition will be the biggest that has ever been seen in this country. Several new cars will be on the floors for the first time, and in all about 300 of the latest models in the motor car world will be exhibited.

Further evidence is being given every year that American made cars are fully equal to the high priced importations that are brought to this country.

There will, of course, be improvements noticed in the cars at the coming show, but for the most part these will be of a conservative character. The betterments tend toward efficiency and economy, thus giving a buyer more for his money and at the same time adding to the comforts and conveniences of motoring. No radical changes are expected in body lines, the basic principles of the present proving so popular that they are for the most part retained.

Automobile men are greatly impressed with reports from throughout the country regarding improved conditions in the trade. That these have not been exaggerated is shown by the tendency in the east. At the Jersey City, N. J., show, which was held recently, the number of sales indicated that the automobile buying public had again entered the market, for in one day at the display more than a dozen cars were sold.

Voice of the Motorist

Thumb Print Objection.

Dear Sir: I have been studying for the last few days the new city ordinance of having photographs or thumb prints taken for the purpose of attempting to stop the present theft of automobiles in this city. I am, as yet, at a loss to see in just what way this method is going to stop such thefts, unless such a method was universally put into effect. Under the present proposed plan just say that I live in Evanston and the new method is a city ordinance and being duly executed; I come into the city, am stopped and asked to show my identification of ownership. I have only my certificate and city of Evanston vehicle tax receipt. What, if anything, is going to happen to me—must I go through the necessary routine of giving proper identification other than what I have on my person? Just what would happen?

If I understand the new method correctly, this photograph or thumb print is an addition to the present state certificate of registration, which certificate contained all the information except the photograph or thumb print, necessary to prove ownership.

The only idea I can derive from the new proposed method is to create another office in the city hall by charging a dollar to every car owner for a worthless cause. If this fund would be used for a good purpose, such as caring for the streets and alleys in the city, I am sure no owner would mind donating a dollar a year—I am sure I would not mind at all. Yours very truly, T. H.

What have you planned for the future?

You men who are not earning enough money—you men who are ambitious and looking for a chance to create a paying business of your own.

Get into a business that is making men independent.

Learn Tire Repairing

Stop and consider—there are over Seven Million automobiles swarming over the country—Twenty-eight Million tires in constant use—all these tires are constantly wearing down, blowing out, or receiving injuries of one kind or another.

Where three years ago about one man in twenty owned a car, today it is one in every four.

Every one of these cars must have at least four good tires or it cannot run.

Regardless of the temporary lapse of business in some industries, the tire repair industry is constantly growing, growing, GROWING.

Tires by hundreds of thousands are rolling into tire repair shops, and if you are wide awake—ambitious—we offer you the opportunity of entering this fascinating and profitable business to get your share of this enormous income.

We have three of the best equipped tire repair schools in the world. Our instructors are the highest salaried men in this business. They are men with years of experience in building new tires and repairing old ones. You will be surprised how quickly and thoroughly they can teach you.

We not only give you the advantages of a scientific course of training—a free course in actual tire shop practice—but we help you plan your shop to get the most production for least money—teach you how to get your business and hold it. We stay with you and help you to make good, by giving you advice at any time you need it on matters pertaining to your business. We help you out on difficult repairs until you are absolutely sure of yourself.

We could not afford the costly space in this publication if we were not sure of our ground—if our proposition could not stand a thorough investigation. We have yet to hear of a failure of even one student who is using our method. Your chances of success are 100%.

Our main school is located at 243 N. Crawford Ave., Chicago, our Detroit School is located at 703 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Michigan, and our Akron School is located at 847 S. Main St., Akron, Ohio. If possible visit one of these schools personally and spend a few hours with us looking the proposition over. The schools are open from 8:00 o'clock in the morning until 10:00 in the evening. Saturdays from 8:00 a. m. to 4:00 p. m. If you feel you live too far away to make this call, write to us for our free booklet on tire repairing and tell us what conditions or difficulties, if any, surround your entering the business. If you are really in earnest—if you want to own your own business and be your own boss—we will show you the way. Don't falter or put it off—there is nothing to stop you—you need no special qualifications—higher education or experience—age makes no difference—now is the time.

Let's go!

The Story of an Organization Built to Serve YOU.

A Personal Letter from Thomas Kendall Kelly

In placing this evidence of our complete organization, which is endorsed by wholesalers, manufacturers, banks, and thousands of merchants from coast to coast, before you—the members of the mercantile world—

I feel it is a duty I owe as I have been sending you recommendations monthly for years, telling of the master results we have been securing for merchants of North America for a quarter of a century.

I am repeatedly told by clients, visiting our Home Offices, that if you, and the other 346,412 merchants, with whom our name is a household word, only realized what a complete, enthusiastic, loyal and capable force we have at your service, you and every other aggressive retailer would demand one of my expert sales managers instantly.

In presenting for your choosing, our three hundred and ten advertising, merchandising salesmen, all executives, I know that you will agree with me that positive and creditable results are assured. Because these men have, added to their own broad experience, our University training in intensive merchandising under the personal supervision of our older, associated sales managers, who have been affiliated with me for years, and because their work has brought me 14,973 recommendations from satisfied customers—I submit them to you for your decision.

It was my vision twenty-six years ago and it has been my life-work to originate an organization sufficient to supply the needs of the retail merchants of America, so that I might lighten their burden. I have realized this by amalgamating the highest type of merchandise brains into one great unit for the purpose of rendering a service, to expand trade by honorable, original, clean and brand-new selling methods, that can only be found in Kelly Service—a service available to every merchant in each State of the Union, as well as every Province in the Dominion of Canada.

Today, through our half million dollar responsibility, our more than one million dollar resource, it is a well known fact to the best men in this line and those who wish to enter this profession that the Kelly Sales System is eager at all times to make an attractive remuneration to men qualified to render our service after sufficient training.

Our responsibilty and guarantee of steady employment the year around has created a waiting list of over five hundred applications, from recognized merchandising men all over the country.

Through learning, in my boyhood days, the shoe manufacturing trade as well as my years of experience in textile factories, where I handled the raw products from the time the wool was sheared from the sheep, the cotton taken from the fields, I feel that my education in merchandising is thorough.

THOMAS KENDALL KELLY,
President

Foremost Exponent of Better Merchandising in North America.

Today this ad is appearing in the following:
Des Moines Register, Kansas City Star, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Indianapolis News, Cincinnati Enquirer, Atlanta American, Detroit Free Press, Chicago Tribune, Philadelphia Public Ledger, Baltimore Sun, Boston Globe, New Orleans Item, San Francisco Examiner, Los Angeles Times, Denver Post, Seattle Times, Portland Oregonian, Houston Chronicle.
Canada—Montreal Star, Toronto Globe, Winnipeg Free Press.
It appeared Sunday, Dec. 12, in the Minneapolis Journal, Tribune and St. Paul Pioneer Press.

My calling to the salesmanship profession, in which eighteen of the biggest trade journals of America must think I am successful, by reason of recognition given me in their editorial columns repeatedly, together with fifteen years of actual experience personally conducting successful merchandise sales, I feel that Providence has bestowed a favor upon me which I cannot repay except in one way—and that is, by rendering to you and other merchants 100% sales service by sending you real merchandise sales conductors who have graduated from my thorough, personal training.

This is the type of sales manager I want to send you for your sale. Everything he does in your store will be entirely in keeping with the highest type of advanced merchandising. You will receive a selling campaign that will be a credit to your store and in the minds of the public for fifty miles around, as well as results that you will long and favorably remember.

I would like to have you leave to my judgment — the selection of the right sales manager for your January Sale. You know that it is of the utmost importance to have the usual Kelly successful Service instituted properly and that means more in results than you can anticipate because I can only get your endorsement through rendering you absolute satisfaction, and that I must have.

Just mail me the coupon on the opposite page today, please, and by return mail I will send you full particulars without obligating you, of course.

Frankly yours,

Thomas K Kelly

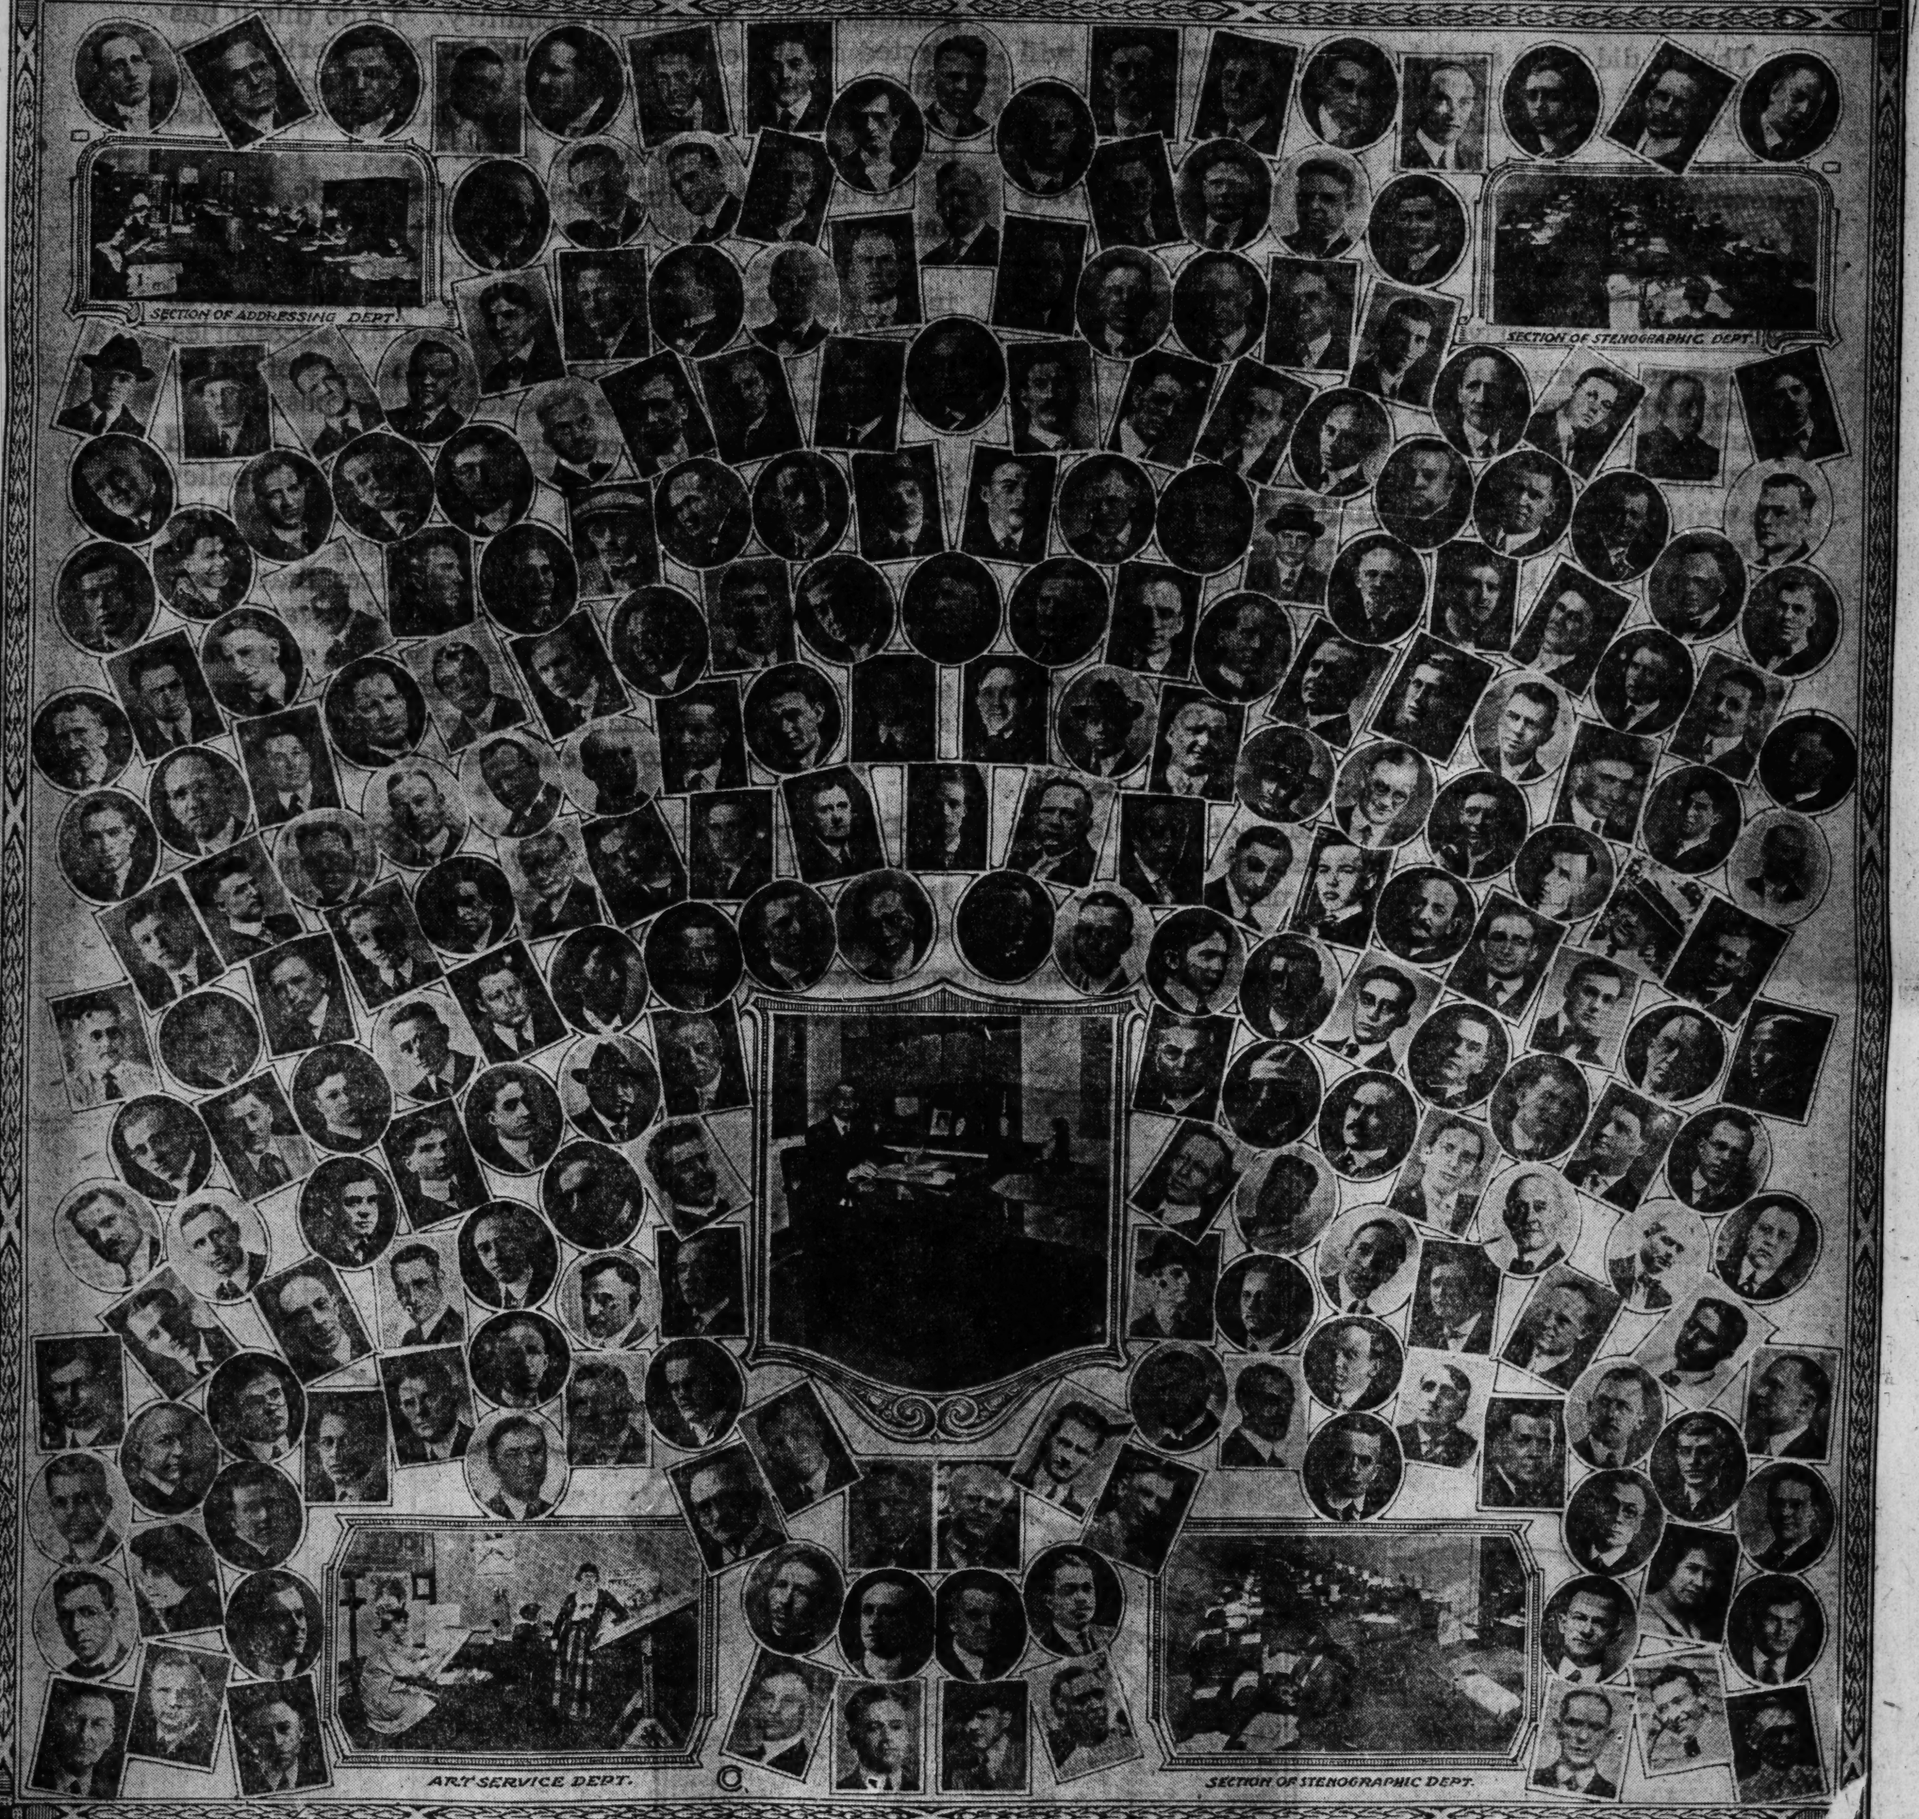
THE T. K. KELLY SALES SYSTEM

THESE ARE THE MEN
THAT BACK UP THE PRINCIPLE OF THIS GREAT ORGANIZATION FOR 1921



Demand Credentials

Because of the fact we are repeatedly told that ever so many salesmen are trading upon the T. K. Kelly Sales System's reputation. Even our old customers are approached constantly by salesmen who have no connection with our Organization, but claim they are associated with our firm, or formerly were employed by us.

There are no former employees who are living today whom we could not have retained had we so desired, as you are well aware that sufficient remuneration would retain them. No compensation is too great for our firm to pay if a salesman has the ability and initiative to render our Service in keeping with our plans and successful selling methods.

It has always been our policy to request and demand that every member of our Organization render 100 per cent Service to retain his position, and that is the only kind of Service we have to deliver you. Regarding men who say they can handle your sale equal to us, let me assure you that we could well afford to make them such attractive offers that they would today be connected with the T. K. Kelly Sales System.

OURS IS A 100 PER CENT SERVICE

To meet the demands of our customers it necessitates One Hundred Forty-three people in the Home Office, among them over Twenty men—specialists in Advertising, Merchandising, Commercial Art and Sales Development—that is besides Three Hundred Ten sales managers who are on the road.

After the termination of your sale, our Home Office furnishes you one year free service. This consists of preparing your newspaper advertising, folders, circulars, dodgers, booklets and illustrations. We also prepare brand new, original merchandising plans, as well as teach your clerks to become better sales-people.

There is no more conclusive proof that we can offer you than the many advertising staffs of big department stores, unquestionably skilled in maintaining a high standard of daily volume, who favor our system for conducting intensified selling campaigns.

Our clients show beyond question by the growth and prosperity of their stores, that, with Kelly Service, it is impossible to have slow moving merchandise or dull trade.

IMMEDIATE RESERVATION VITALLY IMPORTANT

With only Three Hundred Ten expert sales managers to supervise personally each Kelly sale, we cannot distribute this sales staff to all the 346,413 merchants with whom our name is a household word.

It necessitates quick action, as already over a hundred merchants have made reservations with us for next month, and we do want you to have an equal opportunity, so tear off the coupon and send it in immediately.

PAVING THE MOTOR CAR'S WAY

A home-made rubber air bag, with a football tube for a valve—would you believe that such a crude contrivance could have had a far-reaching influence upon the development of the automobile?

That it did have such influence, however, you will readily agree when you know that this homely device was the first pneumatic tire.

The man who made the first practical successful pneumatic was a surgeon, John Boyd Dunlop, then living in Belfast, Ireland. He didn't make it for the automobile, for the good reason that in those days—thirty-two years ago—even the wheezing, coughing old "horseless carriage" had not yet arrived.

Instead he made it for his young son's tricycle, which, with its hard-rubber tires, had an irritating way of cutting up the Dunlop lawn.

When the automobile came, it found the pneumatic tire waiting for it. Also, it found a going Dunlop tire-making organization, producing pneumatics for bicycles, with a reputation known wherever bicycles were used.

Fitting the idea of the pneumatic tire to the requirements of the automobile required a number of important developments. Dunlop quickly recognized this fact and acted upon it. As a result the name Dunlop today is intimately associated with the history of the two principal types of tires—clincher and straight-side.

Today the name Dunlop stands not only for the pioneer of the tire industry but also for a great world-wide institution, with factories in many countries and with selling operations extending around the globe. It stands likewise for one of the few very large growers of rubber and for one of the big producers of cotton fabric.

It is this same Dunlop which is now about to begin manufacturing tires in this country. To do this it has erected on the outskirts of Buffalo, New York, a tire-building community covering a tract of 214 acres. This plant, which will be in operation within a few weeks, has a capacity of 12,000 tires a day.

To help insure its supply of cotton-fabric, Dunlop has also acquired its fifth cotton mill—at Utica, N. Y.

All the production facilities and resources for the making of Dunlop products in America are being devoted to pneumatic and solid tires, tubes and tire accessories. These will be the finest that thirty-two years of manufacturing and world-wide experience make possible.

Moreover, Dunlop products will be made and sold in accord with a distinctive Dunlop policy. This policy is one of partnership with public and trade, which views the marketing of tires as something more than selling merchandise and which recognizes that every party to the transaction is entitled to full reward.

Dunlop tire merchants, therefore, will be more than simply middlemen or go-betweens and Dunlop responsibility for tire-performance will go beyond any stated mileage limitations to the end of a tire's life.

* * *

Dunlop policy contains a number of points of especial interest to tire-merchants. We will be glad to discuss it further with responsible retailers, who may be interested in becoming Dunlop representatives.

OPEN DOOR.

There are no "No Admittance" or "Employees Only" signs over our workroom doors.

You have the right to KNOW what is inside the bedding and upholstery you live with, and in buying Restgood mattresses and upholstery you have the opportunity to know.

We use nothing but the best and cleanest material in our mattresses. We employ only the most skillful workmen and we welcome the closest inspection.

You can come to this factory, select the materials for a mattress or a davenport, or an upholstered chair, and have the piece made to your order at the factory price. Or you can take it over your seat or stand by and watch every step of manufacture, thus insuring exactly what you pay for.

By buying direct from this factory you get superior materials put together by the best workmen in the trade and you save at least one-third the cost of what similar quality will cost you at retail.

We also carry a full line of brass and steel beds, springs, pillows, comforters, and blankets.

MARMON

USED CAR PRICES ARE DOWN TO ROCK BOTTOM.

Never in the history of the automobile industry have we had such rare bargains to offer. Never before have we had such a complete selection of the better known makes to choose from. Practically all models, all types, open and inclosed. Many are newly painted, top and upholstery renewed, parts remodeled, and will compare favorably both in appearance and mechanically with new cars.

PRESENT PRICES SHOW DRASTIC REDUCTIONS.

You can make a substantial saving by buying now. The present low market prices will not continue. Early spring will bring the usual rush for automobiles and prices will gradually advance again. Our counsel is buy now.

TRY BEING YOUR OWN COLUMBUS; FIND THIS PARK

Here's Worth While West Side Exploration.

"When Columbus park is completed it will be one of the most beautiful public grounds in America."—Franc E Gardner, president west park board.

BY AL CHASE.

Unless you use the third rail of the Garfield park branches of the Polly

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS.

L you've probably never seen Columbus park, Chicago's youngest and newest good sized playground. No street car line passes it so you'll have to do a little Columbusing on your own account to find it—but it's worth discovering, and President Gardner's prophecy sounds conservative.

It lies between West Adams street on the north, and the right of way of the "L" and third rail lines on the south, the city limits on the west and Central avenue on the east. It contains 154 acres and was acquired in 1913 from the Catholic Bishop of Chicago. The nearest street car line is the Madison street and the closest "L" station is Austin avenue.

$250,000 Refectory Planned.

The newest thing planned for Columbus park is a $250,000 refectory pavilion and boat landing, shown in the neighboring picture, designed by Architects Chatten & Hammond. It is to face south on the fifteen acre lagoon and will have in addition to big open air verandas a large dance hall and a good sized restaurant. In summer boating will be provided—canoes mostly if landscape architect Jens Jensen's ideas are carried out—with a large concrete pier. In winter 1,000 skaters at a time can be accomodated with locker space.

The restaurant will be open daily—accommodating ninety at one time—and in addition a lunch counter for hungry golfers is planned. Work will start on the refectory early in January, according to Architect Charles H. Hammond and be finished during the summer.

Building a park is slow work, but here are some of the things already accomplished: One of the largest and most beautiful outdoor swimming pools in the world, designed by Mr. Jensen. Adjoining it is a community house with club rooms, hall for movies, shower baths, and a gym. Over a thousand men and women use the showers every Saturday and 2,000 during the winter. From 5,000 to 8,000 swim every week in summer. There are two pools—one deep and one shallow.

Aw! Skinnay, Lissen to This!

And think of this—Sunday swimming is barred! Don't blame the park officials, however. They're for it strong, but pressure is understood to have been brought by certain interests and their wishes were acceded to.

But there'll be Sunday golf—pressure isn't strong enough to stop that. Work has been going on for two years on the nine hole course designed by Expert George O'Neil, with the assistance of "Chick" Evans. It's going to be a sporty course, says Architect Hammond.

Of course there are tennis courts—six ready and twelve more planned, and room for baseball. North of Jackson boulevard the park board has left the ground as nearly natural as possible, and as there are plenty of trees and uncut shrubbery, picnicers have an exceptionally good place for recreation.

Open Air Theater.

Some other park features are a children's wading pool and an outdoor gymnasium. An enormous natural outdoor theater is being made from plans by Mr. Jensen with grass opera chairs for 3,000.

A water course across the stage will enable aquatic pageants to be given.

Up to date about $1,500,000 has been spent on Columbus park. It is going to become one of our best known and most popular parks. Be your own Columbus and discover it. You'll like it.

Y. M. C. A. Hotel to Add 50 Rooms by Moving Laundry

Fifty additional rooms will be added to the Y. M. C. A. hotel at 822 South Wabash avenue as the result of the purchase from the American Railway Express company of the 55x131 property at 12-14 East Ninth street, just west of the L, improved with the building formerly used by the Wells-Fargo company. The reported price was $55,000. The hotel, which accommodates 1,400 guests, is now running 98 per cent of capacity. The laundry will be moved to the building just bought and fifty guest rooms remodeled out of the space left vacant. S. O. Hauser, assistant business manager of the Chicago association, represented the buyer and G. B. Simpson the seller.

"I" SITE NOT LAND ON WEST SIDE.

The trustees of the Y. M. C. A. association have bought another lot adjacent to the West Side branch for future development of that organization. The 24x138 lot on Monroe, 70 feet west of Laflin, was bought from Lovell Johnson [illegible] $6,500.

NEW $1,000,000 STATION TO TAKE PLACE OF 'CANAL'

Chicago's famous old Canal street postal station is to make way for a new $1,000,000 project, to be at the northeast corner of Jefferson and Quincy streets, half a block west of the new Union station. This will in no way interfere with the Chicago Plan commission's contemplated main postoffice and plaza between the Northwestern and Union stations, according to Charles H. Wacker, chairman of the commission.

"The government is going to spend $150,000,000 on new postal facilities in New York," said Mr. Wacker, "so I don't believe Chicago's much needed new postoffice can be delayed much longer. I understand the new Canal station is to be built merely because it can't be accommodated in the new Union station."

Hub of Rail Center.

The new Canal station will be in the hub of the world's greatest transportation center, 100 feet from the new Union station and three blocks from the Northwestern terminal.

Some idea of the size of the Canal station's business is gathered when it is learned that 44,801,274 pieces of mail were received between June 1 and Nov. 30, and 6,834,267 pieces dispatched.

The securing of a new Canal station is understood to be due largely to the efforts of the following postoffice officials: Rush D. Simmons, inspector in charge; Robert B. Mundelle, post office inspector, and Gen. LeRoy T. Steward, superintendent of city delivery.

Alfred L. Aischuler is the architect. Henry M. Goldsmith represented the purchasers of the land and Moses, Rosenthal & Kennedy represented the sellers.

$700,000 Loan.

The Madison and Kedzie State bank and the Investors' Securities corporation, affiliated institutions, have made a first mortgage bond issue loan of $700,000 at 7 per cent, maturing three to ten years, to Harry M. Smith and Bertram W Frank, who have purchased from E. V. Price & Co. the land, 83x213, and will start immediately the construction of a four story building. The building, land, and equipment will represent an investment of over $1,000,000.

The building has been leased to the government for twenty years at $125,000 a year, or $2,500,000 for the term. This is not the regulation government lease, but is given to the owners without the usual cancellation clause.

Palmer Estate Puts 15 Residences on Market

Aldis J. Browne of Ross & Co., agents for the Palmer estate, says fifteen of its houses have been offered for sale recently. They are on Ritchie place, Division street, Bellevue place, and Elm street. No Michigan avenue houses have been offered so far. A report recently was current that one hundred Palmer estate houses were to be sold.

"The trustees have authorized the sale of a few and we are offering them to people now in possession," said Mr. Browne.

Realty Convention to Use Auditorium for Four Days

Chicago is fast getting ready for the big realty event—the annual convention of National Association of Real Estate Boards. Yesterday a four day lease on the Auditorium was signed, calling for the use of that big theater on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, July 12, 13, 14 and 15. It's going to be the biggest business man's convention ever held, according to Secretary Herbert A. Cole of the Chicago Real Estate board.

Plan $1,900,000 Flats for State Capitol Employes

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 18.—Secretary of State Emmerson has issued articles of incorporation to the Sheridan Apartment Hotel company and the Apartment Securities corporation, which plans to erect a $1,900,000 apartment hotel to cater almost exclusively to state house officials and employes. Chicago capital is backing the concern. E. R. Davy, Loan Wenters, and D. W. Newton were the incorporators.

Mrs. Ruff Sells Apartment Building for $197,500

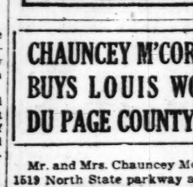
One of Rogers Park's largest flat buildings has been sold by Mrs. Clara M. Ruff, widow of the late Frank Ruff, recently killed, for a reported $197,500, subject to $112,000, to Bert Schreiber, S. Charles Nudelman, and Charles J. Liederman. The building is at 1106-18 Pratt boulevard and contains thirty apartments. Henry H. Tank, agent, represented all parties.

CHICAGOANS MAKE PHILADELPHIA LEASE.

Mark Levy & Bro. report closing a lease in Philadelphia for Trutz Warner, hatter, for ten years at a term rental of $350,000. The premises are at 1309-11 Market street, opposite Wanamaker's, and from a real estate standpoint is understood to be the highest priced property in the City of Brotherly Love.

CHAUNCEY M'CORMICK BUYS LOUIS WOLFF'S DU PAGE COUNTY FARM

Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick of 1519 North State parkway are the newest addition to Wheaton's gold coast farm colony, surrounding the Chicago Golf club. They have purchased the 275 acre property of Louis Wolff, northeast of the intersection of the Butterfield and the Winfield-Warrenville roads, for $90,000. There is a twenty-room brick residence, built several years ago by Frank S. Gorton. The third rail interurban line skirts the east boundary of the farm, with a station near Butterfield road.



MRS. CHAUNCEY M. CORMICK [Moffett Photo.]

The new owners are now in Paris, where Mr. McCormick is representing the Haskell-Barker Car company. They will make Du Page county their summer home when in Chicago. In addition to their town house in North State parkway they have a winter home in Florida, on the east coast. Mrs. McCormick was Miss Marion Deering.

Mr. and Mrs. Wolff will spend the winter at the newly opened Webster hotel. Mr. Wolff, formerly with the Wolff Manufacturing company, is now with the Crane company.

TRAY TOTING TO SUPPLANT ARM CHAIR SERVICE

Is the arm chair dairy lunch going to be pushed into the background of restaurant history by the ever increasing popularity of the serve yourself cafeteria? It looks that way with the newly formed Charles Weeghman company at least.

Yesterday Albert Weeghman, vice president of the new $5,000,000 company, announced that two of the present Weeghman one arm eateries are going to be made over into modern cafeterias as fast as Architect John Archibald Armstrong's plans can be carried out. Work will start at once remodeling the dairy lunch at 159 West Madison street, opposite the Hotel La Salle. It will be made 150 feet deep and will have a mezzanine floor at a cost of about $25,000.

"Whether we turn all our old and prospective lunchrooms into cafeterias will depend considerably on how the pubic likes our remodeled place at the southeast corner of Wabash and Monroe," said Mr. Weeghman. "It's going to be a test. The result will affect our chain of coast to coast eating places. We'll have fifty open by this time next year, at any rate, any way."

The Weeghman company has purchased the [illegible] cafeteria at 21-23 [illegible] from Albert Weeghman for a reported $60,000 and will open tomorrow as "Weeghman's." Several new Chicago Weeghman eating places are to be announced shortly.

$95,000 Paid for Former Weir & Craig Foundry

William B. McIlvaine has purchased from Robert Weir the foundry property at the northeast corner of Wallace street and Twenty-fourth place 221x133, formerly used by the Weir & Craig foundry, for an indicated $95,000, subject to $10,000. Several tenant firms occupy the buildings.

Absentee Management Bad.

Absentee landlordism is admitted by all to be bad for land and Chicago is suffering from it. The golden crops raised on many of the acres of its loop district go to embellish the magnificence of country estates in England and to stimulate the gayety of social life in New York.

Much more serious is the absentee ownership of factories and railways. The local heads of many such enterprises—of nearly all the great ones—get their orders from New York or London from men who are in ignorance of local conditions. The result is frequently bad for employés and patrons and sometimes bad for the enterprises.

What is the remedy? There is no immediate cure, but the condition can be alleviated gradually if Chicago investors will invest more of their money at home and try to keep the control of local properties at home. Diversified investment is always advisable, but if a large proportion of each person's funds is invested near home the result will be good for both the individual and the community.

Equipment Trusts.

M. J., Evansville, Ind.—Equipment trusts yielding 7 per cent are a safe investment if they are issued by reasonably prosperous roads. How these companies can pay 7 per cent interest out of a 5½ per cent return on the value of their property is a problem for them and the interstate commission to solve. They will have to pay the interest on equipment trusts whatever may happen because they cannot operate at all without equipment.

Brief Answers.

N. C. D., Delmar, Ia.—The Arcadia Trailer corporation says it has turned out nearly $500,000 worth of auto trailers this year. It has issued $225,000 of preferred stock and says it is covering the dividend twice over. This is a new business venture.

W. G. K.—The Interstate Iron and Steel company issues annual reports only. Last year it had $1,867,700 of preferred stock and $4,000,000 of common, and earned 7 per cent on the latter. A report for 1920 will be issued next February.

Park Board Offers Aid in Saving Old Field Museum

George W Maher, chairman of the Municipal Art and Town Planning committee of the Illinois Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, reported at the last meeting of that body that the south park commissioners have offered to [illegible] the original Field museum in Jackson park by furnishing the services of their engineers and officers in helping obtain estimates on the cost of rehabilitation.

An expert is now working under the direction of Architect D. H. Burnham in securing estimates. The cost—$500—is being jointly paid by the Illinois chapter and the Illinois Society of Architects.

The south park commissioners also have promised not to wreck the building for at least twelve months—thus giving the architects one year in which to complete their plans to rehabilitate the world famous structure and save it for Chicago.

HAITI, GLOWING IN TROPIC SEA, ISLE OF SQUALOR

First Delights the Eyes, Then Shocks Nose.

BY EYE WITNESS.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti, Dec. 1.—(By mail.)—There is some tradition—not, however, to be verified in the writings of Columbus—that when Queen Isabella asked the admiral what Porto Rico was like the triumphant man crumpled a sheet of paper in his hand and, letting it fall upon the council table, exclaimed, "Your majesty, it looks just like that."

If he had tossed a bolt of stiff green silk on to the table, letting it unroll and pile up as it fell, he would have given the queen precisely the aspect of the superb north coast of Haiti in the region of Cape Haitien, where on Christmas eve, 1492, he lost his flagship because the steersman of the Santa Maria gave the helm in charge to one of the ship boys and went below to sleep.

"Every Prospect Pleases."

It is an incomparable green on which the eyes of the traveler rest on the November morning that brings him his first view of the island of Haiti—a greenness so rich, so vivid, so deep, as to seem no longer a color, but a kind of voice shouting abundance and fecundity across the blue waters.

Fix that picture well in your memory for, as it is your first, so it will ever be your loveliest impression of Haiti. In half an hour squalor and rags and insane squalling and gutters crusted with green mold, and a market place strewn with repulsive foods and heavy with the odor of tropic offal and tropic humanity will have blurred your beautiful first impression and made sad your heart.

But meanwhile from the ship's side! Over all the long line of white crested waves crawling to the foot of brown promontories, and over all the green rampart of mountains behind, pours sunlight of a white, blazing brightness that makes it uncomfortable to focus the eyes on a white building a quarter of a mile away.

Sweat of Toiling Earth.

Watery clouds drift over the higher peaks. Half an hour after sunset they will release a brief torrential downpour and the earth will steam. But now a voluptuous breeze stirs.

A mile or two to the left, as you face the town of Cape Haitien from the ship's side, a white cross rises against the rampart of green.

The smoke of the charcoal burners' fires floats vaguely around it. A mile or two to the right rises another white cross. Between the two crosses lies the northern metropolis of Haiti, breeder of revolutions, and capital, containing the most truculent and most restless inhabitants of the island. When you capture Cape Haitien you are well on your way to be president of the country, unless, like some captors of the city, you prefer to be king or emperor.

Coals on Shabby Hearth.

Squat and ramshackle, narrow streeted and very cobbly, Cape Haitien is spread out on the sloping flats beneath the green rampart of mountains. Above it gleam the red roofs of villas clinging to the mountain side and in this sunlight the red roofs shine like live coals. At nightfall the fires of the charcoal burners shine out with the same red. Far to the left, aloof from the villas, and the finest of them all, rises the bishop's white palace, terraced, pillared, porticoed.

Now for disillusion.

You descend the ship's side and intrust yourself to screaming black boatmen who scream at each other, at you, at the oars, at the water. Direction, objurgation, encouragement plus a torrent of nothings all are let loose in creole patois. Sweat streams down the black faces. Voices grow hoarse with screaming, but the clamor never ceases. The men seem crazed. They are not.

Just Noisy Happiness.

This vehemence means nothing desperate. It is the Haitian boatman's and wharfman's way of demonstrating his joy in the drama of his daily life. His volubility is miraculous, though I have been told that his creole vocabulary contains only about fifty words. But in the play-acting of rage, grief, disappointment he is better than Bernhardt—and much the same.

Throwing a bunch of lighted firecrackers into a cage of wildcats might, I think, produce the same effect of noise. One thing will silence this clamor of the boatmen. That is to give them the handful of used safety blades you were about to throw into the sea. After the squeals of ecstasy have subsided they seek the bows of their boats in pairs and, squatting there, begin the removal of each others' beards, using no lather and scraping each others' cheeks and throats with the bare blades.

Tropics and Marines Clash.

The scene on shore is a medley of tropic sluggishness and of the rush and clamor of the daily comings and goings of a northern army of occupation. Autos run by soldiers and occupied by officers roar through the narrow streets and around the sharp turns at a speed which would be penalized in the most reckless of northern communities.

Women, children, dogs, donkeys, scurry from the path of the oncoming machine and as you watch it rush by you have seen two things deserving record. You have seen the only condition short of the cry "The Cacoes are coming" that will make Haitian man or beast hurry, and by the same token you have seen one of the lesser but by no means negligible causes why, in spite of its good works, the occupation is disliked.

The Lot of the Despised.

This racing through a man's town at top speed is no good way to reconcile a subject people that knows it is subject, and is frequently told that it is inferior, to either your domination or your superiority.

As we pass along a narrow street a well meaning but ill advised American tosses some Haitian pewter money to an ebony colossus in rags whom he has just snapshotted. Not in the gift but in the ungracious manner of the giving lies the offense. A Haitian of the upper class passing by takes it all in and says loudly to the ebony colossus, "Why do you let them make a fool of you?"

FOR THE HOSPITAL KIDS

Julia Brazel (at left) and Evelyn Nothacker aiding the Y. W. C. A. plans for Christmas cheer for children in county hospital and others.

"WELL," said the little bobbed hair girl, cutting carefully around the edges of a pictured fuzzy puppy dog, "I bet the kids in the hospital won't get any more fun out of this scrap book than I'm getting."

She was sitting at a big table in the girls' workroom of the Y. W. C. A. at 59 East Monroe with a crowd of other girls who for several weeks have been spending part of their noon hours making dolls and scrap books for the children in the county hospital. They were doing their bit in the city-wide Christmas plans of the Y. W. C. A.

FOR the Holiday Season nothing is quite so appropriate as music. With a Symphonola in your home you always will have splendid entertainment for old and young—for family and visiting friends. With magic touch this wonderful instrument brings right before you the sweetest singers of all the world, the choicest music, the great dramas of the stage. The young people will welcome it for delightful home dancing.

LET US SEND YOU A SYMPHONOLA ON 30 DAYS' FREE TRIAL

Into thousands of homes the Symphonola will bring gladness this year. Let it brighten your home, too. On our guarantee you are to keep and play the Symphonola for 30 days, then if you find it is not exactly as described, return it at our expense.

Don't Send a Penny—Just fill out Order Blank at bottom of page, then mail or bring it to us. The Symphonola will be delivered AT ONCE, or held till Christmas if you prefer.

The Symphonola

THIS great home entertainer, enjoyed in tens of thousands of homes where it has gone the past 8 years, is not only a beautiful musical instrument of pure, rich tone, but also serves as a handsome ornament in the home. We challenge comparison in tone, finish and price with any phonograph on the market. You will get no more beautiful instrument, and the tone will be no better, if you should pay 20 to 50 per cent more than our price.

Sides and tops of Symphonola have beautiful veneer panels, with corner posts and moldings of genuine solid Mahogany, Fumed Oak or selected American Walnut, finished with 2 coats of varnish, dull-rubbed satin finish. All exposed metal parts in Styles E and F are heavily plated with real 24-karat gold, and richly nickel-plated in Styles C and D.

PLAYS ALL MAKES OF DISC RECORDS

In a moment the Symphonola may be adjusted to play any type of disc record. This is a feature of great importance, allowing you to play any music you may wish to hear. It plays all selections as they should be played. The Symphonola Positive Tone Control permits you to regulate volume of sound and interpret music to suit your own taste without smothering the tone.

6 Records Free—If your order Symphonola NOW we will include 6 double-faced Symphonola Records—12 selections—of our choice.
